BALFOUR QUITS HIS LEADERSHIP

Famous Unionist Statesman Announces His Resignation as Chief of His Party.

DUE TO ATTACKS ON HIM

Ill Health Ostensible Reason, but Party Bickerings Regarded as Real Cause.

LONG LIKELY TO SUCCEED

Austen Chamberlain, Sir Edward Carson, and F. E. Smith Also Spoken Of —Caucus Called for Monday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 9. — The resignation by the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour of the leadership of the Unionist Party, which he announced yesterday, is an event of prime importance not only from a party point of view, but as a fact in the national annals.

With the single exception of Pitt, Mr. Balfour has been leader of the House of Commons longer than any other man in Parliamentary history, and the qualities he has displayed have won for him the universal tribute of being the first parliamentarian in the first parliamentary nation of the world. His resignation is to his party, as Viscount Midleton says, an almost irreparable loss, and spokesmen of all parties agree that his withdrawal will leave a great gap. He is not retiring from Parliament, but his attendance there will presumably be limited. In the present session he has only twice been present at debates.

In view of the many attacks which had recently been made upon Mr. Balfour's leadership from within his own party, it is only to be expected that suggestions should be made that his resignation was prompted by the Halsbury schism. Mr. Balfour's own words in announcing his retirement are to the effect that it is due solely to reasons of health. He has been advised by his medical attendants not to submit himself to the strain of leading his party during the next session of Parliament, when the introduction of a Home Rule bill and other controversial measures, such as the promised "one man one vote" bill, may demand services of an unusually strenuous nature. He has been advised also by the same authorities that he must not look forward to accepting a position of responsibility in any future Conservative administration.

There are some passages in the speech Mr. Balfour made yesterday which are of worldwide interest because of their human note. "You may say," he said, "I am not yet 64, and that I ought to have, if health spared me, many years of active life before me. About that no man can say.

"Let me make a single observation. I desire to leave the position of heavy responsibility which I hold before I can be suspected of suffering from the most insidious of all diseases — a disease which comes upon those who, without losing their health or their intellect, nevertheless get somewhat petrified in the old courses which they have pursued; whose authority grows because they have been long in the public service or have been great men of science, or business, or whatever it may be, but who cannot deal with the great problems which, in this changing world, are perpetually arising, with all the freshness and elasticity really desirable in those who have the conduct of great concerns.

"No man ever knows in himself when that moment has come. A man knows he is ill. A man may even know when his memory begins to fail, or some other obvious sign of decay is pressed on his vision. But the sort of malady of which I am speaking may attack people in the prime of life, in the prime of intellectual vigor, as long as that intellectual vigor is exercised on the old lines. But, nevertheless, although they may retain apparently all the powers both of brain and limb which they had in the prime of life, they are less capable of adapting themselves to the changing circumstances of life than those who are of less authority because younger, and yet more capable, also because younger.

"I am vain enough to hope that I have not reached that yet, but I should be miserable if I ran the margin fine, and nothing, I think, would be more terrible for me than to realize that, while people were looking to you more than ever owing to your lengthening experience or leadership, you have not got the keenness or alertness which must go with increasing years adequately to meet the demands made on it."

Mr. Balfour had an audience of King George before making his announcement. In the evening he left London for the country, and will shortly go to the Continent.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The Unionist party is to swap horses while crossing the Home Rule stream. The Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, at an emergency meet-

VANIMAN FLIGHT DELAYED.

Attempt to Cross Atlantic in Airship May Be Deferred Till Spring.

After a conference between Melvin Vaniman, builder of the airship Akron, in which he hopes to cross the Atlantic, and F. A. Seiberling, his financial backer, who came on from Akron, Ohio, especially to hold a consultation over the misadventure of last Saturday's trial flight, it was announced last night that the proposed voyage to Europe would probably be postponed until next season.

Mr. Seiberling came to this city after his talk with Vaniman at Atlantic City. He had prepared a statement of his intentions to give up the trip for this season, but after giving copies of it to reporters at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, he said that he had decided to modify it materially.

"The situation is this," said he. "I found Vaniman very much concerned because he thought he would have to empty the balloon bag and refill it, and because he was convinced he needed a third motor, both of which items will be rather expensive. He was anxious to 'make good' from his standpoint by risking himself and his enterprise on the equipment provided. This I would not listen to. I telegraphed an order at once for a new motor, and for sulphuric acid enough to refill the bag. All I want to know is that Vaniman has had every chance to make a perfect ship. Then it is up to him to do as he chooses.

"I would hate to think of him running out to sea in Winter and encountering a sleet storm which would simply load his balloon down with ice until it sank. For that reason I advise trial trips for this Fall, to be followed by the making of every single alteration suggested by the experiences of each trip. Then, with the coming of Spring the expedition will be in a much better shape to win its final goal.

"I told Vaniman I was behind him to stick and not to worry the least bit about making experiments and ordering alterations. I consider it would be the grandest laurel our country can attain to be the first to open the air lanes to Europe. I have a vision of a sleet storm ahead of me as one disquieting influence, but, on the other hand, there is that vision of the German ship, hopeful of coming across along the equatorial trade winds. I want our ship to make the journey first, and I expect Vaniman will be ready within ten days to be governed by the circumstances as they then appeal to him."

HONOR HOLYOKE'S FOUNDER.

President Faunce of Brown Speaks at Seminary's 75th Anniversary.

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass., Nov. 8.—Exercises were held in Mary Lyon Chapel to-day in observance of Founder's Day, and tribute was paid to the memory of the woman who founded Mount Holyoke Seminary seventy-five years ago.

The procession entered the chapel in several sections, the chief marshal being Miss Louise B. Wallace, Associate Professor of Zoology. The seniors, in academic caps and gowns, were marshaled by Edith White of Springfield, President of the Students' League, and L. Jeanette Simmons of Rockland, Me. Faculty and trustees followed with Miss Mary Emma Woolley, President of the college, and the speaker of the day, President William H. P. Faunce of Brown University. During the exercises there were selections by the vested choir of 200 voices.

President Faunce spoke on "Educational Problems of To-Day." He said in part: "While our great cities are plunging into novel experiments with vocational schools and many Superintendents are pouring ridicule upon the older schools, our educational thinkers are looking on with regret, knowing that a separation between cultural and vocational schools means a stratification of society, such as Germany approves but America has never been able to tolerate."

CONSTABLE AIDS ELOPERS.

Winsted Police Later Arrest Them—Released on Showing Marriage Lines.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Nov. 8.—While a possé of Norfolk and Winsted officers were looking for Michael Latina, 24, and Nicolina Decahria, 14, who had eloped from Norfolk, Constable Nathanial Cordana of Winsted, was piloting the runaways in an automobile in search of a minister to wed them. Arriving in Sandisfield, just across the State line, they induced Town Clerk Wesley Clark to leave a funeral service in the Congregational Church to issue a marriage license. The bride gave her age as 18, but on account of her youthful appearance neither of the two clergymen who had just officiated at the funeral would tie the knot.

The couple, chaperoned by Constable Cordana, were then driven in the auto to New Marlborough, eight miles distant, where, after another license had been obtained, the girl again giving her age as 18, the Rev. Mr. Spooner performed the marriage ceremony, Constable Cordana acting as a witness. Upon their return to Winsted Chief of Police Wheeler took the couple into custody, but when they produced a marriage certificate he released them.

CHOPS HAND ALMOST OFF.

Broker, Insane from Worry, Uses Axe While in a Taxicab.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 8.—George R. Andrews, 28 years old, a real estate broker, leaped from a taxicab to-day and ran into a drug store at Eleventh Street and Grand Avenue.

"Call Dr. Ayres!" he cried. "My hand is cut off!"

The back of his left wrist bore three wounds, one so deep the hand was nearly severed. In the taxicab the chauffeur found a hatchet of keen edge. Andrews had sat in the rear seat, laid his hand on the front one and hacked it three times.

Andrews, who was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, said he had become confused in the cab and when he regained his senses found his hand was nearly severed.

It is believed Andrews's mind became affected by worry over his finances and by a long-continued illness.

BROKER DAVIE SENTENCED.

Boston Defaulter to Serve Five Years in Jail for Embezzlement.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—Robert E. Davie, a young stockbroker, who fled to South America last year to escape clamoring creditors claiming half a million dollars, was at once sentenced to a term of five years in the House of Correction to-day, upon his plea of guilty to one of the hundred counts in an indictment for embezzlement.

In February Davie was discovered in an apparently penniless condition in Rio Janeiro by United States Vice Consul Joseph J. Slechta, and was arrested pending the arrival of Boston authorities. He was brought back after waiving extradition proceedings and has been in jail ever since. It was said at the court house to-day that his comparatively light sentence was due to the fact that he had made settlements with many of his creditors.

TOBACCO TRUST PLAN APPROVED BY COURT

UNITED CIGAR STORES REMAIN

Objections of Independents Overruled, but a Few Modifications Ordered—Judge Lacombe Writes Opinion.

Judges Lacombe, Noyes, and Coxe of the United States Circuit Court handed down opinions yesterday approving the plan of the American Tobacco Company for the disintegration of the trust, with some conditions suggested by Attorney General Wickersham, but without structural modification. The Attorney General's proposal that the stock of the United Cigar Stores Company, instead of being distributed to the common stockholders of the American Tobacco Company, be sold to outsiders is rejected. His request that the new companies be kept under the jurisdiction of the court for five years, so that a try-out of the plan may be made, with a reservation of the Government privilege of reopening the subject in case competition is not restored, is denied.

Judge Ward, who sat with the others at the public hearings on the plan, filed no opinion either in concurrence or dissent. It will now be incumbent on the Attorney General and the lawyers for the trust to draw up a decree in accordance with the opinion, and submit it to the court for its approval. When this has been approved the matter will be disposed of so far as the Circuit Court is concerned. The question of a possible appeal to the Supreme Court will rest with the Attorney General, as the Government is the only party to the suit aside from the defendants, who are not expected to object to the minor changes specified by the court. Assistant United States District Attorney Addison Pratt said yesterday that, while there was no direct right of appeal in this proceeding, the matter could be brought before the Supreme Court on a writ of certiorari, which would probably be granted, if applied for, because the disintegration proceeding is novel in all its features, and the higher court would probably be disposed to clear up all possible objections that might be raised to the action of the Circuit Court.

Independents Not Reconciled.

The independent tobacco interests, which are by no means reconciled to the adoption of the plan, hope to find some means of bringing the case again before the Supreme Court, if the Attorney General does not do so, but have not yet definitely determined on the steps to be taken in that event.

Judge Lacombe wrote the principal opinion. He holds broadly that the court would have no power to order the substitution of a different plan for that submitted, and that even the changes that are approved can be made only with the consent of the defendants. On this point he adds:

> It would be sheer waste of time, therefore, to consider any plan radically different from the one now before us; if we find this plan would not create the condition defined in the opinion of the Supreme Court, or if such modifications as we may require as a condition of giving our approval are not accepted by defendants, we must obey the mandate of that court; must seize the property and sell it at public auction in appropriate and convenient lots, applying the proceeds of the sale to the payment of the debts (including the mortgages) or of such dividend thereon as the proceeds may allow, turning over the surplus, if any, to the owners of the equity.

Concerning the proposal that the stock of the United Cigar Stores Company be sold to others than the common stockholders of the American Tobacco Company, Judge Lacombe holds that the court has no power to require it. He cites the penalties provided in the Sherman act for its violation, and says:

> Nowhere, however, is there any authority for the proposition that this court may seize the property of private persons who may have offended against that statute and sell it under conditions which would preclude the holder of the title or the owner of the equity from bidding at the sale so as to compel the purchaser to pay a reasonable price for it, or from buying it himself, if no one else will pay full value for it. That is confiscation; none the less so because the proceeds of such a sale, after paying outstanding debts and expenses, are to be turned over to the owner. Until Congress shall expressly give such power to this court, or until some obscure language in its grant of power shall be construed by the Supreme Court as in effect conveying such power, this court is not prepared to assume that it possesses any such authority.

The Five-Year Proposal.

The Attorney General's proposal of a five-year trial of the plan was strongly opposed by the bondholders of the American Tobacco Company. Speaking for them, Joseph H. Choate stated at the hearing that if such a provision were included it would adversely affect the value of the bonds, and the bondholders would withdraw entirely their consent to the reorganization plan. Regarding the request that the court impose such a condition, Judge Lacombe says:

> It is not apparent that this court has the power so to do. Had it not been for the mandate of the Supreme Court it might be questioned whether a Circuit Court of the United States had any jurisdiction to recreate a new group of corporations out of the elements into which a pre-existing group of corporations had been split or to formulate a plan or method according to which individuals, natural or corporate, were to be invited to invest money and embark in business. All such questions are, of course, resolved for us by the decision of the court of last resort. But neither in its mandate nor in its opinion is there any warrant for the conclusion that this court is to prescribe the temporary terms of a modus vivendi, with power to reassemble five years hence, ourselves, or our survivors and successors, and modify those terms, while in the interim by purchase or exchange of these bonds upward of $100,000,000 worth of property shall have exchanged hands irrevocably. The only function assigned to us is to consider any proposed plan which responsible parties engage to carry out, and approve or reject it; in the event of rejection the only alternative is injunction, receivership, and sale. The time limit fixed in the mandate, six months and possibly two more, precludes any other construction of its terms.

Must Accept or Reject It.

The contention that no dissolution plan would be effective and that a receiver should be appointed is dismissed with the remark that "evidently the Supreme Court believed some plan was practicable or it would not have directed this court to inquire into the matter." Other plans of dissolution, differing widely in form and scope, are dismissed because "there is no suggestion that the defendants will adopt them," Judge Lacombe arguing that the plan of the defendants must either be approved or rejected, and not changed in character.

In answer to the objection that under the plan, no matter how many new companies might be created, the present owners of the trust would continue to be the owners of the new companies, Judge Lacombe stands on the decisions of the Supreme Court in the Northern Securities and Standard Oil cases, where the same situation was created. Since this method of disintegration was acquiesced in by

CITY'S ASHCART MEN GO OUT ON STRIKE

OTHERS EXPECT TO FOLLOW

Leaders Expect Street Cleaners Out To-day—Commissioner Edwards Says Not One Will Be Taken Back.

All of the 2,000 drivers employed by the city in the collection of garbage and ashes went on strike at 10 o'clock last night. They were incensed at the severity of Mayor Gaynor in meeting their demand for the abandonment of night work. The hour the strike began was the time that the night crews go out with horse and cart to gather the ash cans from the residential districts of Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn.

In all the three boroughs the strikers turned out in practically solid ranks. They reported in some cases only to inform their foreman that they were "sick of their jobs." In other cases they gathered on nearby street corners and failed to go to their barns at all.

In Stable B in West Fifty-second Street, near Eleventh Avenue, a lone Italian named Sabatio Magavaro reported for duty. The foreman told him to hitch up his horse and prepare to go out, but when an investigation was made which revealed threatening crowds on the corners, it was decided not to risk the driver and his outfit.

At Stable G at 44 Hamilton Street Police Commissioner Waldo was urged by Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards to send a large squad of reserves at 10:40 o'clock. A report had just reached Commissioner Edwards that 35 out of 53 drivers employed at that stable were willing to work with their carts if assured of police protection.

Commissioner Waldo sent a squad of forty policemen, but the drivers failed to turn out. The strikers hoped last night that at this morning's rollcall for the day men, at 7 o'clock, they would be joined by practically all the laborers in the department.

Commissioner Edwards, on the other hand, declared that he would deal most severely with every striker, and that he was ready to announce that not a single man who had refused to answer rollcall would ever be taken back. "They forfeited their jobs for good and all when they showed a spirit of disloyalty by walking out," he said.

"To-morrow morning," he added, "I shall apply to the Civil Service to furnish me every man they can. If that is not sufficient, then I shall exercise my authority under Section 536 of the Charter, which was drawn for just such emergencies. It authorizes me to do just what I see fit, practically, to meet a crisis of this kind. I can employ outside help, contract the work out, or call on other departments for help. The only restraint imposed by the section is that I report frequently to the Mayor as to what emergency measures I shall take. I hope to have every garbage can emptied by to-morrow evening, so that the householders will be inconvenienced as little as posible."

Preceding the decision to go on strike there was a mass meeting of the strikers at Eighth Avenue and Forty-ninth Street.

The meeting was addressed by members of the strikers' committee which called upon Mayor Gaynor and Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards in the afternoon. On this committee were William H. Ashton, a union organizer, and George W. Prescott, Edward Gould, and Thomas Millett, "business agents" of Local No. 658 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen, and Helpers, with which the city cart drivers are affiliated.

Agent Prescott made the principal address. "The Mayor told us we could strike whenever we got ready to," said he. "Commissioner Edwards told us he could do nothing for us at this time. We told his Honor that it was very hard to think of night work with the heavy garbage cans in the icy weather. We told him a 200-pound can was a mighty big load for one man to lift into a garbage wagon, and that in the daytime the driver could always call on some sweeper to help him, while at night he had to lift his load alone, and on a slippery Winter's night was likely to do so at a heavy risk of both life and limb. I told him our men were already falling ill with pneumonia and rheumatism, and that they demanded the right to work in the sunlight and the warmer weather of the daytime.

"He told us in return that there might be one night maybe of the Winter that would be really rigorous and severe, but that as for the rest of the time it would be all right. He said the nightwork would go on."

When Prescott had reached this point in his speech there were loud calls from the drivers, and an immediate strike vote was decided upon. It was carried unanimously.

Commissioner Edwards was informed of the action taken by the men at his rooms in the Marie Antoinette. He immediately summoned all of his headquarters staff. To each barn he sent one staff representative with a letter from himself and another from the Mayor to read to the men.

In the Fifty-second Street stable the two letters were read by Mr. Whitney, Commissioner Edwards's secretary, to the lone Italian who reported for duty. Secretary Whitney sent outside to the groups of men, asking them to come in, not with a view of going to work, but of listening to some letters he had brought for their

SOCIALISTS REJOICE OVER MANY VICTORIES

Head of State Ticket Leads in Mississippi, but Full Returns Will Probably Beat Him.

HAVE TEN MAYORS IN OHIO

Party Plans Coalition with Laborites and Hopes to Cut a Big Figure in 1912.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—A rapidly forming labor-Socialist coalition, which they predict will destroy all old party lines and sweep the country in future Presidential campaigns, was described in Chicago today by National Socialist leaders, as they reviewed the final returns from yesterday's elections.

The showing in Chicago and Cook County, where 10 per cent. of the entire vote cast by all parties combined was polled by the Socialists, was declared to be as significant as any of the victories in the other States.

A new note of conservatism was sounded by the Socialist campaigners as they discussed the new element they are introducing to National politics. They warned their followers not to be so inflated over yesterday's showing that they would be unprepared for occasional reverses.

The wave which swept ten cities of Ohio, President Taft's home State, into Socialist control, and gave Socialists an important part in the administration of four other municipalities, was the subject of most of the discussion. The inroads made in the Democratic strength in Mississippi, where James T. Lester, the Socialist candidate for Lieutenant Governor, is leading his Democratic opponent, was declared almost as significant.

Gains in Pennsylvania, with Reading and Newcastle added to the list of cities having Socialist Governments, and Pittsburgh showing a gain of 100 per cent., were held by Socialists to be other important results upon which their predictions were based.

Their success in carrying Schenectady, N. Y.; gains of 25 to 30 per cent. in the Socialist vote in New York City, in spite of the bitter Republican fight against Tammany; the strong showing in Auburn, where one Socialist Alderman was elected and a second claims a victory, and other victories in cities scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, were pointed to as further evidence that the growing strength is not confined to any one section.

"I want to congratulate the Socialists of Chicago on the splendid showing made in the election yesterday," said Mayor Emil Seidel of Milwaukee. "We wanted to hear of a big vote in Chicago because of the influence a heavy poll would have in other cities in the country, and we are satisfied."

East Breaking from Moorings.

In referring to the showing made by the Socialists in the East, especially in Ohio, New York, and Pennsylvania, he said:

"Nothing now can check the rapid growth of socialism. Even the conservative States are breaking loose from their moorings and drifting along with the West toward socialism.

"The election shows that the harder our opponents fight us the more we grow."

The National Socialist Campaign Committee, whose headquarters are in Chicago, have made an appeal to the Socialist local branches throughout the country for funds to further the campaign of Job Harriman for Mayor of Los Angeles, whom they expect to elect on Dec. 5, believing that the recent enfranchisement of women in California greatly strengthens their cause there. Funds are also solicited from the labor unions.

Mississippi Still in Doubt.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 8.—On the face of the returns thus far to hand James T. Lester, Socialist candidate for Lieutenant Governor is leading his Democratic opponent, Theodore G. Bilbo, by more than one thousand votes, and the result promises to be close. While Mr. Bilbo is probably elected there is still a strong element of doubt in the result, and his fate depends on the size of the rural vote, which has been coming in very slowly.

Practically all the large cities and towns in the State gave majorities against the Democratic nominee, and for the first time lifelong Democrats by the thousands failed to vote a straight ticket. Heavy rains were general over the State on Tuesday, and the vote at country precincts will probably be the smallest for many years.

Unless Bilbo can show substantial gains on belated returns, he is doomed to defeat. At best his majority cannot exceed 2,000, while the remainder of the Democratic ticket has been elected by at least 30,000.

The strength of the Socialist Party did not manifest itself except in the contest for Lieutenant Governor. Practically all the votes cast for Lester were those of rock-ribbed Democrats, who belong to the conservative or anti-Vardaman faction, and who openly declared that they would rather incur the risk of being denounced as bolters than forfeit their self-respect by voting for Bilbo, who has been bitterly denounced by a large section of the State press.

The Democratic Party in Mississippi is split in twain. Two irreconcilable factions have been formed, one the radical Vardaman element, and the other the conservative element led by Senator Leroy Percy. Bilbo won the Democratic nomination in the Summer primaries by a majority of over 20,000 votes, riding in on the tidal wave of Vardamanism that swept over the State. For the first time the Socialist Party put a State ticket in the field.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—The unexpected Socialist victories in many parts of Ohio yesterday have scared the ranks of the two major parties. And that is just what the Ohio voters desired.

The election of ten Socialist Mayors, of independent Mayors in as many other places, the naming of a progressive body to frame the next Constitution of Ohio, and the victory of progressive candidates everywhere is not merely a Socialist triumph, nor the result of a campaign of the Socialist Party. It is a warning note sounded in no uncertain tones by the voters of Ohio to the leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties. It is regarded as a notice that the next candidate for President on at least one of the two big party tickets must be a radical progressive, after the La Follette type. Unless one of the two parties names such a man, it is said, there will be a third party formed that will probably ally itself with the Socialists.

Ohio politicians have realized this situation for some time. Herein the State of Taft and Harmon the Progressives have organized for a fight they expect to spread throughout the Nation; that will either force the nomination of a Progressive for the Presidency on the Republican

He and His Brothers Angry Over Germany's Backdown Over Morocco.

BERLIN, Thursday, Nov. 9.—The agreement between Germany and France with regard to Morocco and the Congo appears to cause great discontent within the Royal Family.

The National Zeitung learns that the Crown Prince "is astounded at what he regards as Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's pitiable policy."

The Crown Prince, who is now living at Danzig, has, says the paper, communicated with his brothers with a view to making representations to the Emperor, so that the matter may not be further mismanaged.

The Post partly confirms this, adding that it knows that the Crown Prince and the elder Princes, when the Moroccan excitement was at its height, "expressed unreservedly their regret over the official policy in this connection, and strongly disapproved of Germany's timid retreats before French arrogance."

STANDARD OIL FIRE OUT.

It Burned 45 Hours and Destroyed 1,000,000 Gallons of Oil.

After burning continuously since 8 o'clock Monday evening, the fire in the Standard Oil plant at Constable Hook, Bayonne, was drowned out at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Two more tanks exploded yesterday, but the 5,000 employes, who had been kept steadily at work since the fire started, managed to prevent the flames spreading. They used 10,000 feet of hose at the time.

In all about twenty tanks and their contents were destroyed, and the oil consumed was close to 1,000,000 gallons. This and the tanks are said to have represented about $200,000.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—"Poco" Bennett, the noted Harvard "ol' clo's" man, rescued Mrs. Margaret Boylan, aged 65, from the roof of a five-story brick building to-day when fire started in a tailor's shop on the ground floor after an explosion of gasoline.

Mrs. Boylan was seated on the roof with her nine-months-old grandchild, when smoke and flames burst from the stairway. Her screams attracted Mrs. Fannie Backer, who rushed to the roof, and, taking the child in her arms, hurried to the sidewalk.

The only other person in sight was Bennett, who, seeing the peril of Mrs. Boylan on the roof of a burning house, hastened to her assistance. He succeeded in aiding Mrs. Boylan down the stairs to the sidewalk when the firemen arrived.

Descendant of a Founder of St. Louis Gets $500,000 at His Majority.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 8.—Auguste Chouteau, a descendant of Auguste Chouteau, who helped Pierre Laclede Liguest to found this city, will sail to India to attend the Durbar at Delhi. When he reached his majority to-day he became heir to $500,000, and he was told of it as he set sail from London accompanied by his uncle, Philip C. Scanlan, a former Park Commissioner. After the Durbar they will continue on a trip around the world.

Both of Chouteau's parents died when he was a child, and the fortune, not great at that time, was left in trust for him. Eugenia Chouteau, an aunt, of 4,927 Maryland Place, and John F. Lee, an attorney, were made Trustees, and Miss Chouteau brought up the young man, keeping him in ignorance of the fortune which awaited him.

The estate was increased by $300,000 by the fight of the Terminal Association to keep the Rock Island Railroad out of St. Louis. The Rock Island sought to get control of the Wiggins Ferry Company, which owns practically all the East Side terminal lands, and its stock, worth $100 at par, was bid up. Chouteau's fortune was in this stock, and the Trustees sold for more than $320,000 stock which at par was worth only $20,000.

MURPHY LEADERSHIP FACES REAL REVOLT

Democratic League Sees Its Chance to Oust Him as Boss of the State.

McCOOEY LIKELY TO GO FIRST

Conners and the Leaders in Kings Can Then Be Counted Upon to Help a Regeneration Movement.

As a result of the rebuke administered to Tammany Hall at the polls on Tuesday, the State leadership of Charles F. Murphy hangs in the balance. Should Murphy decide to remain as the active head of the Democratic State organization it is predicted that a fight will result which will split the organization wide open.

Tammany contrived to pull through by ridiculously low pluralities its candidates on the county and judiciary tickets, including Mr. Murphy's former right-hand man, Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan. But, even at that, there were some followers of the Tammany fortunes who, when talking to friends yesterday, did not hesitate in paraphrasing Pyrrhus to the extent of declaring that one more such victory would prove Tammany's undoing.

The only consolation the political cronies of the Tammany boss at the Wigwam could extract from the "victory" was that it had placed within Tammany's grip the offices of Sheriff and Surrogate. Both are rich in patronage, and patronage goes a long way with the average Tammany politician. But from the attempts made in Fourteenth Street yesterday to exculpate the organization from the responsibility for the "victory," to explain how it all came to pass and place the blame on the Judiciary scandals in Kings and Queens, it was not difficult to see that even the least sensitive followers of the Tammany boss felt the sting of Tuesday night's event, and realized keenly what it would mean to Tammany in loss of prestige on the eve of a Presidential election.

Tammany's Explanation.

The man who did the official explaining at Tammany Hall yesterday was "Phil" Donohue, Treasurer of Tammany. Mr. Donohue grew up with Leader Murphy. The two are invariably seen together when the Tammany boss is in town. Mr. Murphy has such confidence in Mr. Donohue that he trusts him to hold the Tammany purse strings. For that reason Donohue is generally regarded as reflecting in speech and action the views of the Tammany chieftain.

"If it had not been for the judiciary scandal in Brooklyn and Queens," said Mr. Donohue yesterday, "our victory would have been much more complete over here. Then, Tammany is blamed for a good many things it is not responsible for. For instance, there's the budget. The taxpayers blame Tammany Hall for the increase in the budget, although it should be well known that the Mayor's vote is the only vote the organization has in the Board of Estimate."

Mr. Murphy did not go to Tammany Hall yesterday. Nor did his shadow darken Delmonico's. Unofficially he was said to be at his country estate near Good Ground, L. I., thinking it all over. It is understood that the Tammany boss is planning a post-election trip, as usual, and that he will start on Friday. He is bound either for Hot Springs, Va., or Mount Clemens, Mich. It was said yesterday that Mr. Murphy had not yet decided which place would give him most solitude or afford him the best opportunity for rest and recuperation. Inasmuch as Norman E. Mack who, while he is the understudy of the Tammany chieftain at the head of the Democratic State Committee, is Chairman of the Democratic National Committee as well, has booked passage for the Michigan health resort, it was taken for granted that Mr. Murphy would land at Mount Clemens, too.

That the two, while away, will confer earnestly about the mixed-up Democratic situation in this State is taken for granted. There never was a time when Mr. Murphy was more in need of wise and friendly counsel. Outside Tammany Hall the Democratic State organization is full of his political enemies. Even in the Tammany fold there are men of influence who would feel no regret if there should be a change in the leadership. The heavy defeat in the Bronx, where thousands of enrolled Democrats must have voted the Fusion ticket, is evidence of that. The return of Hearst to the Democratic fold has given Murphy another powerful enemy in any fight within party lines.

League Leaders Speak Out.

It is not considered good ethics in Tammany to make open war on a leader when he is in trouble. For that reason it is likely that the first blow against Mr. Murphy's leadership will be struck from some of the Democrats who have been looked upon as "outsiders" by the Tammany chieftain and his lieutenants. It was more than intimated yesterday by Col. Robert Grier Monroe, head of the Democratic League's County Committee, and by Montgomery Hare, who as one of the foremost men in the league was Chairman of the Executive Committee in the Fusion campaign, that their organization would start on the warpath with a view to preventing Tammany Leader Murphy from gaining control of the Democratic delegation from this State to the National Convention, as well as from controlling the Democratic State Convention next Fall, where a full State ticket is to be nominated.

"Thanks to the fight for the Fusion ticket," said Col. Monroe, "the Democratic Party in the State of New York will not be shouldered with the record of another Murphy Legislature. It will not be compelled to enter the Presidential campaign with the hostility of citizens aroused by the imposition of an iniquitous Charter and a vicious election law. With such a handicap defeat would be unavoidable.

"We have just seen the overwhelming Democratic majority in the State of New York completely wiped out. To me this primarily means that the Democracy of New York cannot be led by Murphy, Cassidy, McCooey, and their henchmen. Under such control any party would be doomed. I believe the removal of these persons from party control is absolutely essential. With their elimination and the substitution of men of character, integrity, and intelligence in the counsels of our party, the State of New York will forthwith be restored to the Democratic column and remain there."

"The attempt of Mr. Murphy and his followers to hide behind a respectable judiciary ticket in this county has met with only such success as its practical defeat," said Montgomery Hare. "The Fusion movement has won a victory which wholly justifies its inception and activity, and promises much for the future. The rest is up to the independent Democrats who really care enough for their party to wish to see it go into the National campaign without the dead weight of the leadership which was so thoroughly rebuked yesterday. The end is not yet."

Think They've Justified Themselves.

The leaders in the Democratic League believe that the result of last year's election, with its Democratic sweep, and the substantial setback the Democratic Party suffered at the polls this year, when the Republicans carried the Assembly by an overwhelming majority and the Tammany county ticket barely skinned through, should convince Democrats, no matter how loyal they may be to Tammany, that a Democratic victory without the co-operation of the independent element represented in the League movement is impossible, while with the co-operation of the independent Democrats it is secure. They believe that once this has been realized among Democrats generally, and with it the fact that this support cannot be had with the sort of organization leadership that Murphy stands for, there will be a general demand for a new deal.

There is every reason to believe that if there is to be an open fight on the leadership of Mr. Murphy, it will come at the Spring primaries, when the first gun is to be fired in the Presidential ante-convention campaign. The result of the Ohio elections is regarded as having brought forward Gov. Harmon of that State as the logical standard bearer of his party in the National campaign. That he will have the support of a most influential element in the Democratic Party in this State has been predicted from the time his name was first mentioned as a possible Presidential nominee. On the other hand, it is no secret to those who followed events at Albany last Winter that Gov. Dix has received assurances that the New York delegation to the Democratic National Convention would place his name before that body as a candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Whether Mr. Murphy believed that Gov. Dix was good Presidential timber or that his name possessed magic enough to enable him to go to the convention with an undivided delegation to be used for trading purposes to his own advantage or aggrandizement, no one doubts that the Harmon element would welcome the opportunity of trying conclusions with the Tammany boss on that issue when the time comes.

Kings to be Tackled First.

Many members of the Democratic League believe that if they raise the banner of revolt there will be no lack of active support from within the regular organization in an attempt to dislodge Murphy as State leader. They do not consider it altogether essential that his overthrow as leader of the Tammany forces should come first.

When Mr. Murphy, after the death of Senator McCarren, saw his way clear to make the Kings County Democracy a mere annex to Tammany Hall, and when he put John H. McCooey in charge there, he took over a heritage of political peril. There are many who believe that the anti-Tammany revolt will begin in Kings, where the judiciary scandal and the crushing defeat sustained by the Democrats has furnished ample pretext for the overthrow of Murphy's man McCooey. With the emancipation of the Brooklyn Democracy from Murphy's rule, Tammany would lose control of the State organization, for there is no doubt that the old time alliance between the up-State Democrats and the Democratic organization in Kings, which furnished a check on Tammany Hall during the days of Cleveland and Hill, would be renewed.

The crushing defeat of the Democrats in Erie County gives indication of the influence still wielded by William J. Conners, former Democratic State Chairman, whose overthrow was caused by the Tammany boss in a manner which must rankle in the long memory of Conners. Conners has already made it clear to his friends that he would gladly make common cause with the independents in purging the Democratic organization of Mr. Murphy and what Mr. Murphy stands for.

GRIP ON ELECTIONS BOARD GONE

Under Levy Law Appointing Power Passes to Anti-Tammany Aldermen.

Tammany's financial interest in the Board of Elections of this city is usually $600,000 a year. The terms of the present Commissioners, consisting of two Democrats and two Republicans, will expire on Jan. 1, 1913. Under the Levy election law the majority of the Aldermen, who will take office on Jan. 1 next, will name their successors. As this majority will consist of Aldermen opposed to Tammany every effort is likely to be made to keep Tammany from getting its first choice as Commissioners.

The men appointed must be taken from lists furnished by the two dominant political parties, so the face of the situation indicates that the Tiger's grip on the $600,000 could not be pried loose. But both Mayor McClellan and Mayor Gaynor established a precedent in ignoring the candidates of the "dominant political parties" until the lists submitted contained the names of men who were satisfactory to them. If the incoming majority Aldermen follow this trail the two Democratic members of the next board may hail from some other county than New York, or hail from New York and be cold to Tammany.

While $600,000 worth of patronage a year may be a matter of small moment to an organization like Tammany that has frequently controlled $50,000,000 worth in a single year, the office has been useful in finding employment for the faithful to the number of about 7,000 souls. Of course, the majority of this number work for Tammany only during times of political excitement, but even these sporadic jobs hold always a promise of more substantial favors. Then there are several hundred jobs carrying salaries ranging from $5,000 a year down to $800.

In the recent election 15,592 election officers were employed and half of these would be 7,796. But no real Tammany man would believe that "Fourteenth Street" didn't get away with more than the half it was entitled to. These men are living, vital forces to Tammany. Of course they vote straight, they seek, or are supposed to seek, converts in all of the political temples, and they are handy in a scrap. All of the poll clerks, ballot clerks, inspectors, and registry clerks are sure of a job for a year.

These jobs are filled by law between July 1 and Sept. 1. The names of these election officials are chosen by the district leaders, among whom they are justly apportioned according as to how the leader stands in Fourteenth Street. They are inspected first by some "trusty" of Mr. Murphy, whose business it is to weed out those that bear the stain of not having "made good" in some previous party venture or of having said some word that smacked of disloyalty.

The big men are the Commissioners, the chief clerks, the other clerks, the messengers, accountants, bookkeepers, telephone operators, stenographers, &c., who get money every month. Money for its running expenses is furnished by the Board of Estimate in the same manner as that of other boards, bureaus, and departments. It is estimated that it sometimes costs something over $1,000,000 a year, but the amount has sometimes exceeded $1,200,000. With a friendly Board of Estimate and a friendly Board of Aldermen, the amount could be fixed to the very guard rails of generosity, but if these boards are unfriendly, as they will be, it can be trimmed down to the point of the forced exclusion of many of those on the monthly payroll.

In this city there are 1,699 election districts, and the Board of Elections select for each one of these two poll clerks, two ballot clerks, and four inspectors, evenly divided among Democrats and Republicans. But as already pointed out, the members of the Board of Elections must be acceptable to the appointing power, which will hereafter be the Board of Aldermen.

PREDICT PENROSE'S DEFEAT.

Quaker City Politicians Say Reform Victory Jeopardizes His Senate Seat.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—Rudolph Blankenburg, the reform candidate for Mayor, was elected by a majority of nearly 5,000. Forty-five of the 84 members of Common Councils and 10 of the 23 Select Councilmen are for reform, assuring to the coming administration the complete control of municipal affairs for the next four years.

George H. Early, Jr., defeated for Mayor, was the Penrose Republican nominee, and was supported also by State Senator McNichol. His preliminary campaign against Recorder Vare, one of the organization leaders, caused great bitterness, and he gained the enmity of a large section of the city which has always brought success to the Republicans.

The downfall of the Penrose candidate also may be traced to other causes, the most important of which probably was the opposition of the local bankers, headed by E. T. Stotesbury, to Penrose and his candidate for Mayor. The remainder of the Republican ticket was elected.

Politicians who have been fighting Penrose for years declare that his failure in this campaign forecasts his defeat for re-election to the United States Senate in 1914. There is no doubt that Senator Penrose stood at the head and front of the battle and the defeat of his candidate for Mayor will work against his future sway in State politics.

If the reform party forms a city organization and perfects it for the Senatorial fight in 1914, when the Legislature will be called upon to elect a successor to Senator Penrose, the latter's hold on his seat in the United States Senate will certainly be in danger.

Mr. Blankenburg won in the face of a normal Republican majority of between 75,000 and 100,000.

TAMMANY HARD HIT BY ALDERMANIC LOSS

WEALTH OF PATRONAGE GONE

"Big Tim" Sullivan Loses His Sergeant at Arms and Assistants—Policy of Obstruction Planned.

Tammany's heaviest loss in Tuesday's election, so far as the city is concerned, was the Board of Aldermen. From time immemorial the Aldermanic Board has been looked upon as an adjunct to the Tammany organization. It is true that several times in the last dozen years the control of the board has slipped from the Boss of the Wigwam, but it has always been regained without much difficulty.

Aldermen are elected every two years. In 1905 the board went Republican, but Tammany regained it two years later and held it in the election of 1909, so that they have had full control of the board since 1907. That has been time enough for them to put through many matters of financial interest to the organization. The unfortunate feature of Tuesday's upheaval, so far as Boss Murphy is concerned, is that much remained to be done.

The new line-up of the board's 73 members for next year will be: Fusionists, 38; Democrats, 35. As the President of the board and each of the borough Presidents have a voice in the board, the vote on a strict party division will be strongly against Tammany. The vote of the actual Aldermen will be just the reverse of this year's line-up. Four of the borough heads, McAneny of Manhattan, Miller of the Bronx, Steers of Brooklyn, and Cromwell of Richmond, will vote with the Fusion members. As John Purroy Mitchel, President of the board, also was elected on a Fusion ticket, the strict line-up will give the Fusionists a majority of eight votes. Borough President Connolly of Queens, who was recently elected, has shown no preference so far for either side, but if it comes to a showdown there is little doubt but that he will side with the Democrats.

Tammany lost one Alderman in Manhattan and the Bronx, gained one in Queens, and lost three in Kings. In Richmond a solid delegation of Democratic Aldermen was elected. The Kings County vote really overturned the board.

Vice Chairman Francis P. Bent of Brooklyn went down to defeat. W. H. Pendry, Fusionist, who succeeds him from the Sixty-first District, Brooklyn, or Bryant Willard of the Twenty-first Aldermanic District, Manhattan, the minority leader of the board, will probably succeed him. The twelve Brooklyn Aldermen practically forced Bent to the Chairmanship as their price for remaining regular to the organization of the board last year. Bent has not been popular, and the Democratic members of the board will not be sorry to see him go.

First of all, by Tuesday's result, Tammany also will lose the Vice Presidency and the Chairman of the Finance Committee, the most powerful committee in the board. For several years Frank L. Dowling, leader of the majority, has held this place, and it has meant much to the leader of Tammany Hall. With the Chairmanship of the Finance Committee, the Sinking Fund Commission will also fall directly into the hands of the Fusionists.

As the Sinking Fund Commission now stands it is made up of the Mayor, the Controller, the President of the Board of Aldermen, the City Chamberlain, and the Chairman of the Finance Committee. At present three of the members are Democrats, while two—Controller Prendergast and President Mitchel—are Fusionists. With a Fusionist succeeding Alderman Dowling of the Finance Committee, the board will stand three for Fusion and two for the Democrats.

The Democrats will also lose Harry Oxford, Sergeant-at-Arms, and about a dozen of his assistants. Oxford is a Sullivan adherent and his loss will be felt by "Big Tim" more than anything else connected with the election. All the patronage of the office went to "Big Tim's" followers. Tammany will also lose the appointment of the new bi-partisan Board of Elections as provided for in the Levy law.

But more than anything, Tammany will feel the loss of the various powerful committees which have been under Democratic control for the last four years. The most important single matter now before the board is the building code which Tammany has tried unsuccessfully to have passed for the last six or seven years. With succes salmost in sight in 1908 Mayor McClellan vetoed it and Tammany waited. Its opportunity came last year. Alderman Kenneally of the Twelfth Aldermanic District was made Chairman of the Building Code Committee, and it looked as if the much desired code would be made a law.

The code was drawn in favor of the manufacturers of hollow tile and against the so-called concrete interests. That is, it favored hollow tile as a building material, which meant that hollow tile would have to be used for building purposes to the exclusion of everything else. Many prominent architects and builders who saw the injustice of the restriction appeared at public hearings before the Mayor and advocated that the code, as drawn, be changed. There was too much discrimination against the concrete interests, they maintained. Forced by public opposition, Mayor Gaynor told Alderman Kenneally that the code would have to be revised to allow the concrete interests an opportunity to compete. The matter was then laid over, but in the meantime enormous pressure was being brought to bear to have the code, as originally planned, go through. Tuesday's election, giving the control of all committees, Building Code and otherwise, to the Fusionists, has killed the code for two years at least.

The Tammany members of the board, it was said yesterday, are planning to do exactly as they did in the past when they were in the minority, that is, block so far as they can the work of the Fusionists.

What Tammany has lost in Aldermanic patronage, however, it will obtain from the Sheriff's office, that office having passed to Tammany control on Tuesday. Properly worked, as Tammany is sure to do it, this office is bound to yield rich results. For instance, there is an Under Sheriff, twenty-four Deputy Sheriffs, and forty-eight Assistant Deputy Sheriffs, besides a retinue of clerks, bookkeepers, and private secretaries, to be appointed. A great many references are also to be handed over to attorneys favorable to Tammany. Michael E. Cruise, who was mentioned as a candidate for Sheriff with Julius Harburger, it was said yesterday, is likely to obtain the position of Under Sheriff.

LEGISLATIVE DEADLOCK NEXT.

Election Leaves Senate and Assembly with Opposing Majorities.

Dispatches received from all sections of the State last night confirmed the returns which on Tuesday gave the Assembly to the Republicans with 101 votes—more than a two-thirds majority. From nearly every county in the State William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, received congratulatory messages. Prominent Republicans from other States joined in these felicitations, and altogether Mr. Barnes had a very happy and enjoyable day.

"I was not surprised at the victory, but the size of it is rather gratifying," said Chairman Barnes. "We are having tables compiled to show by figures what our majorities throughout the State aggregate. I believe that when this work is completed it will show Republican majorities of at least 100,000. That's good for an 'off year.' I regard it as a sure indication that New York will be in the Republican column in the National election next year."

It is the first time since 1891, when David B. Hill was Governor, that the two houses of the Legislature will be controlled by opposing political parties. The Senate, which is Democratic by a majority of four votes, holds over. But even there the Democratic organization and Gov. Dix cannot altogether be certain of having a check on policies that may be inaugurated by the Assembly with its heavy Republican majority. Among the Democrats in the Senate there is an insurgent element which at the last session got on the job whenever Tammany Leader Murphy sought to have some particularly objectionable piece of legislation jammed through and proved strong enough to stop it on more than one occasion.

This year the Senate insurgents will start out with a grievance against the Murphy leadership. At least two of the insurrectoes are close friends of Thomas Mott Osborne, head of the Democratic League, whose defeat as Mayor of Auburn it is commonly reported, was brought about by the lavish expenditure of Democratic money in favor of his opponent. All the Senate insurgents have been penalized, as have their districts, for the independent stand they took against Murphy's Senatorial candidate, William F. Sheehan. They had their legislation tossed on the scrap-heap again and again by Murphy's henchmen in the Senate. At the coming session, with its Republican Assembly, it is not unlikely that inducements will be held out to them to make common cause with the Republicans in the Senate when their votes are needed.

Final returns show that of the twenty-four Assembly insurgents who opposed Sheehan for United States Senator, and who were sacrificed to make a Tammany holiday—incidentally swelling the Republican majority in the lower house—only five survive. They are Chanler of Dutchess, Evans of Sullivan, Kennedy of Queens, McDaniels of Tompkins, and Wheeler of Delaware. Wheeler's election was still in doubt when the last returns on election night came in. It was established only after an official count in the office of the County Clerk, which gave him a majority of 80 over his Republican opponent in a county normally Republican by something like 3,000. The balance of the Republican ticket was elected by a majority of 1,200.

Following the return of the Republicans to control of the lower house, the absorbing question with them before long will be the Speakership. The general impression now is that it will go to Edwin A. Merritt, Jr., who was defeated by James W. Wadsworth, Jr., for the office last time. There is some curiosity as to who will get the minority leadership. Speaker Frisbie, in virtue of the fact that he was Speaker in the last session, should be entitled to it, but it is probable that a majority of the Democrats who have been returned would favor Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith of the Second New York District. He was majority leader in the last session and proved most effective from an organization point of view.

SOCIALISTS COUNTING GAINS.

See a Big Increase in Their Vote in This State—Figures Not All In.

The local officers of the Socialist Party said yesterday that judging from the returns already received the Socialists in this State, in proportion to the aggregate vote, had made a great gain at Tuesday's election. Secretary Gerber said last night that full returns would not probably be received for a day or two on account of the number of small manufacturing towns, where there were party locals.

"There have been gains in every part of the city," he said, "but even greater in cities outside of the metropolitan district, independent of the election of a Socialist Mayor in Schenectady, we have made gains in other towns. In Fulton the Socialist vote has increased 200 per cent. Mr. Gerber expressed the opinion that the prosecution of the trusts by the Government had had a good deal to do with the increase in the Socialist vote in manufacturing towns. These prosecutions, he said, threw large numbers of people idle through manufacturers shutting down, but the trusts only reorganized again. He could not see why a capitalistic Government prosecuted trusts which were part of the capitalistic system.

ticket or result in a Democratic or Socialist victory.

The Socialists, in electing ten Mayors in Ohio, found their hardest fight was in Canton, the home of the late President McKinley, where the Socialist nominee is pronounced a winner by three votes. The Democrats will protest the election, and an official count has been ordered.

Other Ohio cities naming Socialist Mayors are:

Lima, Lorain, Mount Vernon, Fostoria, Martin's Ferry, Salem, St. Mary's, Amsterdam, Sugar Grove.

In as many other towns independent Mayors were named as a rebuke to the old parties, while Socialists elected Councilmanic candidates in many places. While the Democrats elected the Mayors in the big cities of Ohio these victories can in a measure be attributed to the Socialists. Had not Cleveland Democrats nominated Newton D. Baker, a man inheriting many Socialistis ideas from Tom L. Johnson, a Socialist would have been the next Mayor of Cleveland.

The same is true in Columbus, where the street car strike of over a year ago caused the voters to turn from the Republicans who were then in power. The Socialist candidate there got an immense vote, and would have won, but for the fact that his Democratic opponent was a man of broad, progressive ideas. In Toledo, Brand Whitlock, Independent, elected for the fourth time, is a Socialist in principle. Cincinnati's voters struck a blow at the radicalisms of the two great parties in electing Henry T. Hunt, Democrat, with progressive ideas.

Cities which have chosen Socialist Mayors have done so by way of vigorous protest against the conditions of government permitted to flourish under some Democratic or Republican régime. In disgust, the long-suffering electorate have turned to this third party and empowered it to do with the other parties had failed to do, that is, give them an efficient management of public affairs.

Probably the most decisive victory for the Socialist propaganda in Ohio lies in the election of delegates to the convention which will meet in January to draw up a new State Constitution. With a few exceptions the 119 delegates are pledged to the Socialistic principles of the initiative and referendum and a modified recall. Strong men from the old parties who refused to agree to the support of these ideas were beaten.

A notable example of this is James R. Garfield, who two years ago was recognized as a leading Republican insurgent in Ohio. He was a candidate for Constitutional Delegate in his home county—Lake—but refused to ally himself with the progressives by pledge, and was snowed under by a progressive. This means that Garfield can no longer be recognized as a possible Republican candidate for Governor in 1913. Garfield's downfall dates from the day when he refused to lead the Ohio progressives in their fight against Taft.

Foresees Taft's Defeat.

John D. Fackler, leader of the Cleveland progressives, said to-day that the great sweep of the progressives and Socialists in Ohio yesterday means the defeat of President Taft and the ousting of Senator Burton as a leader of the Republicans in Ohio. He does not believe that Burton can be returned to the Senate. Fackler is already being boomed for President of the new Constitutional Convention, and promises to be a leader in the movement to split the next Ohio delegation in the National Republican Convention. The fight to get delegates away from Taft will now begin, and progressive leaders of National repute will come to Ohio at once. Senator Bristow of Kansas, Gifford Pinchot, Gov. Johnson of California, and Senator Clapp will make speaking tours of the State, and Senator La Follette is to be here later.

It is impossible yet to estimate the Socialist vote in Ohio. The party made big gains, receiving over 8,500 in Cleveland, 12,000 in Columbus, and in at least twelve other places had the majority vote. It is so scattered, however, that it will take days to determine the figures.

Thaddeus Straus, Democrat, has been elected Mayor of Hamilton at an estimated majority of between 500 and 600.

Columbus Elects Four Socialists.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—While the Democrats won the Mayoralty election they failed to carry a Council of the same political faith. The Democrats will have seven Councilmen, the Republicans eight, and the Socialists four.

The election of the Socalist Councilmen is without precedent in this city, and their course will be followed with interest. One of the surprises of the municipal election is the large vote polled by the Socialists. Alvah C. Eby, the candidate for Mayor on that ticket, received more than 10,000 votes, according to figures available this morning, running third in the contest.

Sweep Two Pennsylvania Towns.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW CASTLE, Penn., Nov. 8.—The election yesterday was a great victory for the Socialist Party in Lawrence County. In New Castle it elected a Mayor, eleven Councilmen, and two City Assessors. In Wheatland, they swept the entire ticket, and in Pymatuning Township they elected five School Directors.

The fight in this city was a hard one. Walter V. Tyler, the Socialist candidate, had less than 500 majority. The vote for Mayor stood, Tyler, 1,708; Gilkey, (Ind.,) 1,228; Reynolds, (Rep.,) 1,027.

In Brookfield township, Mercer County, an interesting contest between Richard Allen, for Justice of the Peace on the Socialist ticket, and his son, Thomas H. Allen, (Rep.,) was won by the son by a majority of 83.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Rev. Dr. George R. Lunn, Socialist Mayor-elect, was much elated to-day when complete returns showed that the Socialists had made a sweeping victory in the contest yesterday, electing a majority of the Aldermen, eight of the eighteen Supervisors, all the city ticket but City Judge, and all the county offices except that of Sheriff.

"The people of Schenectady underestimated the strength of the Socialist organization," said Dr. Lunn. "Our victory is not a Lunn victory. It is a victory of the Socialist Party, backed by the guidance and wisdom of an intelligent organization. Appointments will be made in accordance with the principles for which we stand, but none will be made for several weeks. I shall endeavor to fulfill my duties as Mayor so that Schenectady will have one of the best administrations in her history.

"There are a number of offices now costing the city several thousand dollars yearly that should be eliminated. The members of the administration are paid by the city to do the duties of the offices, and if their duties are faithfully accomplished a profitable elimination is inevitable."

All of Dr. Lunn's appointments may not necessarily be confined to members of the Socialist Party, and it is possible that the Mayor elect may even go out of town for men to head some of the departments. He declared that his aim will be to obtain the best qualified men.

the Supreme Court, he says, it would seem that the question has been settled for this court by controlling authority."

Taking up objections to the size of the four new companies and the proposed distribution of factories and brands, Judge Lacombe takes the view that if just these conditions existed they could not be successfully attacked under the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Sherman act.

"I may be wrong," he says, "in the interpretation of its deliverances—if so it will not be for the first time—but since such is my conviction there would seem to be no necessity for discussing, on its economic side, a question already settled by controlling authority."

The principal conditions suggested by Attorney General Wickersham that are approved, with slight modifications, are that the companies shall have no officers or Directors in common; that they shall not hold each other's stock; that they shall not have the same agents or offices; that none of them for five years shall acquire stock or property of any other; that the individual defendants shall not for five years increase their proportionate holdings, with the possible exception of stock in the British-American Tobacco Company, the control of which might otherwise pass into British hands, and that the defendants be enjoined specifically from enumerated acts in violation of law.

Yields Nothing to Independents.

Taking up the requests of the independents, Judge Lacombe eliminates those duplicated by the Attorney General or already otherwise disposed of and denies all the others. These are that the companies be enjoined from free distribution, rebates, or other special inducements; from espionage on the business of any competitor; that the stock of certain companies besides the United Cigar Stores Company be sold to outsiders. The proposal that the Cigar Stores Company be disintegrated is denied on the ground that it was not ordered disintegrated by the Supreme Court, as the other accessories were.

"There may come a time," Judge Lacombe adds, "when the growth of the company or the methods by which such growth is stimulated may bring it within the prohibition of the statute, but that time has not yet come."

Judge Noyes in his opinion says: "That which made me pause in the present case is the concentrated common stockholding of the individual defendants, but, after careful consideration, I have reached the conclusion that the objection should not operate to prevent the acceptance of the plan."

Referring to the Northern Securities and Standard Oil cases, he adds: "It is impossible for me to read those decisions without being convinced that the Supreme Court did not intend that we should reject a plan upon the ground of pro rata distribution. I am also influenced, if not controlled, by the position taken by the Attorney General."

In conclusion, Judge Noyes has this to say of the effectiveness of the Sherman act:

> The extent to which it has been necessary to tear apart this combination and force it into new forms, with the attendant burdens, ought to demonstrate that the Federal anti-trust statute is a drastic statute which accomplishes effective results; which, so long as it stands on the statute books must be obeyed, and which cannot be disobeyed without incurring far-reaching penalties. And, on the other hand, the successful reconstruction of this organization should teach that the effect of enforcing this statute against industrial combinations is not to destroy, but to reconstruct; not to demolish but to re-create in accordance with the conditions which the Congress has declared shall exist among the people of the United States.

Judge Coxe, in his opinion, says he approves the plan not because he thinks it perfect, but because it is the best plan obtainable. He says:

"Perfection is impossible. The condition existing before the illegal combination was formed cannot be restored; it has gone beyond the hope of recall. The plan which we have sanctioned eliminates the objectionable features, and permits no unreasonable or unlawful restraint of trade."

SEEKS VIEWS ON SHERMAN ACT.

Civic Federation Sends Out Questions to 20,000 Representative Men.

Seth Low, President of the National Civic Federation, has arranged a plan by which the federation will collect and tabulate the views of representative men from all parts of the country on the Sherman anti-trust act. A series of questions is to be sent to 20,000 representative men—manufacturers, farmers, merchants, lawyers, bankers, political economists, labor leaders—and their answers will be classified by a committee.

This will include Mr. Low, William Dudley Foulke of Indiana, James R. Garfield of Ohio, Samuel Untermyer, Talcot Williams of Philadelphia, Frederick N. Judson of St. Louis, Charles A. Severance of St. Paul, Edgar A. Bancroft of Chicago, and a number of economists and university professors. The eleven questions to be submitted will cover all phases of the Sherman act and its allied subjects, and will seek opinions as to the desirability of the repeal of the law and what substitute plans might be suggested.

It is expected that the views thus compiled will be submitted later to the Inter-State Commerce Committee of the United States Senate, which will begin hearings on the general subject in Washington at an early day.

INDEPENDENTS MAY CONTEST.

Counsel Will Advise to Ask for a Review by the Supreme Court.

The action of the Circuit Court yesterday in approving the Tobacco Trust reorganization plan pleased the defendants as much as it displeased the independents. One of the lawyers for the American Tobacco Company said:

"We have always believed in the justice and equity of the plan. We felt sure from the first that our position was absolutely tenable. We felt perfectly safe in leaving our case within the jurisdiction of the court where it properly belonged. The Supreme Court laid down rules under which the disintegration should take place, and we have conformed with them. Of course, we cannot feel less than gratified that the Circuit Court, with which the matter rested, has passed favorably upon our plan."

Felix H. Levy, who is associated with Louis D. Brandeis, as counsel for the National Cigar Leaf Tobacco Association, the Cigar Manufacturers' Association of America, and the Independent Tobacco Salesmen's Association, said:

"The disposition which the Circuit Court has made in the matter is unsatisfactory, and I shall advise the interests which I represent to take such steps as may be necessary to procure a review by the United States Supreme Court."

SOUND BEAUTIFUL TEETH.

Science—dental science, in the form of the Martinolar Method of replacing teeth in the mouth—has come to the aid of those who are in bad health because of bad teeth.

We offer you sound teeth for those which are loose or have been lost through disease or poor dentistry.

The Martinolar Method of replacing teeth without plates is the latest discovery in dental science, although we have been practising it now for eight years, and are able to show work that has been in the mouth that long, as sound and beautiful to-day as when it was first put in.

Briefly, the method is this: If you have two or more teeth in either jaw we can restore all you have lost with teeth that look, feel, act and for all practical purposes are the same as nature's.

The work is done practically without pain, calls for no great amount of your time in the chair, is not expensive, and will delight you when completed.

We invite you to call at our office for consultation and examination of your mouth, for which there will be no charge, and let us explain what we can do for you.

If you cannot call at once, send for our book, "Martinolar Dentistry." It is sent free on request.

DEMOCRATS TO WIN IN 1912, SAYS HARMON

SOME CRITICISM OF TAFT

President's Support of Cox Viewed as Depriving Him of the Prestige of Republican Victories Elsewhere.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—Gov. Harmon, basing his opinion upon the results in Ohio, Kentucky, Massachusetts, and other States, to-day predicted a Democratic landslide in the National elections to be held next year.

"To say that I am pleased," said the Governor, "is but feebly to express my delight. Next year I shall expect to see the Democratic legions win even greater victories. I consider yesterday's results a complete indorsement of the administration in Ohio as well as of Democratic policies throughout the country.

"One of the things that pleases me personally is the victory of Henry T. Hunt, the Democratic nominee for Mayor of Cincinnati, who, as Prosecuting Attorney, fought the Cox gang. For twenty-five years I tried to win away from the Republicans the rule of that city, and to-day I find that the voters have risen and broken the chains that bound them to Republicanism. I am most pleased."

The results are disappointing to President Taft's friends, so far as the President personally is concerned. As politicians view the situation, yesterday's balloting shows that the Republican Party is stronger than the President himself, but the results in Ohio are particularly disappointing to Republicans. They are complaining to-day that the President committed a political blunder in tying himself to the George B. Cox ticket in Cincinnati, and that the defeat of that ticket by the Democrats has largely offset the prestige that might have come to the President through Republican gains in other parts of the country.

The Cincinnati episode is regarded as another instance of the President being overwhelmed by his friends. Mr. Taft wanted to be accommodating in yielding to the persuasions of his Cincinnati friends to indorse a ticket representing the Cox organization, which only a few years before he had denounced so bitterly in his Akron speech. Mr. Taft has since explained that he personally knew the Republican candidates this year, and that the situation was entirely different from that which he denounced when he attacked Cox in 1907.

The Cincinnati election is expected to impress the country with the fact that President Taft was repudiated in the only instance in which he made a personal appeal in the campaign, while there were normal Republican gains in other quarters.

Democratic leaders declare the result in Ohio has given a decided impetus to the Harmon Presidential boom. Normally Cincinnati, Cleveland, and Columbus are dependably Republican, but the decided Democratic victories yesterday are taken as striking evidence of the strength of Gov. Harmon in his own State, especially over Mr. Taft.

MACK'S VIEWS ON ELECTIONS.

Thinks Local Conditions Operated—Sees Victory in 1912.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 8.—Norman E. Mack, Democratic National and State Committee Chairman, made the following statement of the result of the elections:

"The returns in the State indicate that local conditions predominated in the determination of the election. Some localities showed pronounced Democratic gains; others increases. The Democratic victory in New York City was most substantial, and the success of Thomas H. Dowd, in Cattaraugus, was remarkable. In other sections we apparently have not fared so well.

"The Republican success in Buffalo indicates that the people do not hold Mr. Ward responsible for the mismanagement which resulted in the collapse of the pumping station. On that issue the campaign was fought. The action of some Democratic leaders in joining hands with the Republican organization, the personality of Ward, the leading candidate on the Republican ticket, and the efforts of his strong personal organization, of course, were factors in the result.

"In Kentucky and the other States, where State elections were held, the Democrats have been successful, and the party in the Nation is in splendid condition.

"I look for a great Democratic victory in State and Nation next year."

HEARST CALLS IT A VICTORY.

Declares Boss Government Received Stinging Rebuke in City and State.

William Randolph Hearst, in a signed statement made yesterday on the election result, said:

"I do not see how any one interested in the cause represented by Fusion can fail to be happy over the results of this election. Boss government received a stinging rebuke in nearly every part of the State, an din nearly every county and borough of the City of New York. Boss Murphy lost his Assembly by an overwhelming majority. The repudiation of his domination of that body and of his Levy law and Mayor Gaynor's charter is complete.

"Boss government was rebuked and repudiated in Kings County and in Queens County and the Bronx, which ought to be a county and shall be one, and in Richmond and in part of Manhattan. The Board of Aldermen of New York County is lost to Murphy, and with it the Board of Elections, which for years has been merely the instrument of Tammany's outrageons election methods. The Sheriff and judicial candidates of Fusion in New York County failed of election by 2,000 or 3,000 votes, but to blame the candidates for that failure would be the height of cowardice, injustice, and ingratitude.

"Tammany has always been considered invincible in office in Manhattan. The Fusion county candidates who went into this battle against Tammany in Manhattan did so expecting to be defeated and willing to be sacrificed for the general good of the cause. These candidates were told by the Fusion Committee that they were named to bring out the independent vote generally, and, while the offices might not be quite important enough to justify their acceptance, the cause was so supremely important as to justify any sacrifice.

"The candidates accepted this view of the situation, did their duty to the public, and deserve the heartfelt thanks of all honest citizens. If they had not consented to make the race, Fusion would not have been possible and this great victory for honest government would have been lost.

"As it is, a great victory has been won."

consideration. The men sent back word that they had a strike headquarters at Eighth Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, and that if Commissioner Edwards had any word for them he could deliver it to their officials there.

The letters were posted on the bulletin board, and instructions were left with the foreman to have them read at the morning roll call.

To Commissioner Edwards Mayor Gaynor wrote:

> In regard to the threatened strike of the drivers and garbage collectors of your department, be so good as to notify them at once by general order to strike just as soon as they see fit. And see to it that not one of the strikers gets back into the city employment again. We can get along without them. It will inconvenience the householders for a few days, but they will stand it patiently. Let the contract system be resorted to if necessary. The city pays the men of your department the highest wages for the shortest hours, and in addition a pension law was passed for them last Winter. If they think they can make the city conform to their dictation by striking, they will find themselves grievously mistaken. The city's business has to be done as the charter prescribes, and no strike can force it to be done in any other way. The city is not in the position of a private employer and able to make any terms with its employes it sees fit. Yours very truly, W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

To the Mayor's warning Commissioner Edwards issued this General Order No. 1:

> I understand that there is some dissatisfaction in the department on account of night work. I want drivers of the Street Cleaning Department to thoroughly understand that night work will go on as usual, and any absentees or men failing to go to work will be dismissed from the department and never allowed to return. Stable foremen will suspend any man failing to go to work and will forward charges to the main office. WILLIAM H. EDWARDS,
> Street Cleaning Commissioner.

The five principal Manhattan barns from which the men walked out are Stable A, at Seventeenth Street and Avenue C; Stable B, in Fifty-second Street; Stable C, at 130th Street, near Broadway; Stable D, at 116th Street and Avenue A, and Stable R, at Rivington Street and the East River.

Garbage cans remained unemptied very generally throughout the city. General Organizer Ashton said that he had not advised the men to take a strike vote, and that personally he favored a longer delay to see if the city authorities could not be moved by public sentiment.

ADOPT COMMISSION RULE.

Salt Lake City and Sacramento for New Form of Government.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 8.—By the landslide, which yesterday overturned the "American" Party rule in Salt Lake City, the Citizens' Non-partisan Party gains the opportunity of being the first to set in motion a new scheme of government here on the commission plan. By a majority of 4,146 the entire Citizens' ticket was carried into office. The vote for Mayor was: Park, 15,061; Bransford, 10,915.

The "American" Party was organized to oppose Mormon control in local affairs, and has been in power since 1905. There is no question that the vote of the women electors, brought out in extraordinary numbers by recent reform agitation, was largely responsible for the overthrow of the "American" ticket. Dissensions within the party also were a factor.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 8.—Sacramento joined the cities having the commission form of government as a result of the municipal election yesterday. The new charter was adopted by a majority of 68 out of a total vote of more than 8,000.

WILSON PUTS BLAME OF DEFEAT ON SMITH

Says Legislature Is Republican Because Essex, ex-Senator's Stronghold, Was Lost to Democrats.

SOME DEMOCRATIC GAINS

14 Out of 17 Counties Elected Democratic Sheriffs—Friends Deny Wilson's Presidential Chances Are Hurt.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 8.—Gov. Wilson issued a statement to-day plainly indicating that he attributes a Republican majority in the Legislature this Winter to the defeat of the Democratic legislative ticket in Essex County, where he refused to aid in the campaign because it was ex-Senator James Smith, Jr.'s stronghold. Gov. Wilson Said:

"I of course deeply regret the loss of the House to my party, through the loss of Essex, and the failure to gain the Senate, but I look forward with great interest to the next session as affording an opportunity to the Republican leaders to fulfill the very explicit pledges of their platform. If they want, the session should be productive of legislation of considerable importance and benefit the State, and I shall earnestly hope for their co-operation in reforms planned in the interest of the whole State, which we are all sworn to serve."

The Senate will stand 11 to 10 in favor of the Republicans, while the Assembly will stand 37 to 23 in favor of the Republicans. The Republican candidates were successful in Camden, Essex, Gloucester, Somerset, and Union, while only Monmouth, Salem, and Warren went to the Democrats.

United States Senator Frank O. Briggs, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, said he considers the State still normally Republican and that the results indicated a return to a normal condition. He expressed the belief that the counties which have not returned to Republican ranks this year will do so at the next election.

Edward E. Grosscup, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, stated:

"The election shows indubitably that New Jersey is still a Democratic State and that it will be found in the Democratic column in the forthcoming Presidential election. If this had been a Gubernatorial election the Democratic victory of 1910 would certainly have been repeated. The choice of Democratic Sheriffs in fourteen out of seventeen counties demonstrates this conclusively. Treachery within the party robbed the Democrats of the fruits of victory in the Legislature.

"The loss of a Democratic majority in the Assembly resulted from the defeat in Essex County, where the Democratic machine, the personal organization of former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., was renounced by a large body of voters."

The Democratic ticket, excepting Legislative, appears to have been particularly successful. Sheriffs were elected in seventeen counties. In fourteen the Democratic candidates won. Even the hidebound Republican counties in South Jersey, where Democracy is scarcely known—Camden, Salem, Gloucester, and Ocean—have chosen Democratic Sheriffs.

Friends of Gov. Wilson say that in spite of Smith's opposition the situation is exceptionally favorable to his Presidential aspirations. They say that the ten Democratic Senators are all of his following and that he will have ample opportunity to carry forward the reforms he has begun.

WILSON IN HIS HOME STATE.

Newspaper Views as to the Effect of Defeat on His Boom Vary.

From The Jersey Journal.

New Jersey has gone Republican. That is the broad fact, so far as the Legislature is concerned.

On the face of the returns it might appear that Gov. Wilson's Administration had not been indorsed by the people, but an analysis of the situation would hardly justify that view.

The Democratic slump occurs in Essex, but in that county the election of the Democratic Assembly ticket of the Smith-Nugent machine would have been a more significant blow at the Wilson policies than is the election of Republicans. The result in Essex is due to local complications. The Wilson Administration was not the issue there, except in so far as it was represented in the candidacy of Senator Harry V. Osborne, and Osborne's defeat is explainable by attacks made upon him in connection with bankruptcy matters. The Democratic ticket as well as the Republican ticket in Essex, with the exception of Osborne, was openly anti-Wilson.

What effect the loss of the Legislature on joint ballot will have upon Wilson's chances for the Presidential nomination cannot be anticipated. It may have no effect at all.

From The Newark Star,
(Ex-Senator Smith's paper.)

The Legislature of 1912 will be Republican in both branches. Naturally, the Democratic voters of the State will ask the why and wherefore of this signal reverse in a year when the party should have retained the Assembly and won the Senate. Nor is the cause far to seek. A year ago the Democratic organization was a unit, and by united and enthusiastic efforts won a victory unexampled in its history. It emerged from that election brimful of confidence and ready for the campaign this year. How this splendid organization was shattered need not be told. The shadow of a Presidential ambition fell across its path, Democratic policies were perverted, men were seduced from their party allegiance to serve a personal ambition, and disruption and demoralization followed. The result is witnessed in an election in which the Democracy was thrown out of the great advantages it had secured save the Governorship, which the party hardly has any reason to claim. It has met defeat and humiliation. Gov. Wilson, who on the eve of the election assured Democrats that all would be well, can contemplate the results, for which he cannot disavow responsibility, and reflect that a Presidential candidate who has been signally beaten in his State has a doubtful claim to present in a National nominating convention.

NEW MEXICO IS IN DOUBT.

Democrats Claim Entire State and Congressional Ticket.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 8.—On the face of complete returns from about one-half of the election districts of the State and estimates on the balance, Democrats claim the election of McDonald for Governor and the entire Democratic State and Congressional ticket by majorities estimated at 4,700.

Republican managers decline to concede their defeat. Every Republican county heard from thus far shows reduced majorities, while the Democratic counties all give increased majorities.

Bernalillo County, hitherto strongly Republican, gives majorities for the Democratic ticket averaging 1,200.

GORMAN DEFEATED BY 2,500.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8.—The voters of Maryland have rebuked the Democrats by probably 2,500 majority, and Arthur P. Gorman, who represents all that his father did in politics, will not be Governor. Goldsborough, the Republican candidate, who stood for everything the Gormans did not, is elected.

Edgar Allan Poe and Emerson C. Harrington, Democrats, for Attorney General and Controller, respectively, were elected by comfortable pluralities, although earlier in the day it looked as though Mr. Goldsborough would carry with him his associates on the State ticket for these two offices.

NO COUNT ON AMENDMENTS.

The Result May Not Be Known Until the End of the Month.

Nobody connected with the election machinery of this city knew anything yesterday about the vote on the constitutional amendments, nor when the figures would be ready for publication.

Clerk Daly of the Board of Elections said they might be ready in about ten days, but it might take longer. The Board of Aldermen, he said, would begin canvassing the vote the latter part of this month and the result might be learned then.

The police took the figures on election night, but did not tabulate them. Heretofore the complete returns on proposed amendments to the Constitution have not been obtained for many weeks after the election.

FOSS A LONE VICTOR.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—Although Gov. Eugene N. Foss will be chief executive of Massachusetts for another year he will, as in the past year, be surrounded by Republicans, for he was the only Democratic candidate on the State ticket to pull through at the election yesterday.

Revision of press figures by comparison with nearly 100 mail returns received up to this morning from town and city clerks showed a slight gain for Foss, making his plurality 8,008. This is one of the smallest margins by which a Governor was ever elected in this State. David I. Walsh, the candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket, although leading the other Democratic candidates, with the exception of the Governor, failed of election by nearly 7,000 votes.

ELECTIONS STIMULATE PRESIDENTIAL HOPES

NEW YORK A PIVOTAL STATE

President Said to Rely on Barnes to Bring About Nomination—Harmon's Chances Improved.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Judging by the comment of politicians to-day the election of yesterday was the most eminently satisfactory all round that has been held in a great many years. It made no difference in Washington to-day what brand of politics the man holds to, he found something to be happy over in the result.

Democrats were gleeful over the showing in Ohio, the defeat of the Cox machine in Cincinnati despite the support of the President; the re-election of Foss in Massachusetts and the smashing blow to the Penrose machine in Philadelphia.

Regular Republicans pointed with pride to the reduction of the Foss plurality; to the upset of Woodrow Wilson in New Jersey; to the overthrow of the Gorman machine in Maryland and to the recapture of the Assembly in New York.

Progressive Republicans were happiest of all. They saw rainbows all around the horizon, and it didn't make much difference which way they were looking. Being against machine politics, they rejoice over the downfall of Republican and Democratic machines alike. So the result in Philadelphia was as pleasing to them as that in Cincinnati or Maryland. They even saw a rosy tint about the Massachusetts vote on the ground that it was a setback for the Lodge-Crane machine. And the increase in the Socialist vote in various cities and districts furnished ample cause for rejoicing for the Socialists.

It was just about as difficult to get a regular Republican to talk about the result in Philadelphia as it was to get a Democrat to discuss the outcome in Maryland or New Jersey. Each had too many happier subjects for consideration. But there was one thing on which a semblance of agreement was to be had. That was that the upset in New Jersey was bound to affect the chances of Gov. Wilson for the Presidential nomination of next year. Wilson enthusiasts were hardly willing to admit that the blow was serious, however, and some of them promptly claimed that it had been discounted. It was charged to treachery on the part of the old organization, with which the Governor had such a fight last Winter during the session of the Legislature.

There is no discounting the fact that the Harmon stock took on a boom because of yesterday's results. It was pointed out that this is the third test for him, and at every trial his support has been stronger than before. There was some disposition here to-day to say that the upset in New Jersey would put Gov. Wilson clear out of the running, but it is apparent that that is going too far. A vigorous effort may now be expected to minimize the effect on his Presidential chances.

The most solid consolation from the whole situation comes to the regular Republicans, and from New York. It is recognized by the leaders of both parties that New York will be the pivotal State next year. Neither side can win without it. New York will cast 45 votes in the next Electoral College—as many as Ohio and Indiana together, or more than half a dozen of the insurgent Republican States of the Northwest. If he can carry New York the President can afford to lose the insurgent States, without taking the trouble to fight for them, and still be sure of re-election. His supporters here have been counting most hopefully on the disastrous results of Murphy's control of the Legislature last Winter.

Now they are confident that with ordinary care on the part of the Republican leaders the State can be held in the Republican column in the Presidential election. Some of them are frank enough to admit that they would rather have the leadership in other hands than those of William Barnes, Jr., but then again Barnes has friends who point out that he has been singularly successful in Albany County, and that he is shrewd enough to make no glaring mistakes at this very critical juncture.

The La Follette fighters declared that the election meant the nomination and election of their man. Col. Houser, Medill McCormick, and Col. Hanan, who are in charge at the Progressive Headquarters, declined to give out any statement to the newspapers. They said that was not necessary; the public and the newspapers could judge of the results and analyze them all too well and too completely to make any statement necessary. The assertions that are made for the Progressive movement are:

1. More than ever it is clear Taft cannot be elected if nominated.
2. Telegrams from leading Progressives in Ohio affirm that the President now cannot hope to secure an undivided delegation.
3. Telegrams from leading Southern Republicans to-day indicate that there will be a break in several States from the Administration programme to carry all the Southern delegates for Taft, and that there will surely be La Follette delegates from that section.
4. The defeat of the Penrose machine in Philadelphia is taken to mean that La Follette will get a share of the delegation from Pennsylvania. It is urged that Penrose must adhere to his progressive feint to keep himself from political annihilation.
5. Telegrams from Massachusetts interpret the re-election of Foss as a turndown for Lodge and Crane and the certainty of a portion of the delegation from that State for La Follette.
6. The Republican Progressives have all along said that their greatest apprehension was a contest between La Follette and Wilson. Now they foresee that Harmon has the advantage. And against Harmon they declare their man can be elected.

It is the Progressive belief that Taft must now decide whether he will continue to be a candidate or formally withdraw. They think that if the latter course is decided upon La Follette is within striking distance of the nomination and must surely win. But it is believed that the regular leaders will insist that for Taft to withdraw now would be to confess party weakness, and they will to the last urge the President to stay in.

The Progressives are also talking of the possibility that the majority of the regular leaders in the Republican Party being convinced of the desperate prospect for Taft will finally decide to have a square deal in the National Convention, bring on a Donnybrook contest, finish up the blood-letting, and nominate La Follette to save the party, the regulars magnanimously giving him support and trusting to subsequent events to save the President's face.

Senator La Follette, who is at his home here busily at work on his autobiography, excused himself from making any observations on the results of yesterday's election.

MAGAZINE BOOMERS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Frank Orff, John F. B. Atkin, E. B. Yates, and Lee Sidwell Charged with Mail Frauds.

LOCKED UP AWAITING BAIL

Crooked Work in Merger of Columbian Company, Which Afterward Bought Hampton's, Say Postal Men.

Frank Orff, President of the Columbian-Sterling Publishing Company, which took over Hampton's Magazine; John F. B. Atkin, a Philadelphia lawyer, who is supposed to have been a close adviser of Mr. Orff, and Lee Sidwell, Secretary of the company, were arrested yesterday by Post Office Inspectors on the charge of using the mails to defraud, not only in connection with the sale of the stock of the Columbian-Sterling Company, but also in connection with the merging of the old Columbian Magazine Publishing Company and the Western Publishing Company into the Columbian-Sterling Company.

Lee Sidwell was arrested at his home, 131 East 110th Street. He didn't happen to see in the afternoon newspapers that his associates were in trouble, and the arrival of Inspector McQuillan was a great surprise to him. He was locked up for the night in the West 100th Street Police Station.

The investigation has been in progress ever since the declaration of a 2½ per cent. dividend of the Columbian-Sterling Company on Sept. 1 aroused the suspicions of some of those who had invested in it. It has been carried on under the direction of Chief Inspector W. W. Dickson and Assistant United States District Attorney Brown by Post Office Inspector McQuillan, and the evidence in the case is now being laid before the Federal Grand Jury. The company went into bankruptcy on Oct. 12.

Atkin unexpectedly aided in his own arrest. He came down yesterday morning to the Federal Building to see McQuillan, and was, much to his surprise, taken into custody. He was arraigned before Commissioner Shields shortly before noon, and Assistant United States District Attorney Brown stated that, as the frauds were very extensive, not less than $15,000 bail should be set. Atkin was not represented by counsel, and, in default of being able to raise such a large amount of bail at short notice, was sent to the Tombs.

The Post Office Inspectors believed that Orff was in St. Louis, and the warrant for his arrest was there on Monday. Yesterday morning, however, Inspector McQuillan learned that he might be found in a Christian Science office in the Metropolitan Building, and, without giving his name, he telephoned up to ask Orff to wait to see him till 12:30 o'clock, as he had an important matter of business to discuss with him.

Orff agreed to wait, but he was gone when McQuillan arrived, and was not expected back till 1:30. The Inspector waited and arrested him in the corridor of the building at 2 o'clock. When he was arraigned before Commissioner Shields he also was held in $15,000 bail and sent to the Tombs in default of it.

E. B. Yates was arrested last evening at his home, 1,914 Avenue I, Brooklyn. He gave his occupation as that of salesman. He was locked up for the night.

The complaints received by the Post Office officials are based on the declaration of Sept. 1, just three months after the Columbian-Sterling Publishing Company came into existence, of a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent., which the circulars sent out by the company said was to be paid "out of surplus." It was learned from anxious inquiries sent in from all over the country that this declaration was inducing many persons to keep up the payments of installments on the stock they had subscribed for, and also to exchange for shares in the Columbian-Sterling Company the stock they had held in the companies which had been merged in it. The dividend was payable by Oct. 10 and all the old stock had to be exchanged by Sept. 29. As a matter of fact, the investigation by the Post Office Inspectors caused the Directors of the Columbian-Sterling to rescind the resolution for the payment of the dividend.

The Post Office Inspectors contend that far from there being any profits as a result of the first quarter's operations of the new company, there was actually a deficit of $242,524, and that the only means by which even a bookkeeping surplus could be shown was by charging to capital and good will a large number of regular running expenses.

The Columbian-Sterling Company was formed on June 1 last by the consolidation of the Columbian Magazine Publishing Company of St. Louis with Orff's Western Publishing Company. The day after it was launched it purchased all Benjamin Hampton's shares in Hampton's Magazine and thus acquired control of that property as well. The Columbian Magazine Company was organized in May, 1895, under the laws of Delaware, with a capital of $500,000, which was afterward increased to $1,500,000. It published The Columbian Magazine and The Home Magazine.

It had been paying in its last days quarterly dividends of 4 per cent. each, which the Post Office Inspectors stated yesterday had never been earned, and were taken from the capital. Its President was Joseph Brunton Haynes, and its Secretary Lee Sidwell. E. B. Yates was the Director who was in charge of the sale of its stock.

The Western Publishing Company was incorporated about a year ago under the laws of Missouri with a capital of $2,000. A few days later it was reincorporated, this time in Delaware, with a capital of $1,000,000. It published The Sterling Magazine, Orff's Farm Review, and The American Women's Review. At the time of the merger, according to the Post Office authorities, its tangible assets were about $20,000, which were balanced by liabilities of a like amount. It was taken into the consolidation at $562,500, and the new company had to assume its debts. The value put on The Columbian Magazine at this time was $1,243,000, though it has since been stated to the receivers of the Columbian-Sterling Company that it had liabilities to the amount of $600,000, and its assets were nil.

The Columbian-Sterling Company was capitalized at $4,000,000, of which 2,700,000 $1 shares were outstanding on Sept. 1. The purchase of Benjamin Hampton's shares in Hampton's Magazine was made the day after the new company was floated, and it thus got control of the magazine and responsibility for its debts of $200,000.

Hampton received at first 657,000 shares in the new company. But the minority shareholders of Hampton's began to complain of the arrangement, by which they were to exchange their stock at 50 per cent. of its face value for shares in the Columbian-Sterling Company, and he relinquished some of his shares to enable them to make the exchange at par value. In the end Mr. Hampton received for his shares $34,000 in cash and $334,000 in notes from the Columbian-Sterling Company.

It was supposed that part of the assets of the Western Publishing Company which the Columbian-Sterling would acquire would be a fine printing plant. Mrs. Annie Orff, wife of the defendant Orff, has, however, served notice on the receiver of the Columbian-Sterling Company that the plant is hers, it having reverted to her, she contends, in consequence of the failure of the publishing company that had owned the plant to live up to the terms of a bill of sale.

A good deal of the stock of the bankrupt company has been sold, it was learned yesterday, from the office of James H. Barlow & Co., in the Cambridge Building, Thirty-third Street and Fifth Avenue. This purported to be a regular brokerage firm, but it will be alleged by the Government that Barlow was a racing man, who had permitted the promoters of the Columbian-Sterling Company the use of his name in return for a small weekly salary.

Very comfortable salaries, the Post Office Inspectors declare, were paid to those connected with the defunct company. Orff was drawing $18,000 a year, Atkin $13,000 and Lee Sidwell $7,500.

Orff, when he was arrested, protested his innocence. He declared that he had only been in New York for 138 days, and that when he went into the merger he had not thoroughly understood the condition of the companies involved.

Asked about the 2½ per cent. dividend declared on Sept. 1, he explained that, as President, he had merely accepted the report of the auditors, who were better acquainted than himself with the condition of the business. Even such authorization as he had given for the payment of the dividend was with the proviso that it must be approved by the counsel of the company, and as they did not approve the dividend had not been paid.

GEN. CHANG'S ARMY MOVING ON PEKING

Leader's Attitude in Doubt, but City Is Not Likely to Fall Without a Struggle.

PANIC HAS BECOME ACUTE

Valuables Sent to Legations—Viceroy Declines to Surrender Tien-Tsin —Battle at Nanking.

PEKING, Nov. 8.—Two men are on the way to Peking whose coming is anxiously awaited. One of the men is Liang Chi-Chiao, the noted exile, who is considered the most influential Chinese of letters. He is believed to be returning here from Japan to take an active part in the work of reform. The other is Gen. Chang Shao-Tsen, commander of the Lan-Chow troops, who forced promises from the administration of a constitutional Government.

Gen. Chang has refused an appointment as an imperial envoy to conciliate the people of the north on the ground that his troops desired to remain under his command, and he is now on his way to the capital at the summons of the Government, probably for the purpose of a broad discussion of the situation with the administration, if that is possible.

There is no question of the seriousness of the situation in Peking. The foreign residents for the present are amply protected, but thousands upon thousands of the natives are terror-stricken, and they fear the approach of Chang Shao-Tsen, who may not come alone.

In the National Assembly to-day members asked what measures had been taken for the protection of the people of Peking against Gen. Chang, and the question was also raised as to whether he was coming at the head of his troops. No member of the Government was present to reply to these questions, but the President of the Assembly answered that Chang was accompanied by his soldiers, and that the palace had evidently ordered him here because he stood for the best that they could now hope for—a constitutional monarchy—unless his ideas had changed since the murder of Gen. Wu Lu-Cheng.

It was Gen. Chang's intention to proceed to Peking anyway, but the foreigners controlling the railway opposed this prior to the Government's order.

The only Government here at present seems to consist of the Regent, Prince Chun, and ex-Premier Ching. They are without support. The Ministers, if they have not already deserted their posts, are busy packing their valuables, while criticising the Regent and Prince Ching. These two officials are ready to acquiesce in anything in an endeavor to prevent their exile, but certain Manchu elements are unwilling to surrender, not realizing the seriousness of their position.

The opinion is held at the legations that Gen. Chang cannot capture Peking without a struggle. He may be permitted to enter, but a fight is bound to occur before the Manchus surrender their privileges. Furthermore, the Manchus' actions somewhat belie their words. They are undoubtedly preparing for a siege and are storing quantities of rice in the barracks.

The Palace's loyal garrison has been increased by small bodies of picked men. A thousand have arrived from Shang-Chun.

The Chinese are being outwitted and are being sent outside the walls. The city gates have been overhauled and strengthened.

The Mukden Viceroy, Gen. Chao Erh-Hsun, is enlisting a new brigade of 12,000 Manchus.

Gen. Yin-Tchang and several other high officials and princes have taken refuge in the Legation quarter hotel, while other Manchus have sought shelter in the various Legations.

To-day witnessed the largest exodus from the capital since the revolution began. Sealed boxes of treasures have been coming into the Legations all day long. Ancient works of art appear on the Legation walls. These have been given to the members of the Legations for safekeeping.

Special trains drawn by double engines and packed with passengers are making continuous trips to Tien-Tsin.

An interesting statement regarding the plans of what was described as the Reformed Party was made to-night from a source that in the past has been found invariably to be correctly informed as to political affairs. According to this authority, Liang Chi-Chiao, the exiled Chinese editor and the most influential Chinese of letters, is returning to the capital from Japan for the purpose of directing the activities of the reformers, and taking a hand in the formation of a new reformed Cabinet. In a recent interview at his home in Suma, Japan, Liang said that the present crisis would bring to the front a man, who, at the time of the interview, had not appeared on the revolutionary stage. Whether Liang Chi-Chiao is to be the political "dark horse" is not revealed in to-night's statement.

However, according to the statement, many of the Viceroy's followers are in sympathy with the new party suggested, which also claims to have the support of a majority of the National Assembly. The National Assembly, by the way, is at odds with a section of the revolutionists for having indorsed the plan for a limited monarchy instead of demanding a republic.

The troops in the north, it is stated, are united in the interests of the reformed party and are deliberately bringing pressure to bear on the Government to promote Liang's plan.

In conclusion, the informant declared that Yuan Shi-Kai obtained the Premiership only because of the influence of Prince Ching, the deposed Premier, and that Yuan was without any great following among the Chinese people. The latter assertion is beyond denial, despite Yuan's recognized statesmanship.

The statement makes it clear that powerful influences are at work with a view to supremacy when the chaotic conditions now existing have shattered the present Government and have been in turn replaced by a stable authority.

LAN-CHOW, Nov. 8.—Gen. Chang Shao-Tsen, who has been summoned to Peking, to-day explained that his refusal to accept the post of pacificator was due to the unwillingness of his troops that he should leave them.

He added that after he had heard of the murder of Gen. Wu Lu-Cheng he had firmly decided not to proceed against the rebels unless he went on a mission of peace. He considers that too much blood has been shed already, and he favors peace, to be followed by a constitutional Government, but he doubts the sincerity of the throne.

TIEN-TSIN, Nov. 8.—The Viceroy has declined to surrender Tien-tsin to the revolutionists. He, together with other officials, met the leading gentry and the sympathizers with the revolutionary movement to-night, and after an amicable discussion of the question he officially announced that Tien-Tsin would not surrender.

As the people desire to avoid a conflict they may defer taking over the Government until the situation reaches a more mature stage, knowing that the Viceroy will be unable to withstand their demands for any length of time.

Details of the murder of Gen. Wu Lu-Cheng on Nov. 7 at the military encampment at Shi-kia-Chung have been brought in by fugitive railway officials. They say that the Manchu troops suspected Gen. Wu of co-operating with Gen. Chang Shao-Tsen, in command of the Lan-Chow troops, in a plan to attack Peking from the north and south simultaneously. The Manchus declared that Gen. Wu was negotiating with representatives of the Shan-Si rebels who came under a white flag. They believed that he was arranging for a union with those men.

The camp at Shi-kia-Chuang was startled at the dead of night by a fusilade. Chinese, rushing to the General's camp, found his headless body in the roadway and documents scattered broadcast. The railway officials say that they themselves found a printed proclamation ready to post up.

International troops here are held in readiness for any emergency. They will be commanded, if they act, by a Japanese General as senior officer.

It is reported that the ex-Minister of War, Yin-Tchang, has recommended a general massacre of the Chinese by the Manchus.

NANKING, Nov. 8.—The people of this ancient city of China, who had clung to the hope of a settlement of the present difficulties without bloodshed, were awakened early to-day by the sounds of heavy firing. The long-dreaded attack by the revolutionists had begun.

The final word from the Manchu General in command of the imperial troops occupying the heights of Purple Mountain, which overlooks the town, was a refusal of all the demands made by the reformers.

Several thousand new troops attacked this stronghold with rifles and field guns, but were repulsed with the loss of more than 100 killed. They are now occupying the lower ground and are prepared to renew the assault.

The Manchus are strongly intrenched and well armed, while the reformers are short of ammunition. The struggle is likely to be prolonged, though it is reported that there is much disaffection among the imperial troops.

Several thousand Manchus out of a garrison of 10,000 have left the city on the pretext of joining the loyal army in the North.

At Ching-Kiang 3,000 Manchu rifles with munitions of war have been turned over to the reformers.

All foreigners are safe. The Germans, Americans, and British have landed marines and guards for the Consulates.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 8.—Latest advices received here say that the attempt of the insurgents to seize Nankin was only partially successful. They were repulsed at some points, but captured the armory and forts behind the city. They lost more than 100 men killed. At the south gate 2,000 imperialists joined the revolutionaries on receipt of 300,000 taels, ($200,000.)

The Manchu General, Chang-Chun, is still holding out. The foreign residents have either left the city or taken refuge in the consulates.

In Shanghai the revolutionaries are trying to force the Taotai to give up the seals of his office and the Government securities. This, however, he has refused to do, it is understood, on the advice of the Consuls. The revolutionaries are short of money and are levying contributions on the wealthy citizens. Sixty thousand taels were abstracted by force from the coffers of one unwilling merchant.

The military Government to-day issued a long proclamation calling upon all Chinese to join in the life-and-death struggle and exhorting the population of the lower provinces against disorders and to regard the rights of foreigners everywhere. The proclamation further promises the abolition of many taxes hitherto imposed by "the 5,000,000 nomadic tribesmen, who 200 years ago were supported by the liver and brain of 400,000,000 descendants of Han."

Che-Foo has requested the presence of an American warship, and Rear Admiral Murdock, commander of the American Asiatic squadron, who is here, will probably comply with the request.

Tai-Chow, a city in the Province of Che-Kiang, 75 miles southwest of Ning-Po, surrendered to the revolutionists to-day without resistance.

HONGKONG, Nov. 8.—The revolutionists attacked the Wong-ting-Fong, Li-Long, Pokut, and Sham-Chun stations on the Chinese section of the Canton-Kowloon Railway last night and seized arms and ammunition.

The employes of the railway escaped to the British concession. Foreigners were unharmed.

The revolutionists also demolished the Custom House at Sham-Chun.

Reports from Macao describe a Chinese rising in the Chin-San and Heung-Shan districts. The commander of the imperial troops was killed.

AMOY, Thursday, Nov. 9.—It is reported that the Tartar General of Foo-Chow was assassinated last night.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 9.—A dispatch to The Daily Telegraph from Peking says that Sir John Jordan, the British Minister, visited Prince Ching yesterday and warned him most seriously that any repetition of Boxerism in the capital would bring condign punishment.

The Daily Mail's Peking correspondent says that gold bars to the value of $30,000,000 hav ebeen removed from the palace and deposited in the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank.

BARBARITIES AT HANKOW

Perpetrated by Both Sidees—Two-thirds of the City Burned.

HANKOW, Nov. 5, (by way of Wu-Hu, Nov. 8.—Two-thirds of the city of Hankow has been destroyed by fire.

The lowest estimate of the loss is $50,000,000. Four hundred thousand persons are destitute.

Hundreds of half-burned bodies lie among the ruins. Many of them are the bodies of women and children.

The Custom House, the Post Office, and the American missions have been spared. The city has been looted, the Imperialists taking a hand in the pillage. Imperialist officers tried to check this, and executed a number of the soldiers. Refugees were deprived of their loot on entering the British concession, cartloads of valuable furs, silks, and jewelry being seized. It is suggested that the Red Cross receive the proceeds.

On Friday afternoon the Consuls appealed to the Imperialists to cease burning the town. A proclamation, which was issued immediately, declared that the rebels were responsible for the fires, and ordered that these be checked. The following day new fires started in various quarters.

The David Hill Memorial School for the Blind, connected with the Wesleyan mission, has been looted, while, in contrast, all the mission property in Wu-Chang, which is held by the revolutionaries, has been protected.

On Nov. 3 there was considerable artillery firing, beginning before daylight. The Imperial battery behind Hankow moved to the southwest in belated fulfillment of the promise to shift the line of fire from the concessions. This battery and another stationed in the plains engaged in a heavy duel with Han-Yang Hill. The Wu-Chang forts used powder occasionally, and joined in the defense of Han-Yang.

A few hundred of the revolutionists are still in Hankow. Sniping riflemen on opposite sides of the Han River fought all day Saturday, and there has been similar fighting to-day, but steadily decreasing in volume. There is much open revolutionary talk among the Imperialists.

Foreigners who have not had an opportunity of witnessing the engagements except at a distance are hearing horrifying stories of brutality. The Imperialists have hanged men, and, failing to strangle them, tortured them to death, prodding them with bayonets or crushing them to death with stones. The outrages on women cannot be told. Red Cross bearers have been killed or wounded. Soldiers on both sides have slaughtered their wounded enemies.

It was ascertained last night that Yuan Shi-Kai is in this neighborhood, but he is keeping his presence hidden. It is suspected that he went on board a British gunboat, and it is reported that he has been interviewing Republican leaders secretly.

A thousand revolutionary soldiers from Hu-Nan reached Wu-Chang yesterday. At I-Chang and other river ports the Republicans are collecting the customs dues. Secret societies, it is reported, are gaining control in Sze-Chuen. The mobs at Ku-Kiang are violent.

The revolutionaries commandeered a British tug which was proceeding upriver with two lighters of coal. It was suspected that the coal was destined for Admiral Sah's fleet. A British gunboat made a demand for the captured boats, which were afterward restored to the revolutionists.

Two thousand trained soldiers have arrived from the Pe-Yang district in Kiang-Si. A night or two ago the forts sank an Imperialist gunboat which was seeking to pass down the river accompanied by torpedo boats. The latter escaped.

NO LOAN TO CHINA YET.

Bankers, Including J. P. Morgan, Jr., Meet in Paris and Reach Decision.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Representatives of the American, French, and English bankers interested in the Chinese currency reform loan met at the offices of the Indo-China Bank to-day and discussed the new situation resulting from the revolution in China and the probable effect of the change of Government on the flotation of the loan.

It was the unanimous opinion of those present that the situation in China was critical, and accordingly it was decided that no action should be taken in furthering the loan, at least until the atmosphere had cleared.

J. P. Morgan, Jr., was present at the conference.

Portuguese Ministry Resigns.

LISBON, Nov. 8.—As a result of the opposition of the Parliamentary group, headed by Antonio Almeida, the Ministry of Premier Chagas resigned to-day.

ing of the City of London Conservative Association this afternoon, announced to his constituents his retirement from the leadership of the Opposition. Impaired health, increasing age, and the desirability of the leadership passing into younger hands were the reasons which he gave for this step in a speech which was marked by much feeling.

No one doubts, however, that the increasing attacks against him by the ambitious younger Conservatives, particularly the Tariff Reformers, were the principal factors in inspiring Mr. Balfour's decision.

While a number of influential Unionists and would-be leaders, notably Austen Chamberlain and F. E. Smith, have been demanding his retirement from the leadership, few believed that Mr. Balfour would drop the helm in such an important stage of the party's fortunes. The announcement was a sharp surprise to all parties, and made an immense political sensation.

No sooner was Mr. Balfour's withdrawal known than reports were circulated that Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition in the House of Lords, who has also been attacked by the younger Unionists, would accompany his colleague to the background, but Lord Lansdowne issued a denial of this to-night.

Mr. Balfour will remain in the House of Commons, although he would be elevated to the peerage if he so desired. While he, as ex-Premier, was recognized as the leader of the whole party, the leadership will now be divided, his successor sharing it with Lord Lansdowne. That successor will, it is believed, be the Right Hon. Walter Hume Long. A caucus has been called for Monday for the purpose of choosing a new leader.

Mr. Long commands the confidence of both the older and younger elements of the party. Advanced Tariff Reformers favor Austen Chamberlain, while Sir Edward Carson and F. E. Smith cherish ambitions to fill Mr. Balfour's shoes.

Mr. Balfour was received in audience this afternoon by the King and informed his Majesty of his decision.

Many Conservatives contend that the condition of his health was the only reason for Mr. Balfour's retirement. Some members of the Halsbury Club, which was reputed to be working for that object, point out that the club adopted a resolution of confidence in Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne only last Monday. They say that leading members threatened to resign if Mr. Balfour's retirement was made a plank of the club's programme.

The Liberals and the Irish Nationalists join the Unionists in regretting that the House of Commons' debates will lose a great share of interest when the figure to whom followers and opponents alike conceded intellectual preeminence is no longer in the forefront of the battle.

Dissatisfaction with Mr. Balfour as leader has long been growing among the tariff reformers, who criticised his apparent lack of conviction on that issue, and it gained great impetus when he advised the House of Lords to swallow the Veto bill.

Mr. Balfour has long been in a most difficult position as a result of the many disasters that have befallen the Unionist Party. He has been accused of lack of courage, indecisiveness, and bad judgment, while his apparently half-hearted support of the policy of protection and imperial preference has antagonized a large body of the parliamentary Opposition.

Nevertheless, his resignation of the leadership comes as a surprise. The latest number of Punch to reach this country contained a page cartoon in which Mr. Balfour was depicted as Charles II. and Austen Chamberlain as the Duke of York at a fancy dress ball, and Mr. Balfour was represented as saying that he was in no danger from the rivalry of Mr. Chamberlain.

Within the last few weeks, however, the open opposition to Mr. Balfour had become so pronounced that even such a philosophical mind as his must have felt that matters were approaching a crisis. It was said, truly or untruly, that the motto of the new Halsbury Club, opened a few days ago with a membership including the most bitter of Mr. Balfour's enemies, was "B. M. G."—"Balfour Must Go." The octogenarian Lord Halsbury, ex-Lord Chancellor, was the leader of the Unionist clique that was for fighting the Lords' Veto bill to the last, as against the counsels of Mr. Balfour and the Marquis of Lansdowne, who felt that the cause of Unionism would be irrevocably ruined if the House of Lords were flooded by the creation of hundreds of Liberal peers.

It is said that Mr. Balfour entered political life some thirty-five years ago as the result of an ultimatum from his physician—either he must find something to interest him intensely or die. At any rate, the then young man, of good family, rich, and a nephew of the late Lord Salisbury, entered Parliament, and before long was private secretary to Lord Salisbury when the latter was Foreign Secretary. In 1885-86 he was Secretary of the Local Government Board and afterward Secretary for Scotland. It was not, however, until 1887, when Mr. Balfour was 39 years old, that he really showed his capacity. He then became Chief Secretary for Ireland, and in the course of his administration the Crimes act was put into force. The Irish in Parliament hated him so intensely that, paradox as it may seem, they almost came to love him, and the verbal duels between him and the Irish leaders in the House of Commons are to this day remembered as among the most notable battles that Parliament has ever known. His manner was calculated to infuriate even the calmest of his opponents. He never lost his temper, and always seemed bored, even when the most violent invectives were hurled at him.

Mr. Balfour became Government leader in the House of Commons upon the death of the Right Hon. W. H. Smith, and throughout the session of 1892 he displayed increasing ability in leading the Unionist Party. With the return of Gladstone to power, Mr. Balfour directed his speeches against the home rule measure for Ireland. On the return of the Unionist Party to power in 1895 he again became leader of the House. In the affairs of Egypt, West Africa, and China, the Jameson raid, and the Boer war Mr. Balfour was at all times in the front of intense political agitation. His leadership, while aggressive, was always marked with a courtliness and tact that won him favor from both sides.

When the recent crisis arose over the passage of the Veto bill Mr. Balfour found himself for the first time at odds with a considerable portion of the party he was leading. The supreme test on the Veto bill was its acceptance or rejection by the House of Lords, and if it were rejected the creation of a large number of peers to force it through the upper house was certain. In this emergency Mr. Balfour was for concession without forcing the issue of creating new peers, whereas Lord Halsbury took the lead of the conservative element known as the "Die-hards," determined to resist the veto measure to the last. The policy of Mr. Balfour prevailed despite this split, and the Veto bill was accepted by the House of Lords.

The result, however, left a deep impression, and much resentment in some quarters, and it was felt that, however wide Mr. Balfour's concession had been from a political point of view, it had seriously crippled his leadership.

Mr. Balfour is one of the most cultured and literary political leaders England has ever known. His "Defense of Philosophic Doubt," written when he was 31 years old, is still a much quoted work. He was President of the British Association in 1904, when he delivered one of the most notable Presidential addresses in the history of that famous institution, and he was one of the original "Souls"—that strange aggregation of philosophers and social leaders of which the true story is yet to be written. Premier Asquith and his wife, the latter the original of "Dodo," were other "Souls."

THE PROBLEM OF THE TRUSTS

Discussed by Samuel Gompers in the Seventh of a Series of Articles by Eminent Men of Affairs—President of American Federation of Labor Discusses Difference Between Trusts and Unions, and the Right of a Freeman to Sell His Labor.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS.

PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Modern business cannot be conducted upon the old notions. Development in industry does not admit of it. Development in transportation does not admit of it. The development and transmission of information does not admit of it.

Organized labor has realized for a long time, and realizes now—perhaps clearer now than ever before—the necessity for the fullest and the freest hand in the operation of business and industry and the performance of labor, and that, in so far as interference by the Government is concerned, it should be of the least possible character.

Since the United States Supreme Court decided that labor unions are punishable under trust penalties, we feel that it is necessary to point out how widely different is a labor union from a trust; for upon these vital and fundamental differences of the two are based the main reasons for the insistence that the voluntary organizations of labor shall not, under the law, be regarded as in the same category as trusts and illegal combinations in restraint of trade.

A labor organization is not a trust; none of its attributes, methods, or achievements in behalf of its members and society at large can properly be confounded with whatever is pernicious and selfish in the activities of the trusts.

Analysis of Labor.

A trust, even at its best, is an organization to monopolize the production and control the distribution of material products. The voluntary association of the workers for mutual benefit and assistance is essentially different. Even if they seek to control the disposition of their labor power, the power to labor is not a material commodity. It is not a product; it is the personal power of a human being.

The human power to produce is the antithesis of the material commodities which become the subject of trust control.

The ownership of a freeman is vested in himself alone. The only reason for the ownership of bondmen or slaves is the ownership of their labor power by their masters. If freemen's ownership of themselves involves their labor power, none but themselves are owners of their labor power.

The product of a freeman is his own. If he, by choice or by reason of his environment, sells his labor power to another and is paid a wage in return therefor, this wage is his own.

These propositions are so essentially true that they are the underlying philosophy upon which is based the entire structure of private property. To question or to attempt to destroy these principles involves the entire structure of civilized society.

Right to Sell or Withhold.

The freeman's ownership of himself and his labor power implies that he may sell it to another or withhold it; that he and others similarly situated may sell their labor power or withhold it; that no man has even an implied right in the labor of another; that freemen may sell their labor power under stress of their needs, or they may withhold it to obtain more advantageous returns.

Any legislation or court construction dealing with the subject of combinations, corporations, or trusts which deal in control, curtail, or corner the products of labor, can have no true application to the association of freemen in the disposition or withholding of their labor power.

While realizing the necessity for a freer hand in industry and commerce, untrammeled by government cramping, and therefore such a change in existing law as will secure these results, I am quite convinced that it is far more important for industry, commerce, labor, and the representatives of free institutions that the activities of the wage earners, the wealth producers, in the opportunities for the protection and promotion of their rights and interests have predominating importance.

PANAMA CANAL COST SO FAR $293,561,486

Estimates Call for $81,639,531 More to Complete Work by January, 1915.

EARTHQUAKES LITTLE FELT

Year's Work Includes Lighting Plans, Culebra Cut, Completion of Locks, Checking Landslides and Terminals.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The great mechanical problems connected with the construction of the Panama Canal, which is to be opened to the Government in January, 1915, pass in review in the annual report of the Isthmian Canal Commission just made public. The record of the year's achievements in the gigantic task that is being worked out by the Washington Government, under Congressional appropriations that so far aggregate $293,561,486, includes:

Completion of almost three-quarters of Culebra cut. Total excavation of material from Culebra during year, 16,221,672 cubic yards at average cost of 58.8 cents per yard.

Big plans laid for canal terminals, including storage of fuel, fresh water and other supplies, repair facilities, &c. Pacific terminal to have dry dock, storehouse and coaling stations.

Practical completion of plans of all locks.

Elaborate scheme for lighting the canal.

Safeguarding of the canal against big landslides.

The locks have been a great problem. Designs for the approach walls at all locks, except one, have been prepared. Contracts in force at the beginning of the fiscal year were practically completed and new contracts entered into for a vast amount of frames, valves, gates, and other paraphernalia needed to put the canal into operation. More than 954 tons of castings were made on the isthmus. Building of the great lock gates—each leaf of which is 54 feet 8 inches high—was expedited. At each lock entrance strong fender chains attached to powerful springs will be installed to prevent ships from battering down the locks.

A floating caisson gate is being installed for use in closing a lock so as to enable workmen to repair the permanent locks and the bottom sluices.

Canal illumination will be provided by range lights for establishing the direction of vessels on the longer tangents, and by side lights a mile apart marking each side of the channel. Buoys and lighted beacons, built of reinforced concrete, will abound.

Famous Culebra Cut is ten miles long and deep enough to receive the United States Capitol, dome and all. From this cut, despite the enormous excavation during the year, on July 1 last there remained 23,929,140 cubic yards to be removed. Estimates of excavation necessary in this cut have been largely increased to allow for the great earth slides. Last year these slides that had to be removed from the canal cutting after it had been practically completed was 4,879,378 yards, or over 30 per cent. of all the material removed from the cut.

These slides have occurred where the material excavated was left on a slope steeper than the permanent incline will be, and the trouble is expected to cease when the natural slope of the canal banks is restored.

Breaks have occurred on both sides of the cut where the underlying rock is of poor quality, and is broken up and squeezed upward by the pressure from beneath and from the sides, interrupting the drainage and covering up the railroad tracks. To meet this condition intermediate benches have been cut along the slope to distribute the top weight and reduce the amount of material to be removed. It is declared that when the bottom grade of the canal is reached no further trouble need be anticipated, as greater stability will be given by the water.

"With both slides and breaks" the commission says "the question is one of ultimate amount of excavation, and whatever the feeling elsewhere there is no apprehension on the Isthmus as to the final outcome among those acquainted with the facts."

The commission thus answers predictions that the canal would be overwhelmed by gigantic landslides, preventing the execution of the project.

The commission contends that it would be uneconomical to terrace the banks everywhere in advance of the cutting of the canal, because a large part of that expensive work might prove wholly unnecessary. Deepening of the cut and widening of the lower reaches have progressed satisfactorily with less interruption or interference on account of slides than at any time since trouble with them began. The slides have caused no increase in the total estimated cost of Culebra Cut. The Cucaracha slide covered 47.1 acres, and the Culebra slide, 46.6 acres.

A special board has recommended and planned facilities for the storage and furnishing of coal and other fuel for use, both afloat and ashore; the furnishing of fresh water to shipping; the furnishing of adequate and convenient facilities for the repair of all vessels, as well as of all rolling stock, equipment, and machinery ashore, and of store houses for materials and supplies other than fuel, after the completion of the canal.

The terminal docks will be so arranged as to admit of easy enlargement to meet developments in business and size of ships. To begin with the dry docks will conform to the dimensions of the canal, and the wharves will be 1,000 feet long.

The total appropriations made by Congress leave $81,639,531 of the estimated cost of canal yet to be appropriated.

For the first time, no contract laborers were brought to the Isthmus during the year. There was a decided falling off in immigration, while many West Indian laborers have gone into the bush and can no longer be relied upon for steady work.

The temperature for the calendar year 1910 was about normal for all the stations. The highest recorded was 94 degrees Fahrenheit at Ancon on March 13, 1910, and the lowest, 61 degrees Fahrenheit at Culebra on March 21, 1910.

The average rainfall over the canal zone for the calendar year 1910 was well above normal, being unusually heavy in July and December, but below that of the previous year. For the first half of the fiscal year 1911 the rainfall was below normal. The dry season rainfall for 1910 was above normal. The average rainfall for the calendar year 1910 was 90.83 inches in the Pacific section, 129.18 inches in the central section, and 157.86 inches in the Atlantic section. The average number of rainy days was 220 in the Pacific section, 271 in the central section, and 292 in the Atlantic section, the greatest number being 344 at Monte Lirio, and the least 211 at Balboa.

Slight seismic disturbances were of frequent occurrence during the year, very few of which, however, were physically observed in the Zone.

The work performed for the sanitary department has increased, the grass-cutting area having been further extended to include more territory. The removal of garbage has slightly increased. A new incinerator was installed at Gatun in Nov. 1910, and a road built to it from New Gatun. The amount expended by the Quartermaster's Department on orders from the Sanitary Department for Zone sanitation was $210,403.29, and for hospitals, quarantine, &c., $77,284.48.

At the end of the fiscal year this department was operating the Tivoli Hotel, 19 line hotels, 3 night restaurants, 16 European laborers' messes, and 14 common laborers' kitchens, an increase of 1 hotel, and a decrease of 3 messes and 4 kitchens. The supplies are procured from the commissary belonging to the Panama Railroad Company, which is operated by the subsistence director, who is also commissary for the railroad. The total number of meals served by the hotels was 2,216,740, which was an increase of 40,289 over the previous fiscal year. The cost of supplies per meal was 25.44 cents, or 0.57 cent more than during the previous fiscal year, and the expense in preparing and serving meals was 0.62 cent less, or 5.61 cents, resulting in a decrease in the total cost per meal of 0.05 cent.

WOMEN WANT MOVING STAIRS

Appear at Service Commission's Hearing on Interborough Improvement.

A number of women were at the hearing before Commissioner Eustis of the Public Service Commission yesterday on the advisability of ordering the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to instal a moving stairway at the 155th Street station of the west side elevated. This caused James L. Quackenbush, general attorney for the company, to refer to certain advertisements that have been published prominently for the last few days and declare that the agitation for moving stairways had been worked up factitiously.

"The Interborough," he said, "desires to make any improvement that the public desires that is in reason. But I believe that these advertisements were published by the newly formed escalator trust. We will not accept any order based on the demand of such a trust till the highest courts say we must.

"We want to build escalators wherever they are needed, and to come to an agreement with the city on proper terms, but we will not submit to dictation."

The women present included Mrs. A. M. Palmer, Mrs. Howard McNutt, Mrs. I. Carbonell, Mrs. Samuel Miller Jarvis, and Mrs. Read Anderson. Mrs. Robert Francis Cartwright also attended as Chairman of the Public Safety Committee of the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

William L. Selmar, an engineer from the transportation department of the commission, put in statistics to show the number of persons who had to climb the present long flights of stairs, and estimated the cost of installing the escalators at from $20,000 to $25,000, and the cost of operating them at about $23.80 a day.

Congressman Joseph A. Goulden supported him and Mrs. Cartwright pointed out that the number of stairs that had to be climbed was 101. J. Harris Jones, a Highbridge builder and the President of the North Side Board of Trade, declared that he had lost many possible tenants through the great length of the stairs.

The hearing was adjourned to Nov. 22.

Came Here on Matrimonial Agency's Invitation and Is to be Deported.

Among the passengers who arrived last Thursday from Hamburg on the Hamburg-American liner President Lincoln was one describing himself as Baron Adolph von Sheup of Germany, who was sent to Ellis Island pending investigation into his circumstances. He told the Special Board of Inquiry that he had only $12 in cash when he landed, and that he had been invited to come to the United States by the editor of a matrimonial paper in this city. The Baron was ordered to be deported on Saturday, but he has appealed to Washington for delay until a further investigation of his case can be made.

SEEK EMRICH'S ASSASSIN.

Russian Police Would Avenge Mineralogist's Death—Widow Coming Home.

Mrs. Nellie Emrich, whose husband, Horace H. Emrich, the mineralogoist, was assassinated on Oct. 17 in Russia, will soon start with her two small children for this country. John M. Shaw of this city, Mrs. Emrich's uncle, has just received a letter from E. J. Carlyle and William C. Madge, Americans at work at the copper mines at Kyshtim, Russia, assuring him that the police are making every effort to run down the person who killed Mr. Emrich. The widow has borne up bravely, and as soon as possible she will depart for America.

Emrich, Superintendent of the Kystim Copper Company, was shot through a window of his home in Kystim. Mrs. Emrich was with her husband. She at once telephoned to a Mrs. Urquhart, the only Englishwoman in Kyshtim at the time. Word was sent to the mines, thirty miles distant, and during the night Carlyle and Madge and their wives arrived.

"Vigorous measures are being taken by both the police and the mine management to apprehend the murderers," wrote Mr. Carlyle. "Indeed, suspects have already been arrested. The motive for the crime is unknown. The American citizens in camp have called upon the United States Ambassador in St. Petersburg for official action."

THE CENTURY DICTIONARY. THE CENTURY DICTIONARY. THE CENTURY DICTIONARY. THE CENTURY DICTIONARY.

Wireless Telegraphy

SINCE the appearance of the first edition of The Century Dictionary, Cyclopedia and Atlas, wireless telegraphy has appeared and has become so efficient that it has been used in several instances to prevent disasters at sea, notably in the rescue of the steamship Republic.

The illustrations shown are especially modern and complete, including views of the most famous wireless stations and wireless apparatus and also of operating-rooms both on steamship and on shore. The definitions give the reader a good working knowledge of wireless telegraphy.

Medical Discoveries

THE Century records the progress in the discovery of serums for the prevention and cure of disease, such as cancer, consumption and other malignant diseases. This is only one instance of the progress of both medicine and biology; in both, the latest discoveries are described and all the terms used are fully defined in this up-to-date edition of The Century.

The Professor of Clinical Pathology in Baltimore Medical College and the Editor of the "Medical Record" are distinguished contributors.

Aviation

NOTHING so fully illustrates the real up-to-dateness of The Century as that part of it devoted to aviation. This is entirely an achievement of the last twenty years. Today it is a fact so real that Grahame-White says, that in five years the Atlantic Ocean will be used only to bathe in.

New words, such as "aileron" and "hangar," have been added to the language. All these new words are defined, and authoritative pictures are given of the various types of aeroplanes, biplanes, monoplanes, and other flying-machines and dirigibles. The Professor of Meteorology at Harvard, and two practical aeronauts, had charge of this part of the work.

The Art of War

DESPITE the Hague Conference, and the progress of the world's peace, war is now raging at two places upon the map of the globe. The art of war, and the engines by which it is applied, have both advanced materially in twenty years. This advance is shown clearly by picture and text; by hundreds of new definitions, and the enlargement of old ones; by pictures of battleships, guns and other implements of war. The Atlas contains the latest maps of the world, and, in its pages, campaigns may be followed with accuracy.

One-fifth of the World's Progress has been made in the last Twenty Years

In bringing The Century Dictionary, Cyclopedia and Atlas up to date in the new and enlarged edition, just issued, not only has every page of the book been revised, but the new matter added has amounted to one-fifth of the original work, a striking indication of the world's progress during the past two decades. When The Century was published (1890-91) it was, in its field, the most complete of works of reference. But the world has gone ahead since then with startling speed. The older sciences have grown immensely; new sciences have sprung up; new discoveries and inventions of all kinds are almost numberless; medicine has been revolutionized by studies in immunity and serumtherapy; radium and radioactivity have been found; aviation and wireless telegraphy have become commonplaces; war has devised new engines for land and sea; and so on, almost indefinitely. And with all this has come a vast host of new words and new facts which a book like The Century must record. In fact, only upon such a foundation as was laid in The Century twenty years ago, could so complete a work today be constructed as

Cyclopedia and Atlas

THIS set of books, as it stands today, is literally a necessity in every intelligent home. It not only should be a part of every library, it is itself a library. It should take precedence of every "shelf of books," because it is itself a "shelf of books" which will be more consulted, more read, more used than any other twelve books in any language, and young people should be taught to seek the columns of this, the world's great question answerer. Bacon divided all books into two classes—books of knowledge and books of power. The Century belongs to the books of knowledge. Knowledge has been defined as knowing where to find things. In The Century this information is classified, verified, indexed and illustrated as in no other one set of books—nor in any combination of sets of books.

As a Dictionary, the new revision now defines, spells and pronounces 100,000 more words than the first edition, which defined 120,000 more than any other English dictionary which had preceded it.

As a Cyclopedia, The Century has two great points of superiority over any other existing work—the fullness of its information and the accessibility of that information. It has complete, recent and authentic information on every cyclopedic subject—biography, geography, history, art, science or trade—and, in addition, owing to its dictionary arrangement, instant access to any detail of this information. It is not necessary to read a long article to get at the isolated fact wanted. The cyclopedic matter is arranged under the dictionary headings, and The Century is the only work in any language so arranged.

As an Atlas, it is one of the most comprehensive in the world, and the most convenient. It gives the name of nearly every named spot on the surface of the earth, with population according to the latest United States and foreign censuses.

As a book of Quotations, it contains 200,000 more than Bartlett.

As a book of Synonyms, it differentiates more synonyms than Crabbe.

As a Classical Dictionary, it lists more names than Anthon.

As a Dictionary of Authors, it gives more names than Allibone.

EX-SLAVES HEAR TAFT EULOGIZE LINCOLN

President Speaks to Negroes Before Statue Is Unveiled in Kentucky's Capitol.

TRIBUTE BY COL. WATTERSON

Memorial in the State House Accepted by Gov. Willson—Taft to Attend Ceremony To-day at Lincoln Farm.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 8.—"Lincoln had the most judicial temperament of any man in history," according to President Taft, who paid tribute to-day to Kentucky's greatest son, when a monument in the new State Capitol was dedicated to the War President.

Prior to the ceremony Mr. Taft talked to a score of negroes who became free men under the Lincoln administration and who had never seen a President before, telling them the things that made Lincoln greater than most men. The President said:

"With his love of truth, the supreme trait of his intellect, accompanied by a conscience that insisted on the right as he knew it, with a great heart full of tenderness, we have the combination that made Lincoln one of the two greatest Americans.

"He hated slavery because he had reasoned out its injustice and its demoralizing effect upon country and community in which it was a legal institution. He did not hate the slaveholders, and there is not the slightest evidence he ever had a feeling of bitterness toward them as a class."

The aged negroes, who were impressed by Mr. Taft's talk, were conspicuous later among those who witnessed the unveiling of the statue, which was the gift of James Breckenridge Speed of Louisville, a nephew of Joshua Fry Speed, an intimate friend of the Emancipator. The statue is of bronze and the work of Adolph Weinman of New York City. The presentation speech was by Col. Henry Watterson, editor of The Louisville Courier-Journal. Col. Watterson's oration was devoted mainly to the "personality, the origin, and spiritual life and character" of Abraham Lincoln. He gave a minute account of the Lincoln and Hanks families derived from documentary evidence; disproved falsehoods touching Lincoln's birth and traced his noble qualities of head and heart to his mother.

Eulogizing the Emancipator, Col. Watterson said:

"Reviled even as the Man of Galilee, slain even as the Man of Galilee, yet as gentle and unoffending, a man who died for men! Roll the stone from the grave and what shall we see? Just an American. The Declaration of Independence his Confession of Faith. The Constitution of the United States his Ark and Covenant of Liberty. The Union his redoubt, the flag his shibboleth.

"Called like one of old, within a handful of years he rose at a supreme moment to supreme command, fulfilled the law of his being, and passed from the scene an exhalation of the dawn of freedom. We may still hear his cheery voice bidding us be of good heart, sure that 'right makes might," entreating us to pursue 'with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right.'

"The problems he met and solved are problems no longer. Other, it may be greater, problems rise before us. Shall there arise another Lincoln?"

Gov. Willson, in accepting the monument in the name of the State, said it would stand in the Capitol "through all the ages as the central figure, the type and image of the pioneers of Kentucky and of all American pioneers, the best figure, and representative of the spirit of our people, an inspiration to Kentucky for all time, a guardian spirit standing for eternity in sleepless vigil over our liberties and our hopes."

President Taft pointed out the judicial temperament of Lincoln, and added:

"The South knows, as the North knows now, that there is no soul that unites them in perfect amity like that of Abraham Lincoln; the South knows, as the North knows, that every Administration that removes another cause of misunderstanding between the sections, or that brings them closer together in any way, is acting under the inspiration of him who could love his entire country with undiminished ardor, when nearly one-half was seeking to destroy its integrity.

"Here, then, at a place that knew battle, that knew family dissension, that knew bloody conflict, that represented in the sharpest and cruelest way a division of the sections, here, now that perfect peace and amity and harmony prevail, let this memorial be dedicated as typical of the love which he, in whose memory it is reared, maintained for all Americans, with a kindly, fatherly patience that has no counterpart since Bethlehem."

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Taft and his party left for Louisville. To-morrow the President will attend the ceremony attending the turning over of the Lincoln Farm to the care of the Federal Government by the Lincoln Farm Association. The log cabin in which Lincoln was born has been inclosed in a granite building, and will be kept as a memorial as Mount Vernon is maintained.

TAFT AT PRESS CLUB DINNER.

He and Major Butt Entertained in Louisville—Col. Watterson Speaks.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 8.—A dinner by the Louisville Press Club was the principal feature of President Taft's visit here this evening, and at it the President divided honors with his military aid, Major Archibald Butt, who formerly was a Louisville newspaper man. As the President himself was once a reporter in Cincinnati the dinner was given on the basis of one newspaper man to another.

Mr. Taft arrived here at 6 o'clock from Frankfort and went at once to the armory where he made a brief address advocating his policies looking toward international peace. From the armory he went immediately to the dinner.

Col. Watterson was the principal speaker at the dinner, and after a lot of good-natured badinage regarding Major Butt, he told what he would do if he were President. His remarks were entirely facetious. Of Major Butt, he said:

"What I do want to say, especially to you young gentlemen of the press," said Col. Watterson, "is this—that there is no one of you who may not be headed for the White House. Look at Archie Butt! Archie was not a common reporter. He was born a swell—good clothes and good looks and good manners were natural to him. He has been greater than President; the guide, philosopher, and friend of a pair of Presidents. He once told me they were a good pair to draw to, and maybe I shall make three-of-a-kind.

"It was his gentle influence which kept Theodore Roosevelt from declaring himself a dictator. It is said that William Howard Taft considers him his mascot, and looks to him to insure his reelection. When I reach the White House I shall expect to find him there to welcome me, and I shall say to him: 'Archie, when you were a poor young man, I was your friend—you'll not desert me now.'"

Col. Watterson declared that if he were asked point blank what he really thought of the President, he would say:

"As the old lady at the mourners' bench said, when asked if she did not love the Lord, 'It's mighty comfortin' to have Him around,' all of us are proud and happy to have him with us, none the less those of us who may not always agree with his conclusions, never doubting his intentions. This night, at least, let us know no parties and no distinctions. Let it for a little while be not 'Mr. President,' not even 'William,' but just plain 'Bill.'"

The President will remain here to-night and leave to-morrow morning for Hodgenville, Ky., where he will dedicate the Lincoln Memorial Hall.

TELEGRAPHERS WIN STRIKE.

Southern and B. & O. Grant More Pay and Shorter Hours to Operators.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The strike of the telegraphers of the Southern Railway and Baltimore & Ohio that has lasted all Summer and threatened to precipitate widespread trouble ended to-day. The Southern telegraphers win a 12 per cent. increase in pay instead of the 24 per cent. they demanded, and the Baltimore & Ohio operators get a 6 per cent. increase. Operators of both roads win an eight-hour day where there are three or more men on a shift, and ten-hour day in one-man offices.

Justice Martin A. Knapp of the United States Court of Customs and Commissioner of Labor Neill acted as intermediaries in the Baltimore & Ohio controversy. H. G. Alexander, Chairman of the Southern Telegraphers' Committee, met officials of that road to-day, and through General Manager F. A. Chapman was assured that their demands as adjusted would be agreed to. Details as to personal grading are yet to be settled. The new arrangement dates from Nov. 1.

One important point which the Southern telegraphers gained is the fifteen-day vacation with pay to employes working Sundays. This will cost the company over $25,000. There will be an eight-hour law and a ten-hour working day on the same basis granted by the Baltimore & Ohio. Those who have served the company five years will get an annual pass over one division of the road; those serving ten years will get a pass over four divisions, and those serving fifteen years will receive a pass for self and wife over the entire system.

GIVES MAN OF 40 NO HOPE.

Labor Leader Says There Is No Place for Him in Industrial World.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Arthur E. Holder of the American Federation of Labor told the Employers' Liability Commission to-day that there was a marked discrimination against the aged throughout the industrial world.

"The man who is over 40 and who has a few gray hairs cannot get back when he once loses his job, but he can hold on if he has a place," he said. "It is the same here that it is in England, and it is the same in Germany and throughout the Continent."

This condition was not due, said Mr. Holder, to any legislation, but was the result of economic conditions, and came of the determination to get the greatest possible product out of the human being employed by others.

With reference to the extent of the compensation for death or injuries Mr. Holder said he thought the law should grant "all that the traffic will bear."

Robert J. Cary of the New York Central made an appeal for a moderate law which would not require a greater aggregate insurance fund than now is expended by the railroads of the country.

Gardiner Lathrop of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway declared the railroads had been made the object of so much legislative attack as to render it difficult for them to pay necessary operating expenses and fair dividends, and he said he saw no reason why the law should not cover other industries.

WILEY BLAMES MIDDLEMAN.

Says High Cost of Living Is Not to be Laid to the Farmer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief Chemist of the Department of Agriculture, in an address here last night blamed the middleman for the high cost of living.

"There is no need to blame the farmer," said Dr. Wiley, "for the farmer is playing a losing game. He does not count the cost of his own labor nor the labor of his family in balancing up his accounts. It is the middleman who is making the big profit. What shall we do about it? Well, let the State and city step in if need be."

SCHOOLBOYS TALK HIGH ART.

Their Lesson at the Metropolitan Museum Was Really to Instruct Teachers.

The auditorium of the Metropolitan Museum of Art was opened yesterday afternoon by Dr. James P. Haney with a lesson for teachers on pictures in the Museum under the auspices of the School Art League.

The auditorium is an attractive terra-cotta paneled room, with a seating capacity of 475. When it was about to be opened for use in the Autumn of 1909 the acoustic properties were found to be not satisfactory. The acoustics are now all that could be desired.

A number of little chaps from the public school at Madison Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street were the subjects of the picture talk. Famous paintings were discussed by the boys with the instructor. They were given a recipe for making a picture, and at their suggestion a fire engine was put on the blackboard, an engine with horses, which one frank small boy, who had expected to see a full-grown Museum picture turned off at first hand, said was "not very good."

The boys were unprepared for the pictures they were too see, but they entered into the discussion with enthusiasm and gave apt responses to questions. There will be another lesson on the same lines next Wednesday at 4 o'clock.

TO BUY A FARM FOR CAPT. VAN SCHAICK

Shipping Men Plan $5,000 Fund to Aid the Master of the Gen. Slocum.

HE IS 72 AND IN NEED

Harbor Transportation Officials Say He Was Made the Scapegoat for the River Tragedy.

Capt. William H. Van Schaick, who had command of the Gen. Slocum when she burned in the East River with a loss of 1,035 lives on June 15, 1904, is to be provided for in his old age. His friends in the National Board of Steam Navigation are to raise a popular subscription to purchase for the Captain and his wife a farm near Amsterdam, N. Y., his birthplace.

Frederick B. Dalzell, of the Dalzell Towing Company; H. L. Joyce, manager of the Marine Department of the Central Railroad of New Jersey; Eugene F. Moran, of the Moran Towing Line; George J. Eiseman, Superintendent of repairs, New York Central; John M. Emery, Superintendent of floating equipment, D., L. & W., and Capt. N. L. Cullin, general agent of the railroads here, met yesterday afternoon in the Whitehall Club in the Whitehall Building, and formed the Van Schaick Relief Fund Committee. Mr. Dalzell was made Chairman, Mr. Joyce treasurer, and Capt. Cullin secretary. An auxiliary committee of fifteen or twenty men interested in harbor transportation, is to be formed.

Among those invited to serve on this committee are: Walter B. Pollock, New York Central; Jonathan Moore, Crane Dry Dock Company; H. H. Raymond, general manager of the Clyde Line; Isaac C. Chapman, Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company; Eben E. Olcott, Albany Day Line; Congressman Thomas Scully, Scully Towboat Company; Congressman Thomas Patten, Patten Line; Samuel L'Hommedieu, White Star Towing Company; Capt. Henry M. Seeley, supervising inspector of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service; Alfred G. Smith, Ward Line; Commander W. J. Sears, Superintendent of Municipal Ferries; Andrew Fletcher, Jr., E. M. Millard, R. J. Barrett, Frederick A. Bishop, and Charles W. Englis.

It is planned by popular subscription to raise $5,000 for the purchase of a farm near Amsterdam, N. Y. When the Captain was released on parole from Sing Sing prison, after serving three and a half years of his ten years' sentence, he came out broken in health and with failing eyesight. He is now 72 years old, and unfit to pursue his calling, one in which he had been engaged most of his life.

Harbor transportation men and others never believed that the Captain of the Slocum should suffer for the disaster, and during all the time he was in prison they kept up the fight to have him pardoned or paroled. This feeling is shared by men who work on the rivers and bay, and for this reason the subscription book is to be open to all. The small donation of the towboat hand will be as gladly received as the hundreds already promised by the boat owners.

"There was no better steamboat master on these waters than Capt. Van Schaick," said Mr. Dalzell. "He was always a careful man, and when the accident came which ended his career he stood bravely to his post to the last man. He was betrayed at his trial, and others took advantage of his ignorance of the law. He became the scapegoat. Now we want to do something to make life easy for the veteran and his faithful wife."

The parole of Capt. Van Schaick was in a measure due to the earnest efforts of his wife. She was Miss Grace Mary Spratt, who at the time of the burning of the Slocum, was Superintendent of nures in Lebanon Hospital. She married the Captain when he was under $10,000 bail and facing a long term of imprisonment. He had wooed her unsuccessfully for years, but when the darkest hour of his life came she went to his side. While he was in prison she supported herself by nursing. Now she will go with her husband, and together they will live out their days on a farm in Amsterdam.

INSPECTORSHIP COMPETITIVE

Gov. Dix Gives Assurance That Factory Men Won't Be Exempt.

Secretary Elliot H. Goodwin of the Civil Service Reform Association recently wrote a letter to Gov. Dix asking for a hearing in behalf of the association regarding the proposal to put the Supervising Factory Inspectors on the exempt list. Gov. Dix replied:

"It will not be neccessary to have a hearing in the matter of the classification of Supervising Factory Inspectors in the Labor Department. These positions are to be competitive, not exempt."

TILT OVER TAFT TREATIES.

Episcopalian Convention Indorses Them After a Long Wrangle.

The convention of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, in annual session yesterday in Synod Hall of the cathedral, fell into two disputes, one lasting more than an hour, over commending President Taft's peace resolutions and condemning the evils of the liquor traffic. In the debate on the former the position taken by Senator Root was called in question, and in the latter it was admitted to be the popular notion that the Episcopal Church does not get down to a hand-to-hand fight with saloons.

At the outset the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning of Trinity Church presented resolutions on the peace treaties. One approved "the action of President Taft in negotiation of treaties," another expressed the hope that the Senate might ratify them without delay, and the third appointed Sunday, Nov. 26, for special prayers in all New York Episcopal churches. The Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Parks denied that public sentiment is in favor of the treaties, declared the Episcopal Church in convention ought not to go into politics, even into a moral political question of this kind, and argued limitations of the Monroe doctrine.

Francis Lynde Stetson approved the resolutions and a motion to lay them on the table was defeated by a rousing vote. Finally they were adopted with enthusiasm, but not until nearly an hour had been spent.

It was late in the afternoon that the Rev. J. V. Chalmer of Holy Trinity Church presented resolutions on the liquor traffic. Some objected to the wording. Some wanted the matter put over until next year. Others wanted new resolutions drawn, to be considered to-day. Speakers on the question included half the prominent men in the convention. J. Pierpont Morgan took part in the peace controversy in the morning, but was not present at the heated discussion in the late evening. Francis Lynde Stetson, former Congressman J. Van Vechten Olcott, R. Fulton Cutting, George Zabriskie, the Rev. Dr. G. R. Van de Water, Bishop Courtney, the Rev. Dr. Hugh Birckhead, the Rev. Dr. Stires of St. Thomas's Church, the Rev. Dr. L. W. Batten of the General Seminary, the Rev. A. F. Underhill, Francis C. Huntington of Grace Church, and others took part.

At last, long after adjournment hour, the convention voted with a shout in favor of the resolutions in nearly the form first presented, referring the matter to the Social Service Commission, a standing body, to perfect plans and report how the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of New York may join with others in aggressively fighting the saloon.

The evening meeting started with a short service, with full processional. Bishop Greer was the first to speak. He began by saying:

"The 'Bishop's Meeting,' sa colled, was held here in the cathedral to-night for two reasons. First, because this is the first convention of the diocese held since the consecration of the cathedral, and that it might be emphasized that the cathedral belongs to the whole diocese; secondly, that while always keeping the larger world vision before us it is well to concentrate our attention upon that particular part of the world vision which is included in the Diocese of New York.

"In this city to-night there are large groups of people with no permanent home; people who are homeless and hungry. What are we going to do to save them from sin, shame, vice, and crime? While ministering to the world far away we should not forget the world near at home.

"It is obvious that a conflict between the Christian Church and anti-Christian forces is impending. The line is being drawn; the forces are meeting in sharp battle issue. I don't doubt for a moment the ultimate result, but for us this is a time for searching the heart before God, when the Christian Church addresses itself more earnestly to the task of establishing everywhere the kingdom of the living Christ."

BURGLARS MAKE BOLD RAID.

They Loot a Store While Election Officers Pass By the Entrance.

While one hundred and fifty Deputy Superintendents of Election were going up and down stairs next door last Monday night, burglars climbed over a transom into the photographic supply store of Lindermann & Co. at 51 West Forty-second Street and carried off $1,000 worth of cameras and films.

The photographic supply office is on the ground floor of the building, flush with the street, the door being set in a vestibule, which is only two feet deep. Beside the door are the stairs leading up to the offices of the Superintendent of Elections.

The building has a watchman who is supposed to be awake in the front hall all night. Nevertheless, when a member of the supply firm went to the store on Tuesday to check up some accounts he found that a large part of the stock had disappeared. The front door of the store was locked, but the transom above it was open. A large electric light sign hangs in the vestibule in front of the door, and the rod of this sign was found to be bent.

Manager Moray of the Great Eastern Casualty Company, who went to the store to investigate the robbery yesterday, found unusually clear thumb marks on the glass of the transom, and these are being examined by detectives of the Bertillon Division of the Detective Bureau.

How to Test out Shoe Values

IN Regal Shoe windows you will see two left shoes (or two right shoes) side by side on same pedestal.

One is a Regal $3.50.

The other is a Regal $5.00.

Each is stamped on the sole with the Makers' Price, up to which Wear, Comfort and Satisfaction to Consumer are guaranteed.

There is the full difference of $1.50 in retail value between these two pairs of Regal Shoes.

But, can you tell (without looking at the price on the sole) which is the $3.50 shoe and which is the $5.00 shoe in the window?

And, if you can't tell the difference, (through the finish) how are you to know values in shoes that are not price controlled by the Makers (through their valuation being stamped on the soles at the factory)?

Ninety per cent of all other shoes are today sold on their mere outward appearance.

That "appearance" is largely a matter of lasting and finish, quite independent of Material or Service to Consumer hidden under the finish.

But, Regal Shoes are stamped on the soles of each pair, indelibly, with the retail price which the Makers guarantee will give full value every time.

You run no risk of paying $4.50 to $5.00 for a $3.50 shoe (with a $5.00 finish), if you make sure that this Regal Shoe brand is stamped on the sole with the Regal Shoe price.

That price includes a mere 5% profit for Regal Shoe factories, as per Auditor's Statement seen in Regal Stores and Agencies.

Compare value in all other shoes with that in

DIPLOMATIC HELP FOR AMERICAN FIRMS

Chile, It Is Said, Is Being Persuaded to Have Battleship Built in This Country.

A NEW TREATY OFFERED?

London Times Correspondent Fears United States Will Commercially Absorb South America.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 9.—A telegram to The Times from Santiago, Chile, says:

"The American shipyards are not discouraged by the failure of their determined efforts to secure the acceptance of their original tenders for building dreadnoughts for Chile, nor by the most laudable refusals of the Chilean Government to accept subsequent reductions in price. The American agent of the Bethlehem Steel Works, in combination with Mr. Schwab and backed by the American Legation, has worked unceasingly for the past two months in the cleverest political manner to secure the contract for the second dreadnought.

"Although the authorities are entirely desirous of contracting with the Armstrongs, according to the arrangement, I now learn that the American efforts will probably succeed owing to special inducements reported to have been offered, such as special treaty arrangements, together with the possible transfer of an old ship to Chile in the event of sudden need in return for facilities to the United States for the passage of ships through Magellan Strait.

"If the above is true, British prestige will suffer a very serious blow. All ordinary competition by our yards will be completely killed and the earnest wish of the Chilean Navy and Admiralty to have their navy built entirely by British yards will be defeated.

"The Chilean Navy enjoys at present exceptional facilities, our Admiralty allowing British instructors to serve in Chile and Chilean officers to get experience in our navy.

"This latest move, coupled with the recent complete American defeat of all competitors for Argentine orders for battleships, seems to me an indication of the approaching commercial absorption of the southern continent, which will be assisted by the opening of the Panama Canal.

"In my opinion our American cousins can only be amicably combated by a resolute combination of the enormous British financial interests already involved, with whom these countries would prefer to deal."

GREY'S TRIBUTE TO BRYCE.

Says He Has Crowned Brilliant Career by Success as Ambassador.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The portrait of the British Ambassador at Washington, the Right Hon. James Bryce, painted by S. Seymour Thomas, was unveiled in the smoking room of the National Liberal Club to-day by Sir Edward Grey.

The Foreign Secretary paid a tribute to Mr. Bryce and his distinguished work in various fields. He said that Mr. Bryce had crowned a brilliant career by his success as an Ambassador. He had made the interests of Great Britain understood in America. He had been active in searching out and emphasizing points of agreement, so that when differences arose they were easily reconciled. "He will," added the Secretary, "return from Washington with enhanced credit and honor, leaving behind in the United States enduring memories."

NELSON'S LOGBOOK SOLD.

Bought by an Englishman to Prevent It from Coming Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The logbook of Lord Nelson's flagship Victory, containing a vivid description of the battle of Trafalgar, will not be sold at auction, as had been announced. It has been purchased by T. J. Barratt, a well-known collector of Nelson relics. Mr. Barratt stated to-day that he had bought the logbook to prevent it from going to America.

Since the announcement that it was to go under the hammer, the auctioneers have received several cablegrams from wealthy American purchasers offering to buy it. The price paid by Mr. Barratt was several thousand pounds.

MARTIN SEES LLOYD-GEORGE.

Confers with the Chancellor Regarding a State Insurance Bill Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Frederick Townsend Martin, who some time ago announced his intention of advocating in America a State insurance bill modeled on the one introduced in the British Parliament by Lloyd-George, had this morning an interview with the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Mr. Martin said he was charmed by his reception, and that Lloyd-George had received him cordially, giving assurance of his hearty sympathy with the plan.

"When I go before my audience in America," said Mr. Martin, "I will be able now to say that I know Lloyd-George. No matter how short the interview, one feels Mr. Lloyd-George's magnetism and appreciates that he is in the presence of a great statesman."

Mr. Martin said that the Chancellor wished him success. Mr. Martin will sail in the Mauretania on Saturday.

WANT TRUST LAW CRITICISED.

National Civic Federation Asks 20,000 Business Men for Suggestions.

By way of helping the United States Senate's Inter-State Commerce Committee to get light on public opinion regarding the Sherman anti-trust law, the National Civic Federation is sending out the following list of questions to 20,000 merchants, manufacturers, and bankers in all parts of the country:

1. In your judgment what caused or causes the present disturbed business conditions?
2. Do you believe that the Sherman law, as now interpreted, is made clear and workable?
3. Do you consider it feasible to attempt to return to what are commonly known as old competitive methods in business?
4. Do you favor a repeal of the Sherman law?
5. Do you favor amending the Sherman law in any way? If so, in what particulars?
6. Should railroads be allowed to enter into agreements affecting rates, subject to the approval and regulation of the Inter-State Commerce Commission?
7. Should trade unions be excepted from the operation of the Sherman act?
8. Should combinations of farmers either to restrict production or to hold a crop for higher prices be rendered lawful under the Sherman act?
9. Do you favor a National incorporation law?
10. Do you favor a Federal license law?
11. Do you favor an Inter-State Trade Commission with powers not unlike those now enjoyed by the Inter-State Commerce Commission in relation to common carriers?

General remarks: In addition to answering the above questions will you be good enough to note below any views you have bearing on this question and which you believe would be of use in an effort to formulate some plan for the adjustment of the existing difficulties?

The Senate Committee, of which Senator Clapp of Minnesota is Chairman, will begin its hearings next Wednesday in Washington. The hearings will continue for several months, and the National Civic Federation will study and classify the replies to its questions, and will then file the replies with the committee for its use. The federation is also sending out a still more elaborate set of questions to lawyers, editors, and specialists, the answers to which will be filed with the Senate Committee in the same way. The letters accompanying the questions are signed by President Seth Low of the federation.

ITALY NOW CHARGES ARAB ATROCITIES

Embassy Makes Public a Dispatch from Minister Giuliano to Offset Turkish Protest.

ATTACK ON TRIPOLI FAILS

Arabs Repulsed After a Two-Hour Fight—Turkey Denies Asking for Mediation to End War.

TRIPOLI, Nov. 7, (Delayed.)—The Arabs with artillery vigorously attacked Fort Hamidié at noon to-day, but were repulsed after a fight that lasted two hours.

The American cruiser Chester will sail this evening for Marseilles without the American Consul at Tripoli, John Q. Wood, who has decided to remain here. The Chester was ordered to this port to take off the American colony and the Consul.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—To offset the protest filed by the Turkish Embassy here with the Department of State against alleged atrocities committed by the Italian army in Tripoli, the Italian Embassy to-day denied in emphatic language that the rules of war had been violated. In addition, the Embassy made public a recent dispatch from Tripoli setting forth reported Italian successes against the Turks and Arabs. The dispatch of denial, signed by the Italian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, is as follows:

> I beg your Excellency to deny in the most absolute and emphatic form alleged Italian cruelties. The Arabs are the ones who are guilty of atrocities against our soldiers. SAN GIULIANO.

The dispatch from Tripoli reads in part:

> Yesterday's attack had no further continuation. These trifling and inconclusive Turkish actions, besides having a political aim, are probably intended to hinder the activity of the Royal Government toward the decisive settlement of the place. Nevertheless, this activity is going on in a perfectly regular way according to the pre-established programme.
>
> The Italian troops continue in a very high spirit their work of settlement.
> Dissensions between the Arabs and Turks are continually reported. The situation at Moms is perfectly quiet. At Bengazi a squadron of Italian cavalry made a night reconnaissance and surprised and captured two cannon and a great quantity of ammunition.

Misconstruction of the appeal made by Turkey to the American Government resulted in a statement to-day by Youssouf Zia Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador, declaring that Turkey had no wish that the United States should act as a mediator to end the war. The Ambassador says:

"The call which the embassy made on the Washington Government Nov. 4 had for its object to request the State Department to intervene in order to bring about a cessation of the atrocities committed by the enemy against women, children, and the defenseless population of Tripoli. This appeal did not imply in any form whatever a request for mediation, as has been reported in some quarters."

Apparently the State Department has decided to take no action upon the protest of the Turkish Government, contenting itself with a bare acknowledgment of the receipt of the protest, and, meanwhile, closely watching developments. The department officials are still firm in their conviction that the issue between Turkey and Italy is one that concerns European powers alone.

American Consul Wood at Tripoli to-day reported that city to be in an extremely unsanitary condition.

POWERS' DEMANDS ON CUBA.

Britain, France, and Germany Present Joint Note Regarding Claims.

HAVANA, Nov. 8.—The diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, France, and Germany have presented a joint note relative to claims against Cuba on account of destruction of property of the subjects of their respective countries in the course of the war of independence.

The State Department refuses information on the subject.

APPEARS AGAINST SCHEFTELS

John Delaney, Principal Clerk, Becomes a Government Witness.

John Delaney, who was indicted at the same time as the Directors of B. H. Scheftels & Co. for using the mails to defraud in connection with an alleged bucket shop, took the stand yesterday in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Ray as a witness for the Government. Delaney was one of the principal clerks in the employ of the firm.

Examined by Assistant United States District Attorney Dorr, he told of the existence of an "editorial room" in the office of B. H. Scheftels Company at 44 Broad Street, from which the literature dealing with its mining and other stock schemes was issued. He told the precise routine which was followed with all orders.

Richard Lynch, the expert accountant of the Scheftels firm, was recalled to give further testimony as to the contention of the Government that the brokerage firm made secret and illegitimate profits. For this purpose he was taken in detail over the transactions in connection with the purchase of five shares of Mohawk, which were, it is alleged, kept for weeks from a customer after he had paid cash for them, and were used to satisfy other customers.

Barrett Phillips, who was the auditor of the Scheftels concern at Philadelphia, proved a good witness for the defense.

"How did Rice tell you to keep the books?" he was asked by Mr. Vorhaus.

"He told me to keep them as a set of broker's books should be kept," was the reply.

He had been, the witness said, an auditor of broker's books before he entered the employ of B. H. Scheftels & Co., and he maintained that the proceedings of that firm were on a regular basis.

VOTED TWICE, SAYS WOMAN.

Miss Livesey, Who Is Fighting Moonachie School Board, Alleges Fraud.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 8.—Miss Mary E. Livesey, the one woman member of the Moonachie Board of Education, who, by resolution, has been asked by her male associates to resign "for the sake of harmony," appeared before the Grand Jury at Hackensack to-day in the case of William E. Love, a son of the janitress of one of the two Moonachie schools. He was accused of voting twice at a school election. Miss Livesey says she saw Love vote twice, and her brother, James, one of the tellers, challenged the vote.

It was Miss Livesey's activity in this matter that aroused the feeling against her, and when she recently refused to vote for the bond issue for two new schools, Mayor Robert Craig, a member and clerk of the board, offered the resolution asking Miss Livesey to resign.

"I won't resign, and I'm going to see this matter through, said Miss Livesey. "There is too much rottenness in Moonachie and I hope this exposure will give the courts a chance to investigate."

WALDO ORDERS A SHAKE-UP.

Four Police Captains and Five Lieutenants Transferred.

Four Police Captains and five Lieutenants were transferred yesterday. Included among the former was James Dunn of the Detective Bureau, famous from the days of Inspector Byrnes, and the last man at Headquarters of that celebrated régime. Dunn goes to Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn. For what reason few know, but the official reason is as usual: "For the good of the service." The transfers as announced by Commissioner Waldo are as follows:

> Capt. James Dunn, Detective Bureau, to Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn; Capt. John F. Linden, Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, to Detective Bureau; Capt. Patrick L. Walsh, City Island, to Detective Bureau; Capt. George K. Wakefield, Old West Twentieth Street Station, to City Island. Lieuts. Patrick Shea, Joseph McGirk, Michael Dempsey, John Taylor, and Morris Bernorit.

All the Lieutenants were stationed in the Detective Bureau, but the precincts to which they are sent were not stated in the announcement. Capt. Walsh goes to head one of the numerous divisions of the Detective Bureau, but which one is not yet determined.

DENIES KICKING SERVANT.

D. Randolph Cook Tries to Prove Alibi in $25,000 Suit.

Thora With's $25,000 suit against D. Randolph Cook was put on trial yesterday before Justice Gavegan and a jury in the Supreme Court. She took the stand and testified that Cook on Feb. 23, 1908, a Sunday evening, kicked her for bringing him the wrong kind of glasses when he called for whisky in his father's house, where she was a servant.

Cook took the stand in his own behalf. He pleaded an alibi. He said he was at a country club, winning a cup for proficiency in shooting clay pigeons on that day. He said he had never kicked the girl, and declared he thought her a good servant. William A. Thorpe, donor of the clay pigeon cup, and other members of the pigeon-shooting club testified to Cook's alibi.

ZAPATISTAS LOOT HACIENDA.

Conditions in Oaxaca, Mexico, Graver —Battle Reported at Juchitan.

Special to The New York Times.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 8.—Although it is reported that Zapata is gathering his forces near Cuautla, with a view of surrendering, news came to-day that 500 of his followers attacked and looted Hacienda Xochimancas in Morelos. Conditions in Oaxaca, where Indians are giving trouble, are daily becoming graver.

Federals and rebels met yesterday at Juchitan, Oaxaca, according to official information which reached here to-day. Two hundred are reported to have been killed. Rail and wire communication outside the city is interrupted.

A telegram from Oaxaca brings the report that José Gomez, the deposed Jefe Politico and chief of the rebels, has been captured and shot.

Sale of the New York Show Room Samples of The Famous Drucker TRUNKS

TRADE-MARK

Experienced travelers know that the name of Drucker and the firm's trade-mark, a lion gardant, are found only on trunks of the very highest grade. The firm has been among America's foremost trunk makers for nearly fifty years.

In view of the very high standard of the Gimbel Trunk Store and our large purchases of Drucker Trunks it was quite natural that the firm should give us the disposal of the Sample Trunks in its New York Showroom to make room for the 1912 models.

So we shall place the whole assortment—just 126 fine trunks—on sale this morning at splendid savings on their regular prices. The limited group comprises:

Wardrobe Steamer Trunks
Steamer Trunks
Millinery Trunks
Bureau Trunks
Men's Trunks
Dress Trunks
Skirt Trunks
Shoe Trunks

All are fresh and in perfect condition, and we group them at five prices, as follows:

At $7.50, Drucker Trunks, usually $10 to $12.75
At $10, Drucker Trunks, usually $15 to $18
At $15, Drucker Trunks, usually $20 to $25
At $20, Drucker Trunks, usually $22.50 to $30
At $25, Drucker Trunks, usually $30 to $65

Of course, the quantity of Trunks at some prices is limited, and there is not every style mentioned at each price. For instance, there are but four of the $65 Trunks to sell at $25. But there is a splendid field for choosing for people who intend to make Winter trips, or lay by fine trunks for future travels—especially to those who come early.

To add to the good fortune, we have placed in the sale some fine Trunks of our own at equally good economies, though, of course, they will be clearly distinguished from the Drucker Trunks. Every Trunk in the offering bears the Gimbel five-year guarantee. Fifth Floor

PICTURE FILM BOARD ATTACKS ITS CRITICS

Points to Suppression of $1,200,000 in Objectionable Films as an Answer to Woman's League.

WOULD AID CITY CENSORSHIP

Says the League's Charges Are Prompted by Animus Because It Was Asked to Resign from Board.

The clash between the Woman's Municipal League and the National Board of Censorship moved rapidly yesterday. Both sides talked and each accused the other. For the Censorship Board the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, Chairman of the General Board, declared that the Woman's Municipal League did not withdraw of its own accord from the board, but was really advised by the chief officer of the board that its resignation would be highly acceptable.

For the Woman's Municipal League its counsel, Gilbert H. Montague of 55 Liberty Street, made a warm reply to the defense of the board by its General Secretary, Walter Storey, who is paid in part at least by money received from J. J. Kennedy, Treasurer of the Motion-Picture Patents Company, sometimes called the Film Trust.

Mr. Montague characterized Mr. Storey's assertions as misleading and not correct in various phases, and endeavored to show that John Collier, Executive Secretary of the Censorship Board with a vote, is also paid in part with Mr. Kennedy's money. Mr. Collier, however, denies that he is so paid, saying his money comes from the People's Institute, and in support of his statement quotes this paragraph from the last report of the board on May 1, 1911:

> The general Secretary of the Board of Censors receives $25 a week for two-thirds of his time; the assistant Secretary of the censorship receives $25 a week for full time; the People's Institute is relieved by the Board of Censorship of one-half the salary of the educational Secretary, Mr. Collier, and he gives about three-fourths of his time to the censorship. The educational Secretary does not profit by this arrangement.

When pointed out to Mr. Collier that people would naturally interpret the words: "The People's Institute is relieved by the Board of Censorship of one-half his salary" as meaning that the Censorship Board paid that half from Mr. Kennedy's contributions, he replied that the last sentence, "The educational Secretary does not profit by this arrangement," is the correct statement, as he would get his full salary whether the Censorship Board existed or not. It is, however, admitted that practically all the cash the board has received for two years has come from Mr. Kennedy.

Mr. Collier's attention was also called to these items in the reports of the Treasurer of the board for 1910 and three months in the present year:

> Mr. Collier, educational Secretary, share of Mr. Collier's salary, $933.41.
> Educational Secretary, share in Mr. Collier's salary, $334.74.

In reply Mr. Collier said the language in the financial statement should be interpreted in the light of the sentence he had already quoted.

Dr. Slicer in his statement for the board intimates that the Municipal League is actuated in its fight on the board by animus apparently engendered by the fact that its resignation from the board was suggested by the board itself.

"The charges of the Woman's Municipal League, general in their nature," says Dr. Slicer, "were specifically answered in the report of the National Board of Censorship on May 1, last. In the intervening six months the Woman's Municipal League has not been able to find evidence in support of its general charges, and it now reiterates these charges in the same general form and without reference to the previous exhaustive reply by the National Board. This fact illustrates the animus of the Woman's Municipal League, which has tardily resigned from the Board of Censorship, after the then Chairman of the Board, Dr. George William Knox, had suggested to the President of the league that a resignation would be proper.

"The league tries to create the inference that there has been secrecy as to the financial support of the censorship. There has been the utmost publicity since the first day, as is proved in the above-mentioned report by quotations from the previous reports issued by the Board of Censorship at intervals during its existence. This publicity has been minute, with reference both to sources of support and to details of expenditure, and has gone to every newspaper office in New York.

"It may be said here that the board has published the statement that it has suppressed more than $1,200,000 in value of picture films. This, not the $11,000 contribution to clerical expenses, is the price the trade pays for the censorship. If this statement is incorrect, it can be disproved from the records of the censorship. The Woman's Municipal League has not attempted to question or disprove this statement, but has continued to insist on the absurd proposition that a contribution for clerical expenses influences either the manufacturers or the board.

"As for the letter from the late Prof. Charles Sprague Smith, place in the hands of THE TIMES by the Woman's Municipal League, the league fully knows the meaning of this letter, and its use by the league in this connection amounts to a libel on the name of one dead, who does not need defense. J. J. Kennedy donated and still donates money for the expenses of the censorship. He stated his desire that the contribution be published as a contribution 'on behalf of the trade interests,' not a personal contribution from himself.

"The letter from Prof. Sprague Smith, a confidential letter now exploited in the press, enjoined obedience to this legitimate desire of Mr. Kennedy. To settle forever this particular charge of the Woman's Municipal League the National board in its last report gave excerpts from reports of the board antedating the letter in question and dating back to the origin of the work, in which full and repeated statement was made of the trade origin of the censorship support. Under these circumstances what is to be said of the again-repeated innuendo of the league?

"The board does not now and never has opposed a municipal censorship. Members of the board have divers opinions on that subject. No municipal censorship could diminish or alter in any way the province of the National Board, but the board has for two years led in the agitation for improved laws governing the entire subject of motion pictures and cheap theatricals, and would welcome any practicable municipal interference in the local censorship question as a much-to-be-desired adjunct to its work as a National Board."

Mr. Montague in reply to Mr. Storey last night said:

"The best answer to Mr. Storey's attempt to explain the uncensored special release pictures is the statement which the National Board of Censorship put out last January, in which they described them as 'an evtremely low class of burlesque pictures.' In this statement John Collier, the paid Secretary, is quoted as saying that there ought to be some definite understanding regarding these special release pictures. Nothing apparently has since been done to remedy the situation, for the board has now ceased to pretend to censor all the films produced.

"Mr. Storey's statement that the National Boar dof Censorship has at no time opposed the municipal censorship is not correct. Last January when a resolution was introduced into the Board of Aldermen of this city providing for an official censorship John Collier appeared at the Aldermanic hearing from the Censorship Board and opposed the resolution, and argued against the proposition for official municipal censorship. About the same time, a letter was put out from the office of the Censorship Board, stating that the only effective pressure upon the Aldermen would have to be through Tammany Hall, and as we clearly recognize, they are opposed to any investigation, their sole desire being to bring, if possible, the control of the motion-picture business into their hands. As proof of this they favor the resolution providing for the appointment of three Aldermen, who will censor every picture shown in New York City. The opportunities for graft, should this come to pass, are entirely aparent.

"It is difficult to reconcile this attitude of the censorship last January with the present statement of its officials that it has never opposed municipal censorship."

MORMONS AT CLARK MANSION

Tabernacle Choir Sings Hymns Accompanied by Senator's Great Organ.

The great organ, said to be the largest in the world, in former Senator W. A. Clark's Fifth Avenue residence was played for two hours yesterday for the 200 members of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. The organist was John J. McClellan, official organist of the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, and accompanist of the choir during its visit to New York.

The choir and about 100 friends from Utah were taken to the Clark residence as special guests of Senator Clark, who wired the invitation to them to visit his residence from Salt Lake City, where he is now attending to business matters connected with his Salt Lake Railroad.

Mr. McClelland played favorite Mormon hymns and some classical selections. The organ is in a hall leading to the art gallery on the second floor. The 200 singers arranged themselves in the art gallery and sang the "Hosannah" chorus, "We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet," and "The Soldiers' Chorus" from "Faust."

The Mormon visitors were taken through the art gallery, where many of them lingered for some time before a painting by Raphael. They were shown Senator Clark's living quarters on the third floor.

TRANSLATOR GETS JUDGMENT

Florence Crewe-Jones to Receive $10,000 for Use of Her Name.

A judgment for $10,000 in favor of Florence Crewe-Jones, a translator, against James L. Perkins, a publisher, given by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum, was filed yesterday in the County Clerk's office. Miss Crewe-Jones said that as the result of the use of her name as translator to several "unskillful and unscholarly" Anglicizations of Guy de Maupassant's stories she lost work which would otherwise have been given to her by Prof. Julius Blume of the City College.

Mr. Perkins's deposition, filed with the judgment, asserts that Miss Crewe-Jones was originally employed to make the translations, but did not turn out the work rapidly enough. He said he then employed Fannie Rousseau Wallack to get the work done in time.

LOST BOY WAS OFF TO FIND DEAD SISTER

Little Michael Kelly Would Not Believe She Could Not Come Back.

MEANT TO DIG FOR BODY

Child Disappears After the Funeral—Policeman Finds Him, Wet and Tired, His Quest Abandoned.

When they took his baby sister Helen to the cemetery, little Michael Kelly would not believe that he was never to see her again. So he set out from his home, 498 West 124th Street, to find the place where he had seen the man with the shovel put the little coffin in the ground, determined to make him bring his sister back.

That was last Sunday. The family returned from St. Raymond's Cemetery, the Bronx, in the afternoon. Soon after this seven-year-old Michael disappeared. Late that night a policeman found him, tired and wet, and too dejected to tell his name. He had not found the cemetery. Yesterday his father, William Kelly, a stone cutter, found him at the Children's Society quarters.

Helen, 10 months old, was the youngest of five children. She died last Saturday. Michael, his mother said, was devoted to his baby sister. He was content to sit by her little go-cart for hours, and would rather be with the baby than play with the children in the street. He proved such a good nurse for the baby that the mother, while busy with housework, frequently left her in his care. When the baby died, Michael was unable to grasp the situation. He believed the baby was asleep, and in time would wake up again as he had so often known her to do before.

When Mr. and Mrs. Kelly and the children set out for the cemetery Sunday afternoon he begged to be allowed to ride in the carriage with his mother and father, who held the coffin on their laps. The little fellow was sobbing bitterly, and the parents readily granted his request. Before the cemetery was reached he asked that the coffin be opened that he might see the face of his little sister before she was put in the ground. He wanted to know why she did not wake up. He saw the coffin lowered into the grave and then he watched the men shovel in the earth. He was puzzled and wanted to know what would happen when the baby woke up.

On the way home from the funeral he protested at leaving the baby alone with strangers. On reaching the house Michael burst into tears at sight of the empty go-cart. He became so fretful that his mother gave him some pennies and sent him to a candy store with his nine-year-old brother William. But in the street the candy was forgotten. William went to toss a ball about with some companions, leaving his brother to his own devices. Before leaving the house Michael told his sister Mary that he was going to try to find the place where they had put the baby.

After William left him he asked a neighbor's children where he could find a big shovel, for, he said, he was going to the cemetery to dig the baby out and bring her home.

At the house yesterday he told how he set out on his journey. He tried to find the shovel, but he could not. He thought then that he could find the shovel in the cemetery, which the man who covered up his sister had used. He remembered crossing Eighth Avenue, and then he walked a long time until he came to the river, but he said he could not find a bridge over which he had crossed in a carriage. It was getting dark, and the rain came down and wet him through and made him shiver. Then he tried to find his way home, but the neighborhood was strange to him, and though he walked a long time he could not see anything that looked like the block in which he lived. He became very tired and sat down in a doorway, where a policeman found him and took him to the station house.

There they set him on a stool, but he was too frightened to answer the questions they asked him, though they were very kind, he said, and dried out his wet clothes.

When Michael did not return home on Sunday his parents felt no concern. They supposed he had gone to his grandmother's house in West 131st Street, where he was allowed to go and remain for as long a time as he liked. Mrs. Kelly said yesterday she was so upset by the death of her baby that neither she nor her husband worried when Michael failed to return. When her mother visited Mrs. Kelly on Tuesday and told her Michael had not been there she was dumbfounded. The parents at once hastened to the West 125th Street Station House and reported Michael as missing.

Kelly visited all of the family's friends and relatives and made a search of the city hospitals for Michael, while his wife telephoned hospitals. Mrs. Kelly, ill from grief and worry, searched the Harlem streets Tuesday night for Michael, while her husband spent the whole of the night looking for him. Yesterday morning a friend suggested that he try the Children's Society at Twenty-third Street and Fourth Avenue, and on calling there he was overjoyed to find the child. He was indignant that the police had failed to notify him that the boy had been found.

COMSTOCK BAITED IN COURT.

Lawyer Says He Will "Show Up" Agent at Hearing of Photographer.

Magistrate Herrman in the Tombs Court postponed yesterday the hearing in the case of Oliver Lippincott, a photographer, accused of abducting eighteen-year-old Emma V. Jahelka, until Nov. 15. Anthony Comstock of the Society for the Suppression of Vice submitted evidence to show that Lippincott was guilty of other offenses in a superseding indictment, and had a wordy war with Mirabeau L. Towns, the counsel for the defendant.

Mr. Towns, asking for an adjournment, said his client had furnished $5,000 bail and was ready to furnish more if the court saw fit.

"Your Honor, a new indictment has been found against this defendant," said Mr. Comstock, "charging him not only with abduction, but with having obscene pictures in his possession."

"Yes, and it will not stand five minutes, and you know it," replied Mr. Towns.

"It contains the same facts in the other indictment, and also charges him with having the pictures," said Mr. Comstock.

"I have not seen this new indictment," replied Mr. Towns. "Last Saturday Mr. Comstock made a complaint against this man, and on Monday he appeared to prosecute the case and refused even to give my client time to consult with counsel. My client is a licensed photographer, and is respected, while the witnesses are not either. The case is a frame-up. Mr. Comstock will be shown up this time."

"But I have the pictures," shouted Mr. Comstock.

"Yes, the only pictures you have are in your own mind," retorted Mr. Towns with some heat. Mr. Comstock turned red.

"I will have seven witnesses to prove all I have said, and additional facts against this defendant," he said.

"Well, you can't do it, and I am going to show you up before the public for once in your life," replied Mr. Towns angrily.

RAISING THE MAINE IN MOVING PICTURES

MEN AT WORK UNDER WATER

A Ring Belonging to Lieut. Merritt, Whose Loss Was Told by Midshipman Boyd.

The first moving pictures of the raising of the Maine in Havana Harbor were exhibited here yesterday for the benefit of the Maine Memorial Committee, of which Gen. James Grant Wilson is President. Practically all the $100,000 needed for the erection of the Maine Monument in Central Park is in the committee's hands, but the committee thought these pictures might be useful educationally.

A young photographer of this city named Jack Read, Jr., took the pictures by permission of the Government, which he agreed to supply with copies for permanent records.

The exhibition took place at the Victoria Theatre. The first picture showed the big cofferdam, which had to be built around the Maine before it could be raised. The cofferdam consists of twenty steel caissons each 75 feet long, arranged around the wreck in the form of an ellipse, with a foot of space between each, this latter space being filled in with steel and wooden piles. The caissons had to be driven down 72 feet in the water and mud of the harbor.

Other pictures showed successively the driving in of these caissons, Capt. H. B. Ferguson, U. S. A., who has charge of the undertaking; the pumping out of 750,000 cubic feet of water inside of the cofferdam, the portholes of the officers' cabins, which are still open, and the vessel's barnacle-covered upper deck and hull.

The name of the battleship on the stern, from which the barnacles and seaweed have been scraped away, was also shown as well as the place in the hull where the explosion occurred; the cutting away of twisted steel wreckage by means of a hydro-acetylene torch, the flame of which has a temperature of 7,000 degrees; the men at work twenty feet below sea level, and the aft turret guns, which are still in place.

There were also views of Capt. Sigsbie's cabin, the fittings in which are so well preserved that, when the wrecking gang reached them recently, water ran from ahe faucets, although the plumbing had not been used for thirteen years.

A photograph of a gold monogram ring belonging to Lieut Merritt of the Maine, which was found near his body in the passageway just forward of the engine hatch, was also shown. The death of Lieut. Merritt was described by Midshipman Boyd to the Court of Inquiry in this way:

"About 9:30 on the night of Feb. 15, 1898, Lieut. Merritt and I were sitting in the junior officers' messroom reading, when I heard a dull report followed by the crashing of splinters and falling of the electric light fixtures overhead. I was struck by a small splinter and was dazed for a moment. I grasped Mr. Merritt by the arm, exclaiming: 'Out of this and up on the deck.'

"Together we groped our way out of the messroom and along the bulkhead in the after torpedo room, where we encountered a cloud of steam and a tremendous rush of water which separated us. As I was lifted off my feet, I caught a steam heater pipe and reached for the ladder leading to the deck above. Water was rushing through the air port, and, as I reached the side, I heard some one cry:

"'God help me; God help me.' I think it must have been Mr. Merritt."

It will require $250,000 more to raise the Maine, Mr. Read said. When the wreck is raised, it will be towed out beyond the mouth of Havana Harbor and sunk with elaborate ceremonies. A Government report of whether the Maine was blown up from the inside or the outside will be made public in a few months, and then Mr. Read expects to return to Havana for more moving pictures.

We Get a Slap

The big coffee trust, made up of Brazilian growers and American importers, has been trying various tactics to boost the price of coffee and get more money from the people.

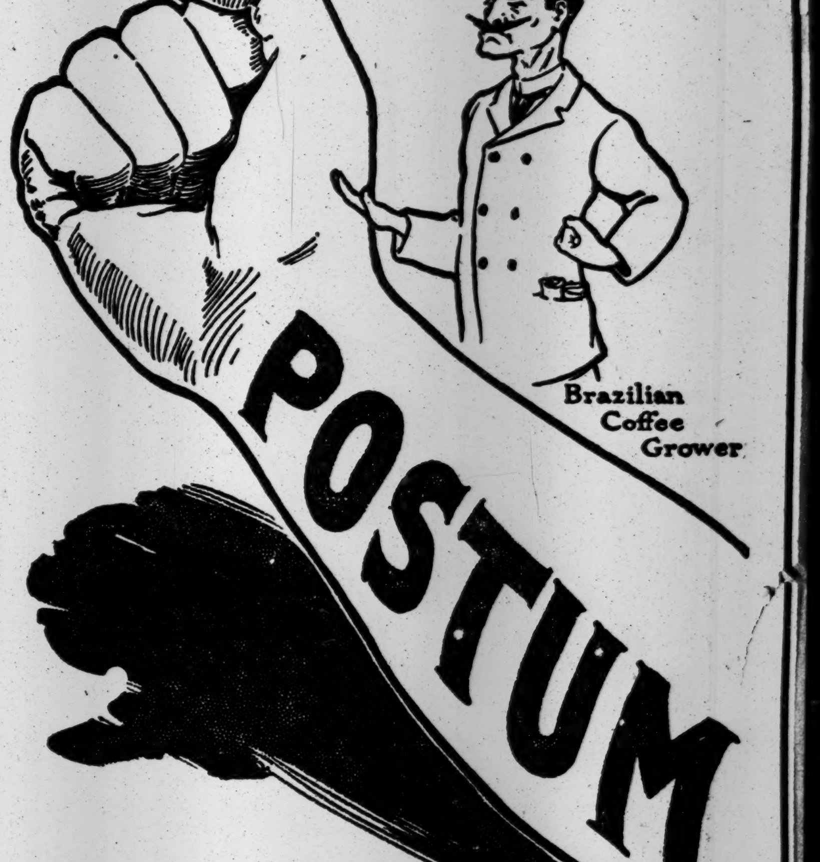
Always the man who is trying to dig extra money out of the public pocket, on a combination, hates the man who blocks the game.

Now comes a plaintive bleat from the "exasperated" ones.

The Journal of Commerce lately said: "A stirring circular has just been issued to the coffee trade." The article further says:

"The coffee world is discussing what is to be the future of coffee as a result of the campaign of miseducation carried on by the cereal coffee people. We have before us a letter from one of the largest roasters in the South asking what can be done to counteract the work of the enemies of coffee.

"The matter should have been taken up by the Brazilian Gov't when they were completing their beautiful valorization scheme."



Then the article proceeds to denounce Postum and works into a fine frenzy, because we have published facts regarding the effect of coffee on some people.

The harrowing tale goes on.

"Where a few years ago everybody drank coffee, several cups a day, now we find in every walk in life people who imagine they cannot drink it. (The underscoring is ours.) Burly blacksmiths, carpenters, laborers and athletes have discontinued or cut down the use of coffee; as there is not a person who reads this and will not be able to find the same conditions existing among his own circle of acquaintances, is it not well for the Brazilians to sit up and take notice?"

Isn't it curious these "burly" strong men should pick out coffee to "imagine" about? Why not "imagine" that regular doses of whiskey are harmful, or daily slugs of morphine?

If "imagination" makes the caffeine in coffee clog the liver, depress the heart and steadily tear down the nervous system, bringing on one or more of the dozens of types of diseases which follow broken-down nervous systems, many people don't know it.

But it remained for the man who has coffee, morphine or whiskey to sell, to have the supreme nerve to say: "You only imagine your disorders. Keep on buying from me."

Let us continue to quote from his article.

"Notwithstanding the enormous increase in population during the past three years, coffee shows an appalling decrease in consumption."

Then follows a tiresome lot of statistics which wind up by showing a decrease of consumption in two years of, in round figures, two hundred million pounds.

Here we see the cause for the attacks on us and the Brazilian sneers at Americans who prefer to use a healthful, home-made breakfast drink and incidentally keep the money in America, rather than send the millions to Brazil and pay for an article that chemists class among the drugs and not among the foods.

Will the reader please remember, we never announce that coffee "hurts all people."

Some persons seem to have excess vitality enough to use coffee, tobacco and whiskey for years and apparently be none the worse, but the number is small, and when a sensible man or woman finds an article acts harmfully they exercise some degree of intelligence by dropping it.

We quote again from the article:

"These figures are paralizing but correct, being taken from Leech's statistics, recognized as the most reliable."

This is one of the highest compliments ever paid to the level-headed, common sense of Americans who cut off about two hundred million pounds of coffee when they found by actual experiment (in the majority of cases) that the subtle drug caffeine, in coffee, worked discomfort and varying forms of disease.

Some people haven't the character to stop a habit when they know it is killing them, but it is easy to shift from coffee to Postum for, when made according to directions, it comes to table a cup of beverage, seal brown color, which turns to rich golden brown when cream is added, and the taste is very like the milder grades of Old Gov't Java.

Postum is a veritable food drink and highly nourishing, containing all the parts of wheat carefully prepared to which is added about 10 per cent of New Orleans molasses, and that is absolutely all that Postum is made of.

Thousands of visitors to the pure food factories see the ingredients and how prepared. Every nook and corner is open for every visitor to carefully inspect. Crowds come daily and seem to enjoy it.

'KNOCKOUT' BROWN WINS FROM BEDELL

East Side Lightweight Outpoints Brooklyn Boxer in Seven of Ten Rounds.

"Knockout" Brown, the east side lightweight, outfought Joe Bedell of Brooklyn in a fast ten-round bout before the Royale A. C. at the Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, last night. The east sider set the pace practically all the way, and the none-too-confident Bedell was satisfied to back away under fire. Not until the last round did Bedell show any desire to stand up and exchange wallops with Brown.

In seven of the rounds Brown had the better of the argument, sometimes by a shade, and other times by a good margin. In the other three honors were even.

In the seventh round Bedell threw Brown to the floor after a little wrestling and the New Yorker did not show up so well during the remaineder of the bout. Although defeated Bedell put up a much harder battle than was expected. Neither was able to score a knock-down during the bout, and little blood was spilled. A crowd of about 2,500 people witnessed the bout.

Bedell was the first to enter the ring, and his appearance brought out considerable applause. Brown followed a minute later, but few cheers were heard. It was announced that both boys had made the prescribed weight, 135 pounds, at 6 o'clock. Danny Morgan was Brown's chief second, and Jimmy Kelly acted in similar capacity for Bedell.

Brown tore after Bedell as soon as they shook hands and drove the Brooklynite to a neutral corner. After the break Bedell shot a hard right to Brown's face which jarred the east sider. Brown did most of the forcing during the round, and Bedell, who appeared nervous, was continually backing away. In the last half minute of the round Bedell began to stand still and met Brown's rushes, landing three or four hard rights as Brown rushed in. It was Brown's round.

Bedell showed more confidence at the beginning of the second round, and immediately rushed Brown to a corner. Brown quickly assumed the aggressive, however, and the pair indulged in some fast exchanges. Bedell still showed that he had considerable respect for the east sider's punches and continually backed away as Brown rushed in. He sent over some hard rights, but had to take more punches than he handed out. Brown had the round by a shade.

Bedell shot over a hard right swing shortly after the third round began, but it only proved the signal for Brown to get busy, and he tore in after the Brooklynite, landing with both hands, and driving Bedell around the ring. Twice during this round Brown landed on Bedell's head with sufficient force to stagger the Brooklyn boy. Bedell landed with his right occasionally, but was easily outpointed in the entire round.

Brown continued his aggressive tactics in the fourth session and forced Bedell around the ring, landing repeatedly with his left. He did all the leading, Bedell being content to stand back and exchange punches after Brown had rushed in. The east side boy was less successful than in the previous rounds and had to take some hard uppercuts in exchange for the blows he delivered. The honors were even for the round.

Brown tore in at the beginning of the fifth round and soon had Bedell backing around the ring to escape punishment. After a clinch in which honors were even Bedell went to the canvas, but it was due more to slipping than from any punch by Brown. In the latter part of the round the Brooklynite gave his followers hope by sending three hard rights to Brown's head, but he ran a poor second for the round.

Two hard lefts to the head shook Bedell up early in the sixth round and he backed away from the fusillade, only to take a left swing to the stomach. Brown continued to set the pace throughout the round, landing three blows to every one he received, but Bedell was weathering the storm well and showed no signs of distress as he walked to his corner. It was another round for Brown.

Bedell appeared tired during the seventh round and Brown did all the landing. Two left swings to Bedell's stomach plainly distressed the Brooklynite, and the greater part of the round he spent in backing away from Brown's attack. The east sider rushed him from one side of the ring to the other, raining blow after blow and taking nothing in return.

In the eighth round, after some wrestling, Bedell swung Brown around, and the east sider went to the floor hard. Brown appeared angered at the fall, and during the last two minutes of the round he tore after the Brooklynite as if to make a short ending of the bout, but he was unable to do as good work as in his cooler moments, and the best he could get was an even break for the round.

The ninth session was marked by plenty of effort by both boys, and a few hard blows were exchanged, but for the most part they were not cleanly landed.

The boys tore after each other in the tenth round as if a championship depended upon their efforts, and was easily the fastest of the bout. Bedell appeared to be more confident of himself than in preceding chapters, and mixed with the east side boy much better than before. Brown was too eager to land a knockout punch, and his aggressiveness was always in evidence. He had the round by a shade.

The semi-final bout introduced a clever Philadelphia lightweight, Bill Adams, against Kid Alberts of New York. It was the first appearance of the Quaker City boy in New York and he made a most favorable impression. He jabbed Alberts with a steady string of right and left punches and floored the New Yorker in the first round. He had the better of five of the six rounds, Alberts taking the honors in the fourth.

In the preliminaries, all of which went the full four rounds, Young Evans fought a draw with Smoke Jones, Harry Thiel was outpointed by Freddie Kaiser, and Jimmy Barrett fought Willie Rothwell to a draw.

Sharkey A. C. Bouts.

Young Kurtz made a chopping block of Billy Lewis last night at the Sharkey Athletic Club in the star attraction. In the fourth round of the go Lewis went to the floor for the count of nine and appeared to be in a bad way. He lasted through the ten rounds, pluckily stalling off the efforts of Kurtz to knock him out. In the semi-final between Young Daly and Tom Andrews the former, who had a five-inch advantage in the matter of height, jabbed his opponent's head throughout the six rounds, but failed to stop him.

McFarland to Box Murphy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Packey McFarland of Chicago and Harlem Tommy Murphy have been tentatively matched to fight here Thanksgiving Day under the management of James Coffroth. McFarland has wired his acceptance to Coffroth and Murphy is said to have previously agreed.

COBB DEFEATS SHUGRUE.

Philadelphian Leads Jersey City Boxer at Longacre A. A.

Longacre Athletic Association patrons were treated to an interesting series of bouts last night, three of which resulted in knockouts, lasting in all but five rounds, with the final bout between Ty Cobb of Philadelphia and Young Shugrue of Jersey City going the limit of ten rounds, and the verdict of the crowd going to the Quaker City lad by a large margin.

This last go was a good battle from beginning to end, with Cobb having the better of all the rounds excepting the first, fifth, sixth, and seventh, which were so evenly contested that it would have been hard to pick the winner. In the fourth Cobb dropped his man with a right to the jaw in a neutral corner, and seemed content to wait for the three final rounds before rushing Shugrue in whirlwind fashion.

The winner had the worst of the weights and was overshadowed in reach and height. He made up for these deficiencies by aggressive tactics which caused Shugrue to have a wholesome respect for the wallop with which he collided time and again. Shugrue almost continually held on to his smaller opponent and had to be pulled away by the referee times innumerable.

During the third and fourth rounds Cobb waded into his man like a battering ram and had him in a bad way at the end of this stage. Shugrue rounded to in good shape at the commencement of the fifth and offset Cobb's hard punches at long range and some effective inside work by jabbing tactics which evened matters up in the matter of points.

He managed to get a stand-off during three rounds prior to the eighth, but after this took apparently more than his share of punishment from this time on to the end, hanging on repeatedly to avoid the shower of punches Cobb was shooting over. Try as he would, the Philadelphian could not land his "haymaker," but Shugrue got in the way of many short-arm wallops which set his head back.

The preliminaries were short-lived. In the first Charlie West, after being dropped by Young Rocco in the opening round, fell a victim to a blow over the heart midway in the second round, and was put out for several minutes. The second came to a similar ending, with Charlie Smith stopping Young Hess with a body punch early in the second round. Battling Plunger knocked out Jimmy Allen with a blow to the eye in the first round of the third preliminary.

The semi-final called out a hard-fought affair between Willie Lang and Charles Nolan, which, although it went the limit of four rounds, was a corker from start to finish. Lang had none the worst of the first in two sessions, but apparent lack of condition caused him to become a mark for right swings in the third, and he went down four times during this round for almost the count in each instance. He lasted out the last round, although he was pretty well outclassed.

CUTLER OUT IN SECOND.

Tom Kennedy Lands Deciding Blow Soon After Bout Starts.

Tom Kennedy, a local heavyweight who, a short time ago, fought a sensational ten-round contest with Al Palzer, in which the latter was credited with the victory, came back last night and put a halt to the aspirations of Marty Cutler of Chicago by stopping him in the second round of their scheduled ten-round bout at the New Star A. C.

Kennedy had all the advantages possible at the start, and although he made short work of Cutler his performance cannot be taken seriously. The local man had height, weight, and reach on the Chicagoan and soon started out with confidence by forcing the work in the first round. Cutler appeared to have quite a knowledge of boxing and landed several good punches, although they were not hard and never worried Kennedy.

The second and final round was short lived. Kennedy opened the session by jabbing his left to the face without a let-up. After pegging with the left several times and making Cutler guard his face, Kennedy suddenly shifted and brought over the right to the stomach. Another jabbing spell was started and Kennedy landed the left and then held Cutler at arm's length and with one hand fast pounded with the right.

After two of these occasions the end was evidently near, as Cutler began to cover up and offer no resistance. After a hard jab that landed flush on the jaw Kennedy whipped over his right on the stomach and Cutler dropped in a heap with both hands clasped over his stomach and refused to go further, and the referee waved Kennedy to his corner.

Two ten-round contests preceded the final number, and with both going the full distance the spectators were repaid for the short duration of the final. In the first ten-round contest Billy Galley of Australia and Jimmie Jarvis, a local featherweight, put up a good exhibition, in which Galley was entitled to the honors.

Eddie Kelly of Harlem and Happy Hayes were the other principals in the second ten-round bout. Both boys were fast and clever and put up a good exhibition from start to finish in which neither could gain an advantage.

NEWARK CLUB SALE.

Half Interest Bought by G. L. Solomon of New York—McGinnity to Manage.

Negotiations were completed last night in this city for the sale of a half interest in the Newark Club of the Eastern Baseball League to George L. Solomon, a New York manufacturer. It was announced that Henry Clay Smith of Chicago, who has been a partner with Joe McGinnity in the ownership of the Newark franchise, parts with his interest in the club, but McGinnity remains as partner with Solomon and as manager of the team.

The price paid was not announced, but it has recently been reported that an offer of something like $60,000 for the Newark franchise, made by Frank Mihlon, the promoter, was refused.

It was announced that a number of new players have been engaged for next season to strengthen the club, including Pitcher Gaskill of the New York State League, Robert Vaughn of Toronto, a short stop; Edward Zimmerman, recently of Brooklyn, as third baseman; Summerlot, from the Washington American team, as first baseman, and others for the outfield.

Wolgast Starts on Tour of World.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Ad Wolgast, champion lightweight pugilist, left here to-day for Los Angeles, where he will fight Freddie Welch on Thanksgiving Day. After that fight he will leave for a trip around the world, going first to Australia. "I have given up hopes of getting another match in this country for a year," he said. Wolgast said that he had not met any representatives of McFarland in Chicago.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

Young Loughrey has been substituted for Jeff Smith at the National Sporting Club to-night, and the Philadelphia welterweight will exchange punches with Walter Coffey, the Californian. Smith had to withdraw, as he injured his hand in training. Loughrey is known as one of the best welterweights in the ring, and the bout should furnish plenty of action, as both are in good shape. Loughrey gained a decisive victory over Harry Powers a few nights ago, and Coffey's last bout resulted in a knockout for Jack Denning in four rounds.

The bout between Leach Cross and Tommy Maloney, scheduled for to-night at the Fairmont Athletic Club, has been postponed until next Tuesday night. The change was made by the management to avoid conflict with other shows. Cross will continue his training at the New Polo Athletic Association. Phil Cross will be matched with some promising lightweight in the semi-final bout.

NEW COLLEGIATE SHOT-PUT RECORD

R. L. Beatty of Columbia Sends 16-Pound Weight a Distance of 48 Feet 7⅜ Inches.

In the first of a series of handicap track events to be held at Columbia University, R. L. Beatty, '14, established a new collegiate record in the shotput yesterday afternoon on South Field. He pushed the sixteen-pound weight a distance of 48 feet, 7⅜ inches, which is 2 feet, 2 inches better than the former record made by W. F. Kreuger of Swarthmore in 1907. H. S. Babcock, '12, who took second in the event, was not in Beatty's class, and his handicap of 10 feet did not bring his figures near Beatty's.

Beatty had bettered the mark of yesterday in practice, and once in an interclass meet, when he did 49 feet, 2¾ inches. The latter performance was submitted as a collegiate record at the time, but owing to the shot being a little under weight the mark was not allowed. At no time since Beatty has been putting the shot on South Field, however, has the weather been particularly favorable for record-breaking performances.

Arrangements were made by the track management so that there should be no chance of a dispute over the acceptance of the mark by the A. A. U. and I. C. A. A. A. A. The shot was measured in the physics laboratory by one of the professors and after the event the shot was sealed up in the presence of the officials and sent by them to J. E. Sullivan. The tape, which was the regulation A. A. U. tape, was sealed up with the shot. The shot when first weighed was a little lighter than required, and nails were driven in it to bring it up to the standard. The following men served as officials at the contest: Hugh Baxter, N. Y. A. C.; Charles Dieges, N. Y. A. C.; C. Hatfield, N. Y. A. C.; Charles H. Mapes, Columbia, and Harry A Fisher, Columbia.

Columbia Holds Lacrosse Meeting.

A special meeting in regard to the reinstatement of lacrosse at Columbia University was held yesterday afternoon, but as yet no definite decision has been made. From the general discussion before the Student Board, which is now left as the final tribunal in the matter, it seems probable that the sport will be revived on the campus. Objections were brought up by the board to the effect that the game would draw candidates from other teams, and that the practice in the Spring on South Field would interfere with that of baseball. The backers of the movement to reinstate the game have offered to meet these objections, first by assuring the board that no man out for another team would be allowed on the squad, and, secondly, by obtaining another field for the practice. If this final proposition of a separate field can be definitely settled and the board informed of actual arrangements which show such a field can be secured, the game will be reinstated. Another meeting has been called for next Monday, when it is expected that a definite answer will be announced.

Boys' Club Ties Merion at Soccer.

On Election Day the Boys' Club, association football team of this city visited Philadelphia and contested in a 1 to 1 tie game with the Merion Cricket Club Field Club at Haverford. The Merion eleven scored from a corner early in the contest and led by the score of 1 to 0 until half time was called. Twenty minutes before the finish of the game the team from Tenth Street and Avenue A did fast playing, and the match resulted in the Boys' Club team scoring one goal and tieing their opponents. The Merion eleven had the advantage in weight, but found the Manhattan team their equal in speed.

MORE MILITARY ENTRIES.

Two Belgians Coming with Five Mounts for Garden Horse Show.

Two horse show entries from Belgium, those of Capt. von Langhendonck of the First Regiment de Guides and of Lieut. Leon Ripet of the Second Chasseurs, were received by mail yesterday, having been posted the day before the entry list closed. The officers are now on their way across the Atlantic, bringing with them several fine military mounts, among which are Kiriki and Coolpart. These entries swell the list of military officers who will participate in the show to forty-one, five nations being represented.

But the military will not wear all of the gold braid and brass buttons to be seen at the horse show, which opens a week from next Saturday in Madison Square Garden, for twenty-nine members of New York City's mounted police troops will give an exhibition drill that will be indicative of the efficiency that body has attained. The troop will be commanded by Lieut. David McCarthy, with Sergt. John A. Park carrying the colors, and Patrolman George Kretzchman as bugler.

Nine entries also have been received for the Militia Class. Capt. William A. Bryant of the Essex Troop, National Guard of New Jersey, and Lieut. H. W. Brown of Troop B of the Ohio Cavalry have each made nominations. The other entries are all from the National Guard of New York, and include those of Capt. Frank B. Barrett of Battery D, Lieut. Alfred Wendt of Squadron A, William Spangler Mitchell, and Perry Williston, also of Squadron A. Charles A. Doscher and Charles I. DeBevoise of Squadron C, and J. T. Delany of Battery F.

CLINTON RUNNERS WIN.

Defeat Townsend Harris Boys Over Five-Mile Course, 23 to 36.

The cross-country runners of De Witt Clinton High School defeated the team from the Townsend Harris School yesterday afternoon over the latter's course, extending from 139th to 181st Street, on the west side. The full course covers approximately five miles, and Taylor of Clinton, who led the pack across the finish line, bettered the best previous figure for the course by 1 minute 5 seconds. Farola of Townsend Harris and Rosen of Clinton, who followed Taylor home in the order named, also did better than the best previous mark. Taylor's time was 31:05, and the other two finished below thirty-two minutes. Twenty-one runners figured in the competition, nine from Clinton and twelve from Townsend Harris. The entire Clinton team finished among the first fourteen, the seven who brought up the rear being all from Townsend Harris. The score of the race was 23 to 36. Following is the order of finish:

Taylor, Clinton; Farola, Townsend Harris; Rosen, Clinton; Rothberg, Clinton; Mintz and Auerback, Townsend Harris; Baumeister, Richards, McGrath, and Goldstein, Clinton; A. C. Cohen and Kohn, Townsend Harris; Baer and J. Cohen, Clinton; Deikman, Miller, Kobelman, Barron, Vernon, Rubenstein, and Duncan, Townsend Harris.

Zbyszko Turns Down Raicevich.

J. H. Herman, manager for Zbyszko, the wrestler, wires from Chicago that "if Harry Pollock, manager for Giovanni Raicievich, will guarantee me $10,000 I will consent to have Zbyszko wrestle him at any time. I am making this offer to Gotch," he says, "and see no reason why I should not receive a like amount in a contest with the Italian champion. If Raicevich, however, shows championship calibre by defeating all of the other heavyweights, I would then consider a match, but at this time this is out of the question, for in my estimation there are a number of men at present in America that are capable of defeating him. Let him take on some of the other heavyweights first."

Groton School Eleven Beaten.

SOUTHBORO, Mass., Nov. 8.—The St. Mark's School football team to-day defeated the Groton School boys by a score of 5 to 0.

BEECHER SCORES KNOCKOUT.

Young Lenny Sent to Dreamland in Fourth Round.

Willie Beecher, the rugged east side lightweight, who fought ex-champion Battling Nelson to a standstill recently, scored a knockout over Young Lenny, a lightweight of Baltimore, in the star bout of ten rounds at the stag of the Palm Athletic Club of Brooklyn last night. The bout terminated in the fourth round, after Beecher had floored his opponent three times with hard right hand swings to the jaw.

The east side lightweight was in fine form and went after his opponent from the tap of the first gong, and by hard and aggressive fighting managed to win the first two rounds with a slight margin. In the third session Lenny bounded out of his corner and was all over Beecher before the latter had quite reached the middle of the ring. The Baltimore lightweight did all the aggressive work in this round and had a big advantage over Beecher for the round.

Beecher came up smiling for the fourth session and, feinting for the body, drew his opponent's guard down and swung a crashing right to Lenny's jaw. Lenny went down like the proverbial log and took a count of six. Then he staggered to his feet and he was no more than straightened out when Beecher landed another blow of the same sort, and Lenny went down again, this time staying on the floor for a nine-second count. When the Philadelphia fighter arose to his feet Beecher landed another right to the jaw, this time with all the steam he possessed, and Referee Moe Smith counted ten before Lenny got to his feet.

The semi-final bout between Fred Blackburn, a Philadelphia welterweight, and Frankie Hunter of Baltimore, which was scheduled to go ten rounds, was stopped by Referee Smith before the fighters had gone half the distance on account of the poor showing that the contestants were making. The referee had warned both fighters repeatedly, but they paid no attention to him, and Smith was compelled to stop the bout in the fourth session.

Clean Bread
Has Come to New York

At the Ward Bakeries—one in The Bronx, one in Brooklyn—the bare hand never touches the dough or the bread. Modern machines, under the care of Master Bakers, do the work. These immense plants are flooded with daylight. Every device of science insures perfect mixing, proving and baking. The materials are the finest, the bread is the richest, purest, most delicious ever made. The proof is in the eating.

Weighing the Materials

In the great, brightly lighted and white-tiled room illustrated above, the ingredients of bread are carefully measured and weighed. The flour, all made from the best northwestern spring wheat—the milk, from our own selected farms—the purest water—the best yeast that can be made—and salt and sugar. These are here assembled, weighed and mixed in proper proportions.

Through eight distinct processes—through eight big, light rooms—through five stories (all above ground, in the open sunlight), Ward's Tip-Top Bread passes.

No hand touches the bread at any stage in the making. It is sifted, rebolted, blended, weighed, mixed, cut, moulded, proved and baked by machinery. It is carried from each process to the next by machinery.

Pure Food

You have read a great deal about pure food during the past few years. A great awakening has come upon the American people—they suddenly realized the tremendous importance of absolute purity in all they eat. They learned that they were not always getting this purity. Articles have been published to educate readers along the lines of purity in food. Laws have been passed and not a few manufacturers of adulterated foods have been deservedly punished.

But what do you know about bread—the one food you eat more of than any other—the real mainstay of life and energy?

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, NOV. 9, 1911.

THE MEANING OF THE VOTE.

It is not always easy, it is often impossible, to say what issues, what thoughts and purposes, influence the minds of the voters and determine their action at the polls. It is a much simpler task to ascertain what has not influenced them. While no man can give an interpretation that will fit all results of Tuesday's voting, it is in a general way quite evident that the policies of the Republican Administration at Washington have not been approved, that they have nowhere been so prominent and controlling in the minds of the voters as visibly to influence the result.

It would be admitted, we suppose, that the most conspicuous policies of Mr. Taft's Administration are those embodied in the President's veto of the Democratic bills lowering tariff taxes, and in the dissolution suits against the Trusts. Those things come first to mind when men speak of the Administration's policies. Yet popular approval of the President's acts was too lukewarm to save Massachusetts, although that Commonwealth has usually been considered surely Republican. Mr. Foss made his canvass chiefly on the tariff; Mr. Frothingham's canvass under the direction of the Lodge machine was frankly put upon the standpat issue. To be sure, this is an "off year," but even in off years the disposition of the public toward the party in power influences local voting. Nor was the approval of Mr. Taft's policies sufficiently marked to prevent a great many Republican reverses in his own State of Ohio. In Cincinnati, where he, as we think, most unwisely, came to the support of Boss Cox, the Democrats have elected their candidate for Mayor. Democratic Mayors were elected in a good many other Ohio cities. It is to be remembered that Ohio is Mr. Harmon's State. If. Mr. Taft's attitude upon the tariff could help him anywhere, it ought to have helped him in the great protectionist State of Pennsylvania. Yet in Philadelphia, a reform movement has triumphed in the election of Mr. Blankenburg over a candidate of great strength supported by the Republican machine and the whole Penrose influence. Kentucky has again become a Democratic State. Evidently no very potent influences favorable to the Administration were at work there.

The result in New York has no recognizable relation to National questions, since the issue of Murphyism was quite sufficient to restore the Republican majority in the Assembly and to make such startling inroads upon the Tammany power in this city as to bring that organization to the very verge of defeat. In Maryland the revolt against the Gorman machine and the indignation roused by the exposure of widespread frauds was sufficient to turn the scale. Still, if any good Republican wants to construe the vote in New York and in Maryland as an indorsement of the Administration, we should not be disposed to deny him that crumb of comfort.

In New Jersey the one obvious fact is that Gov. Wilson has failed to hold his own State. His campaign for the Presidential nomination, it is believed, has met with a good deal of success. Renouncing some beliefs that he has held for a lifetime, adopting and advocating certain radical and "progressive" fads and nostrums of the Bryan element of the party, he has given to his Presidential "boom" a look of substance and promise. But he has lost his own State of New Jersey. It is always a bad thing, a very bad thing, for an aspirant to the highest honors his party can bestow to lose the confidence and the majority support of his home people at the last election prior to the National Convention. If Gov. Wilson's new principles are sound, and if the Administration is successful, he ought to have been able to hold New Jersey for the Democracy.

All sorts of things may happen between now and next June, and certainly between now and next November, to dim the memory of the 1911 election and to confuse those prophets who would make of it a portent for next year. But now and for this present time it may be said that the people did not by their votes on Tuesday exhibit any uncontrollable enthusiasm for Republican policies or for the Republican Administration. Nor do we discern any evidence that a verdict of approval of "progressive" policies has been rendered.

CONFORMING TO THE LAW.

Justices Lacombe, Cox, Ward, and Noyes of the Circuit Court have evidently read the decree of the Supreme Court in the Tobacco case with more diligent attention than the counsel who recently appeared before them in opposition to the plan of reorganization. It is, indeed, surprising that counsel of such eminence should have asked so many things which the court finds it quite impossible to grant, impossible not merely because it cannot bend its will or its discretion to issue a decree complying with requests of counsel, but because under the order of the highest court it has no shadow of authority to do the things asked for. For these reasons the court declines to forbid any present stockholder of the American Tobacco Company to own securities of more than one of the new companies; it declines to shatter the United Cigar Stores Company into so many fragments that its business would be destroyed; it brushes aside Mr. Wickersham's request for a five-year period of probation; and it declares with much plainness of speech that a receivership and the destruction of the tobacco company's business and property was neither decreed nor intended by the Supreme Court.

A receivership or the complete crippling of the entire American Tobacco Company interest would have mightily pleased some of its rivals—at least, that appears from the character of the requests made by their counsel. To these requests the court has turned an exceedingly deaf ear. Of very great significance, not only in this case but in others with which the courts may hereafter have to deal, is the declaration of opinion written by Judge Lacombe that judicial sanction for this plan or something very near this plan is the only alternative to a receivership, which is the same thing as saying that the plan presented to the court must in substance, but with some modifications, be approved, since hard rulings that would of necessity bring on a receivership would be in plain violation of the terms of the higher court's decree. The plan, moreover, is not the creation solely of the American Tobacco Company's lawyers. It has been shaped by frequent and protracted consultation and at conferences where the Government was represented and the views of the court taken. That was what the Supreme Court ordered. The opinion delivered by the court which, in the natural order of events, will be followed by the issue of a final decree in conformity therewith, confirms the almost universal impression in the public mind that the plan of reorganization is a fair and proper one, and that it was an attempt in good faith to recreate new conditions in conformity with the law as decreed by the higher court.

It is a cause of great satisfaction, not merely to the defendants in this action and to the stockholders of the American Tobacco Company, but to all the business interests of the country, that a conclusion has been reached in this matter, and a conclusion that, while conforming to the law and to the court's decree, pays a decent regard to the rights of property owners and to the public interest, which demands that business be carried on, not destroyed.

THE PASSING OF MR. BALFOUR.

We can imagine that the ill-health which forces Mr. Balfour to give up the leadership of the Unionist Party in England is not of a painful character, or wholly unwelcome. It has been repeatedly said of him by his associates, who ought to know, that he long since ceased to find satisfaction in his post, and that he retained it from a sense of duty. He retires now with his party at the lowest ebb of its fortunes since he first became prominent in it. He has, perhaps, not led, but accompanied, it to defeat three times in succession, and he leaves it demoralized and distracted. It is not a gratifying situation for him, but we can readily believe that he thinks it is not his fault.

In a sense it is not. The party has been split by the protectionist scheme which Mr. Joseph Chamberlain forced upon it. It is not easy to say whether the majority of the party was with or against Mr. Chamberlain in this matter. It is certain that a large part of the Unionists were uncompromisingly against the scheme. Where Mr. Balfour's responsibility came in was in his failure to take a decided stand upon it. He might have lost, he was afraid that he would, but he would have saved himself from long years of perplexity and helplessness. Apparently the trouble was that he was unable to make up his mind in one direction or another. He had like weakness as to the policy in South Africa and as to phases of foreign relations. Yet it must be said for him that for the last dozen years he has been forced to act as the leader of a hopelessly disunited party. He has been content to do what he thought would save it from dissolution. There has been no time when he, or, probably, any other man, could really lead it to triumph.

He has never taken a strong hold on the confidence and hardly any on the affections of his party even in his most successful days. And the truth is that, on the other hand, he never has had any deep liking for his party. He has had no fixed attachment to its principles, and no clear and simple notion of what those principles are. But for that matter neither has any other English statesman on his side.

It is probably better for England that he should yield his place, and let his party find a man, if any there be, who can fill it more strongly and with greater, if blinder, devotion. Meanwhile all parties will concede that he has been a pure, high-minded, and intellectually an exceedingly able man, with a certain distinction that no other Englishman of his day possessed. If he shall use his newly acquired leisure to give the world a philosophic review of politics and parties as he has seen them it would be a great book.

THE UTAH'S MORMON TRAY.

The presentation on Tuesday to the battleship Utah, by citizens of its namesake State, of a coffee tray to be used as a substitute in the silver service of 129 pieces, also presented this week by another group of Utah's citizens, marks the culmination of a strange controversy. As everybody knows, the coffee tray in the original set is distinguished by its design of the Mormon temple and of the statue of Brigham Young. The substitute piece has been presented, and accepted, as an expression by the members of the American Party in Utah, of its "loyalty to that State and to the Constitution and domestic customs of the United States of America." That is the inscription on the tray. In the hearing given to the protestants, by the Committee on Naval Affairs at Washington on May 16 last, Mrs. H. S. Owen of Salt Lake City, representing the non-Mormon party of Utah, complained that the objections to the Mormon plate, made by her and the committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution to the Secretary of the Navy, were unwelcome:

> He said: "You ladies seem to think that this is a very simple matter, but it is a political matter and demands a great deal of care." That is where we stand with the Secretary of the Navy. I went to see him this morning, but he did not come in.

Feeling over the gift among the opponents of Mormonism in Utah has run high. Mrs. Owen denounces Brigham Young as a defier and insulter of the power of the Nation, as the great exemplar of polygamy, and worse:

> He was a murderer, and you have here in your archives the absolute proof that he was responsible for the Mountain Meadow massacre.

In the tabernacle, symbolized upon the Mormon tray, Brigham Young is represented to have said:

> Don't be discouraged at your continual failure to enter the Union; we will enter the Union; we will divide ourselves evenly between the great political parties; we will ally ourselves with both of the parties and throw our influence so that we can reap the benefits we want. We will pull the wool over the eyes of the American citizens; we will make them swallow Mormonism, polygamy and all, and when we are admitted as a State, we will snap our fingers in the face of Uncle Sam. We will live undisturbed, just as we have lived.

By this, and by the indictment of Brigham Young as the husband of twenty-five acknowledged wives, we may interpret the allusions inscribed upon the tray now accepted as a substitute in the Utah's silver service. Miss J. E. Richards, who appeared at the Congressional hearing in behalf of the Daughters of the American Revolution, protested that their committee considered Brigham Young to be a "most undesirable type of American citizen to be chosen to decorate the silverware of any battleship of the United States, to go around the world under the American flag." It is possible that the Prophet of Utah never uttered the words attributed to him and quoted above. It is a matter of record, however, that, by his example and authority, the Mormon Church through a long period of its history defied the Federal Government and the customs of the American people.

But the objection to the Mormon platter made by President Robert M. Stevenson of the Westminster College in Salt Lake City was conclusive. Its design represented the symbols of a sect; it should not have been approved by the United States Government. Had the great Calvinistic churches asked the Government thus to honor John Calvin, the sectarian request also would have been properly refused.

OUR "MENACE" TO CANADA.

An opposition member of Parliament, that is to say, a member of the same politics as The London Post, actually raised in the House the question about our "navy" on the lakes which we thought no more suitable to be taken seriously than Speaker Clark's annexation of Canada. About the time that we were suggesting that the matter would be better left to Canada Sir Edward Grey was announcing that he had made that disposition of it. He declined to instruct Ambassador Bryce on the subject, and added:

> I propose to leave to the Canadian Government the initiative and thereby show our desire to act in harmony, sympathy, and co-operation with them.

Nothing different or better could be desired, and nothing remains to be done. The entire matter has been settled in the most neighborly manner without thought of giving offense on our part, and without the taking of offense on the part of Canada's Government. When we asked Canada for permission to pass certain "warships" through the Canadian canals consent was given in the most accommodating manner. And when the agitators objected to such urbanity the consent was canceled in a correspondence which never was published, without an intimation of grievance on our part. The entire matter was one of routine. Yet a leading London journal for months has been publishing fire-eating articles about it, and the matter is brought before both Parliaments. It is agreeable to remark that the imperial Government is as placid as Canada, and if all British subjects were as sensible as the British and Canadian officials nothing more need be said about the matter.

Americans hereabouts will need to be told what all this pother is about. They know that they have a navy, but they never have thought of Canada in connection with it, yet somehow both the Dominion and the British Parliament think the matter in some way irregular. Having a navy, we naturally take pride in manning it with Americans, and maintain training schools and recruiting stations for that purpose. The lake States also have their naval militia, numbering almost 200 officers and over 2,000 men. One Federal school north of Chicago on the Lake Michigan shore cost $3,500,000, and President Taft was to have dedicated it this Fall, but the proposed ceremony appears to have been dropped quietly since the British took notice on behalf of Canada. These gallant tars like to get afloat, and among the ceremonies were to have been "manoeuvres" and the "bombardment" of Chicago. If Chicago why not Toronto? The ultra-patriots saw no reason and actually compared these proceedings with our demonstration along the Mexican border. The sailor boys' picnic was associated with the army post at Plattsburg, and there were those capable of warning Canada to prepare for eventualities.

It seems too absurd to set these things down seriously, but it is sober fact that the manoeuvres and bombardment of Chicago were dropped in deference to the Canadian notion that, like the reciprocity treaty, they were in some way part of Speaker Clark's annexation programme, and that the whole thing might explode beneath Canada's feet at any moment. Feeling in Canada ran so high that Americans on a holiday and spending their money in Canada hardly dared raise the flags on their yachts in lake ports, or over their Summer cottages. The American flag was ordered off the stage in theatres of several cities, the order being that if any deeds of heroism were to be shown they must be under the British flag.

Not for worlds would we wound Canadian susceptibilities even for the purpose of letting Americans know what is going on. Whatever grievance Canadians or Englishmen have regarding these matters they have another grievance in common with ourselves. It was this sentiment which cost both countries reciprocity, and which may cost all three parties the accomplishment of arbitration. The Post actually proposed the adjournment of the Lord Mayor's dinner in support of arbitration until the United States dismantled its navy on the lakes. At the same time Canadians who kept their heads were arguing that arbitration would enable them to reduce their military establishment, since it would assure that Canada could only be attacked by the ocean, and that Canada need prepare only for coast defense. Our consciences are so clear about any offensive intent toward Canada that we may be excused some vexation that the trivialities about the lake navy can obstruct so much more important matters.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Payment Gives Control. Walter Storey, General Secretary of the National Board of Censorship which has taken upon itself the guardianship of public morals from injury by moving-picture shows, defends his organization from the charges just brought against it by the Woman's Municipal League. His statement reads smoothly, and there is a certain superficial plausibility in the argument that as the activities of the board are of benefit to the makers of films it is only fair that the latter should pay a part of the board's expenses. Mr. Storey must know, however, that the attack which the women have made is a very serious one, and if he doesn't know he will soon find out that there is general agreement with the league's contentions as to the inevitable result of letting inspectors get their wages from those whose products or wares they inspect.

Invariably control more or less nearly complete goes with payment, and the inspection becomes farcical or corrupt in exact proportion to the degree of dependence. That an attempt was made to conceal this source of the Censorship Board's revenue showed full appreciation of the difficulty with which it could be defended, and it was only natural that the more zealous members and servitors of the board soon had to be warned that it wouldn't do to be too critical of the films offered for judgment or to make too much fuss if the condemnations and recommendations of the censors were occasionally ignored or evaded.

Of course it wouldn't. Nobody buys what he doesn't want, and it would be absurd to expect pleasant relations between the film makers and their nominal guardians to survive the making of trouble and loss by the latter for the former.

These considerations apart, those of us who have a dislike for the exercise of public functions by private societies, though not denying the seeming necessity for this in some cases, would like to have the number of cases reduced as much as possible, and are inclined to ask what need there ever was or is of these particular censors. Theoretically, at least, the law and the police combined are competent to protect the public from the exhibition of objectionable films. Unquestionable indecency can certainly be stopped without unofficial help, and when only standards of taste are involved we have no assurance that the board's inspectors will not be either unduly severe or unduly lenient in their judgments. Possibly the public is pretty well able to take care of itself, and perhaps what the law does not forbid nobody should forbid.

Now Murphy Talks of Defamers. It is sufficiently irritating when Mayor Gaynor, as he has much too often done, confuses himself and his policies with New York and its interests, and characterizes anybody who criticises him, his acts, or his statements in regard to municipal conditions, as "defamers of the city." What is only a trial of patience, however, in a man whose personality and intentions are as little open to attack as are those of the Mayor is well-nigh intolerable in the boss of Tammany Hall. Therefore is it not with impatience, but with the anger excited by an insolent affront, that one reads the document issued by—or in the name of—Mr. Murphy when he found that he had not lost quite everything in Tuesday's election.

The result, he wrote—or somebody wrote for him—"shows conclusively that the people did their own thinking and are not blinded to actual conditions by the shrieks and cries of those who, for their own selfish purposes, are willing to assail and slander the fame of New York City."

Does it, indeed! It is rather hard to understand how blindness of any kind can be caused by the shrieks and cries of anybody, but the mixing of metaphors is a trivial fault in the commission of which Mr. Murphy has, if not the best of company, much that is honest and reputable, and that isn't what makes his proclamation offensive. What does that is his assumption that he and the city are one and that both are so nearly perfect that nobody who is not a slanderer and defamer for selfish purposes antagonizes the one or insists that the other might be and should be better in many ways than it is.

That there are worse governed cities than New York—cities where the "actual conditions" give more reason for just complaint—is probably true, and certainly true is it that New York now shows in many ways appreciable improvement from the New York of old days, and, for that matter, of days not so old. But it is as little defamation of New York as of Mr. Murphy to see the imperfections of both, to mention them, and to try to remedy them. The real enemy of the city, or at least its most dangerous friend, is he who would perpetuate its evils by denying their existence. Only in the most benighted communities, nowadays, is the presence of infectious diseases concealed for fear of "hurting business." Political ills, like cholera, typhoid, and the plague, thrive in the dark and can be conquered only in the light, by open warfare.

A Penalty of the Franchise. A woman who was asked whether the fact that registration as a voter usually involves the disclosure and recording of the age of the person registered would not prevent many women from exercising the elective franchise even if it were offered to them, frankly admitted that this was probable. She declared, however, that the requirement to tell age was wholly unnecessary as a means of identification, and of no practical utility in cases of doubt. She also said that not a few men are kept from the polls by the disinclination which is supposed to be a characteristic exclusively feminine.

The men, according to this authority, conceal their ages, after reaching the fourth decade, as carefully as do women, and do it because of the increased difficulty of retaining, and especially of getting, employment that comes with advancing years. That as many men as women are thus reticent is of course not true, but it may be true that in some men the fear of the age handicap is so great that they disfranchise themselves rather than intrust their secret to the registration clerks. That would be carrying caution absurdly far, but perhaps it is done—by how many it would be interesting to know.

As for the women, their reasons for concealment are of course quite different and more numerous.

Joseph Barondess, Benefactor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With respect to Joseph Barondess, just appointed by Mayor Gaynor to the Board of Education, whose conviction in 1891 was referred to in your issue of Sunday, permit me to inform you that of the eleven Judges of the various courts of New York who had this case under advisement, seven of the eleven declared Mr. Barondess to be innocent of any charges made in connection with his attempted settlement of the first cloakmakers' strike twenty years ago. In consideration of this 300,000 persons signed a petition to Gov. Flower. Gov. Flower, in setting aside the decision of the Court of Appeals in the matter, said:

> I have made a thorough investigation of the case that was presented to me for consideration, and I find that Mr. Barondess was the kind of a man who was carrying food to the hungry and medicine to the sick, and that, instead of being considered guilty of a crime, he should rather receive the approbation of the people as a public benefactor.

As a result of this, Mr. Barondess was absolved from serving even a single day of the sentence originally imposed upon him.

I think I may say that the cloak and suit manufacturers, as well as the workingmen of New York City, have no one to whom they would more eagerly refer the settlement of a strike in their industry, no man in whom they have more confidence, than Mr. Barondess. J. L. MAGNES.

"Young Man, Stay East."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a farmer, have been one for several years, and expect to continue in that industry. I was born in the city and worked there in mercantile lines until I was 24 years of age. Then I heard the call of "back to the soil," and I investigated land, much of it, in Vermont, my native State. At last I settled on what was called an abandoned farm—got the land cheap and almost paid for it in twelve months. I have a comfortable bank account now, and my farms—yes, I got more "abandoned" land—are growing great crops.

This is a lot to say about myself, but it brings me to the point I want to make, and that is this: There is no need whatever for the man who wishes to become a farmer to go West. At the Land Show at Madison Square Garden, which I came to New York to see, the best possible argument for my advice "stay East" is to be found in the exhibit of the New York State Department of Agriculture.

It will be seen there that the East offers even more opportunities to the would-be farmer than any of the Western States that are advertising for money and settlers so extensively. In spite of all their showing they are equaled and even surpassed by New York, which, with Vermont and the other New England States, is arrayed successfully against all the other States of the Union. JOHN ELAM.

WEBSTER EIGHTY YEARS AGO.

(From a speech in the United States Senate by Daniel Webster in 1833.)

There are persons who constantly clamor. They complain of oppression, speculation, and pernicious influence of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations, and all means by which small capitalists become united in order to produce important and beneficial results. They carry on mad hostility against all established institutions. They would choke the fountain of industry and dry all streams. In a country of unbounded liberty, they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality, they would move Heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more evenly divided than anywhere else, they rend the air, shouting agrarian doctrines. In a country where wages of labor are high beyond parallel, they would teach the laborer that he is but an oppressed slave.

THE SECOND WIFE.

How It Would Be After Death and Other Questions Answered.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I say a word to your correspondent "Lonely," who writes in your issue of Nov. 6 that his beloved wife has died, and he loves another woman, and yet hesitates to marry her? He asks how it will be after death. Can we love two or three wives, as we love children, without a difference? he asks.

It is my humble opinion that the Creator designed man and woman to be to each other as the two parts of a pair of scissors; and that, after all the efforts made for the right parts to get together, after all the experimental love affairs of youthful days and the experiences of earthly marriage, and perhaps similar periods of companionship after death, there will at last come a time in our spiritual progress when man will find the ideally right woman, and woman the ideally right man, and they will be adjoined by such a mutual fitness as to make doubt or desire for separation impossible. Sometimes, no doubt, the ideal mating is accomplished in a case of first love, sometimes in a case of ordinary marriage, and sometimes in second marriage or third marriage, and doubtless sometimes even after repeated marriages the ideal partner is not met till after death.

As no one can know to a certainty whether ideal mating has been achieved here or not, although it is good for the sake of peace and progress to believe the mate one has been given is the right one, it seems that the most expedient thing to do is to trust that the ideal mating will eventually be worked out according to Divine Providence, and that if in the meantime we use the best wisdom we have for the present, only good can come of it.

There are doubtless many men who have outlived their beloved wives, and who feel still bound to them by a bond of sympathy which of itself settles all questions in regard to another marriage. And there are doubtless many other men who have loved their wives equally ardent when they were with them, and yet have transferred that love to another after the death of the first, and have found equal satisfaction in their companionship.

Of this we can rest assured, that in the eventual working out of our spiritual destinies only what is in accordance with Divine plans will prevail, and that all our mistakes will be corrected and all conditions adjusted. In the meantime we must make the most of our opportunities for spiritual improvement, and whatever will most conduce to that end now would seem to be the right and expedient thing to do, and should leave not one doubt as to one's fidelity to the highest good for all concerned. PEACEMAKER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would say to "Lonely":

Marry her if you can get her. After death—who knows? Our guide book says, "There is neither marrying nor giving in marriage," but further it says, "We shall know as we are known," and "We shall be satisfied."

Now, then, my interpretation is that after death each soul will find its own true mate, and perhaps that mate will be one never met on earth, but in any case it will be the right one and each will "be satisfied."

Marry her. J.

P. S.—Let us know if you do.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the widower who asks your help feels that if his wife were in his present position and state of mind he would wish her to marry again, rather than live in loneliness, it seems to me he ought to give her credit for a like desire for his welfare and happiness. His questions show him to be of fine quality and delicacy of feeling, and I for one should advise him to give his sons a woman's influence and himself a home and a wife and get some comfort out of his life. A WIDOW.

Highland, N. Y., Nov. 6, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent need not trouble overmuch about what might happen after death. It is better to deal fully and fairly with today's problems, and to let to-morrow's wait. He has three young sons to be cared for. If he has learned to love a woman fit and willing to help him in that duty, as well as to be his wife, then he may be content to let the rest be. Whose husband he may be in the hereafter is not his business now—he is hardly likely to want or to get two or three wives then; that would be unfair, as boys and girls are born in practically equal numbers. Nor would it be pleasant. B.

New York, Nov. 6, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a widower with two sons, but have no intention of marrying again, because I think that it is better to give two children a fair chance than to be responsible for a possible dozen.

If "Lonely" is a religious man he should seek the advise of some clergyman in relation to his post-mortem perplexities.

New York, Nov. 6, 1911. WIDOWER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the lady is willing to take you, jump at the chance. The writer is a widower with a boy and two girls, and he, too, would marry a most estimable lady, could he gain her consent. The children need a mother—the father a companion. Just one word of advice, however. Teach your boys to say "Mamma" to your new wife, and to love her for her exceeding goodness in assuming the burden of their rearing. He who hesitates is lost. Delays are dangerous! EX-REGULAR.

New York, Nov. 7, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your paper has quoted Magistrate House on perjury being committed in our courts without hesitation. It is true that both in the higher and lower courts what we call "perjury" is being committed freely.

What is "perjury"? A false statement made under oath. If there were no oath in connection with the statement there would be no perjury.

Now, what is the idea of administering the oath? Is it the swearing part that is important in the testimony of a witness or is the testimony itself of importance? E. R.

THE POLITICAL TRANSFORMATION

THE LAWYER.

Two shabby suits of clothes,
Half a dozen books;
Living in a tenement,
Nothing much for looks.
Downcast in expression—
Dismal lot, his life.
Takes a hand at politics.
Sealskin sacque for wife,
Living in a mansion,
Owning blocks of shares,
Centre of attention,
Sought for everywhere.

THE FARMER.

Lands no longer fertile;
Live stock on the wane;
Prospects all turned turtle;
Losing what he gained.
On that "durned" first mortgage
Puts a second one.
Runs for "legislatur,"
Things then start to hum.
Farm now unencumbered,
Cattle famed aroun',
Rides in a fine surrey

THE SALOON-KEEPER.

He bows down to the brewer;
He owes for "goods" and signs;
He tends behind his own bar
And hears the kicks and whines;
He takes without a murmur
The insults of the crowd;
He faces criticism
From churchmen long and loud.
Now a district leader,
Men make way for him—
They seek his slightest favor

ARTISTS VIEW THE DECLOUX COLLECTION

350 DESIGNS OF MASTERS

Best Decorative Work of 17th and 18th Centuries Exhibited for Benefit of Students.

The galleries of the Museum for the Arts of Decorations at Cooper Union were thrown open yesterday afternoon to a special gathering of the Architectural League, the National Society of Mural Painters, and the National Sculpture Society, the chief attraction for the artists being the first showing of the famous Léon Decloux collection of drawings and designs given to the museum by the Misses Eleanor and Sarah Hewitt. The collection is one of the largest and finest in the world, showing more than 350 original designs of master architects and decorators of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. It is especially strong in French artists, showing such masters as Watteau, Boucher, and Cauvet, and includes some Italian and German work and some Renaissance designs.

The collection was secured for the Cooper Union Galleries at a cost of $65,000. It is said to be the most important addition to the art treasures of New York since J. Pierpont Morgan's gift of the similar Hoentschel collection to the Metropolitan Museum. The collection is to be open to the public and workers every day except Sundays. Students of the applied arts may freely use the drawings and the originals that have been brought together, and the galleries are expected to have a far-reaching influence for all workers in the decorative and ornamental arts.

Architects and mural painters at the galleries yesterday were enthusiastic in praise of the exhibit. "Nowhere in the world, not even in Paris, said President Dielman of the Federation of Fine Arts, "can the student find a richer storehouse of the fine pieces of decorative art. The arrangement is better than the Musée des Arts Décoratifs of Paris. There is no red tape here. An artist seeking ideas for a design may study directly the pieces here or consult the photographs and engravings of the masterpieces of the ages."

Miss Eleanor G. Hewitt pointed out the careful arrangement of the art objects. They are grouped historically by periods and alphabetically by artists. Not only the artist but the purchaser of things where art was combined with usefulness could be aided by the museum, she said. Whether the thing be a carriage or the binding of a book, a door lock or the decorations of a room, an intending purchaser could find here examples of the best that had been done in those lines. The museum, she thought, should serve as an educator of public taste.

The system of classification of all the varied objects is taken directly from the Musée des Arts Décoratifs of Paris. All the products of industrial arts are grouped under two headings: the decorations of edifices and the decorations of man. The first head includes architecture and sculpture and painting as applied to architecture. Interior decorations are shown in great number. This department includes the J. Pierpont Morgan collection of textiles and some of the very finest examples of decorated woodwork. Heads of the museum pointed out with especial pride some example of Pillement, a celebrated eighteenth century French artist. They include doors and panels treated in the Franco-Chinese fashion, popular at the time. Pillement was the first painter to the King of Poland, and, although he lived through the reign of Louis XVI., followed all his life the style of the Louis XV. school. Other panels in the collection are by Huet, who is represented by a number of hunting scenes.

Other sections of the museum contain famous originals from Europe of woodcarving, wrought iron work, costumes, coats of arms, and many forms of metal work. They represent work from the ancient Egyptian period to the early nineteenth century.

The museum at present is confined to the fourth floor of Cooper Union and finds the quarters a little cramped. William Laurel Harris, Secretary of the Society of Mural Painters, was heard to complain that some of the finest examples of work would escape any but careful observers because conspicuous positions could not be found for all the pieces. If the plans for a new building, now being considered, are successfully put through, the museum will be given more space and increased usefulness.

Tea was served by Miss Eleanor G. Hewitt and Mrs. J. O. Green. Some of the well-known artists and architects present were William Alciphon Boring, President of the Architectural League; Edwin H. Blashfield, President, and William Laurel Harris, Secretary, of the Society of Mural Painters; Frederick Dielman, President of the Fine Arts Federation; Arnold W. Brunner and Julius Harder, architects; Isidor Konti, Frederick G. R. Roth, sculptors, and Herman Schladermundt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Sewell, and Lockwood De Forest, mural painters.

VAN TUYL CLEARS BRACKETT.

Says Senator Did Not Use Trust Company Funds Unlawfully.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Supt. Van Tuyl of the State Banking Department announced to-day that there was no basis for charges recently filed with him against Senator Edgar T. Brackett, as President of the Adirondack Trust Company of Saratoga. The charges were made by George G. Goodrich of New York, a former officer of the Clark Textile Company.

It was charged that Senator Brackett, while President of the trust company, had obtained the certification of his personal check for $150,000 when funds to meet it were not on deposit to his credit in the trust company; and that the account of the Clark Textile Company with the Adirondack Trust Company had been overdrawn on occasions while Senator Brackett was acting also as Treasurer of the company.

PROTEST AGAINST RUSSIA.

Prominent Speakers to Denounce Her Disregard of Treaty Obligations.

The Executive Committee of the National Citizens' Committee met yesterday afternoon at the Railroad Clubrooms, in the Hudson Terminal Building, to discuss plans for a great protest meeting on Dec. 6, at which leading speakers will deliver addresses on Russia's defiance of existing treaties affecting passport rights of American citizens.

Jacob H. Schiff has written this letter in support of the protest:

"It will give me pleasure to join the National Citizens' Committee having in charge the arrangements for a mass meeting to be held Dec. 6 to protest against the continuance of our treaties with Russia in face of her continued violation of the treaty in declining to issue passports to certain classes of our citizens."

Vice President Sherman, President Schurman of Cornell, and Senators Penrose and O'Gorman will be among the speakers.

CARUSO RETURNS IN SPLENDID VOICE

Tenor Treats as a Joke Report That He Is to Marry Emma Trentini.

MME. MATZENAUER ARRIVES

New German Contralto Is of Imposing Build—Emmy Destinn and Herman Weil Among Passengers.

Signor Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, went to Hoboken yesterday to meet the Kronprinzessin Cecilie on account of the importance of the singers which this boat was bringing in. There was, first of all, Enrico Caruso, who is said to be returning in perfect voice again; then there was Margarete Matzenauer, the new German contralto; Emmy Destinn, the Bohemian soprano; Dinh Gilly, the Algerian baritone; Adamo Didur, the Russian bass; Herman Weil, the new German baritone, and Clarence Whitehill, the American baritone.

Mr. Caruso said "Pooh, pooh," in reply to all questions in regard to the recent cabled stories to the effect that he has been ill, and added that he had never been in better condition. Apropos of which Mr. Gatti-Casazza made an epigram.

"Last Winter," he said, "when Mr. Caruso was really sick, nobody would believe it, and now that he is well nobody believes that. Nevertheless he will sing next Monday night in 'Aïda.'"

It should be stated, by the way, that Mr. Caruso has sung just fifteen times during the last month, including a performance of "Carmen" in Munich with Margarete Matzenauer.

When asked about the recently published report that he was to marry Emma Trentini, Mr. Caruso said: "Ask me something serious," and then added, "She's too small to be a stepmother."

Mme. Matzenauer, the new contralto, who makes her first American appearance next Monday in "Aïda," and who sings Brangaene in "Tristan und Isolde" later in the week, is of imposing build. She was dressed in black yesterday. Unlike most Germans, she speaks English and several other languages.

She said that her mother had been a singer and her father an orchestra conductor. She studied in Gratz and Berlin, and made her début in Strassburg, where she remained two years. Since then she has been singing in Munich, where she has been one of the features of the annual Wagner festivals.

Herman Weil, the new German baritone, will make his first appearance here as Kurwenal in "Tristan" on Friday evening of next week. He was born in Carlsruhe, and for the last few years has sung at Stuttgart.

Emmy Destinn arrived in mourning for her father, who recently died. Clarence Whitehill left immediately for Philadelphia, where he will sing Wotan in "Die Walküre" on Friday evening. He has been appearing as the Sheriff in "The Girl of the Golden West," in English, in England.

MME. TRENTINI INDIGNANT.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 8.—"Believe me, he lie, that Signori Caruso, when he say he do not know me," said Mme. Trentini, who is singing in the title rôle in "Naughty Marietta" at the Colonial, when she was shown to-night a dispatch from New York in which Caruso was quoted as saying:

"What is Trentini? Who is Trentini? I do not know the woman."

"Caruso, he lies when he says he do not know me," exclaimed Emma Trentini, who went on vehemently, "Caruso! Bah! He say he not know me! Bah! I sing for him for seven years—La Boheme, Carmen, Trovatore, many more. When he have finish, Caruso he say to me will I marry him. I laugh in his face. I make fun of him. But I want to hear Caruso say all that himself before I believe," added Mme. Trentini a little wistfully.

WOMAN SUES BISHOP FOR $50,000 LIBEL

Mrs. C. E. Cope of Topeka Says David H. Moore of Methodist Church Slandered Her

IN LETTER TO HER RIVAL

Demand for Apology Is Refused—Did Not Intend to Reflect on Her Honesty, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 8.—On the ground that he had slandered her in a letter to Mrs. George O. Robinson of Cincinnati, Mrs. Carrie E. Cope of this city filed suit here to-day for $50,000 against Bishop David H. Moore of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Cope's suit followed the Bishop's refusal to apologize for his words. Bishop Moore did say he did not intend to reflect on Mrs. Cope's character, but she did not consider that sufficient, and the action was begun as she had promised.

The controversy grew out of the organization by Mrs. Cope of an auxiliary of the National Branch of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Cope first filed charges against Bishop Moore with the Conference of Bishops demanding an apology for his letter. The letter had to do with a bequest of $10,000 left to the Women's Home Mission Society by Mrs. Fannie Murray of Achison County, Kan. The letter was addressed to Mrs. Robinson as an official of the society and was dated Abilene, Kan., March 18, 1911. In it he said:

> I think you will never see a cent of the bequest, and a dangerous precedent will be established unless you sustain the Kansas Conference in pushing the matter to a legal conclusion. * * * What complicates the situation is the fact that Mrs. Cope holds official relations to your society—is appointed to some function of your society. Thus she is enabled to pose as an official. * * *
> Mr. Jackson, while seeming to act for her, has set on the heirs to bring suit for the property. You are juggled, tricked, and beaten.

Mrs. Fannie Murray of Atchison County left property valued at $20,000, half to the Women's Foreign Missionary Society and the other half to the "Women's Home Missionary Society of the Kansas Conference of the Methodist Church." There was no such society as the latter, and Mrs. Cope and others are said to have incorporated one so named, and Mr. Jackson is said to have paid this society $4,500 of the $10,000 permanent fund.

Bishop Moore's train was late in arriving, but he seemed not a whit disturbed by that fact, or the charges of Mrs. Cope. He was accompanied by three other Bishops, who had come here, they said, not to settle Mrs. Cope's charges but at the special invitation of Dr. Loveland. They said they would consider only matters of pending litigation. There was no controversy pending between Mrs. Cope and the Bishop, they said, so nothing of this nature would be injected in the meeting.

The conference was secret and nothing was given out as to what had been done. After it Bishop Moore stated that he had not intended to reflect on the honesty of Mrs. Cope, but nearer to an apology he would not go.

Mrs. Cope did not attend the meeting, nor did she go to the hotel to meet the party.

"We have traveled 600 miles to have this matter settled," Mrs. Cope stated, "and we have spent several hundred dollars in an effort to reach an agreement. I believe that it is only just and dignified that I remain at home while the matter is pending and not seek admission to the meeting."

In view of Bishop Moore's stand and the consequent filing of the suit, there is little hope that the matter can escape being thrashed out in the courts.

In Oklahoma City last week Bishop Moore was asked if he would have written the letter to Mrs. Richardson had he known the facts as he has since learned them. He replied that he would.

"I am not afraid of the world, the flesh, the devil, or lawsuits," Bishop Moore is reported to have said.

On the other hand, some of his associates believe that Bishop Moore was too fast. They are inclined to look at the matter from both sides to prevent trouble ahead for the Board of Bishops and the church.

"The facts in the case," Bishop Smith said, "did not seem to warrant the writing of the letter."

Right there is the difference of opinion.

"I feel that I had an absolute right to send the letter concerning which Mrs. Cope complains," said Bishop Moore, "and I do not feel that there is any question of a retraction that can enter into the discussion. While I do not wish to say that I would not make some sort of a statement that would make the matter clear, yet I feel that there is no call for retraction or apologies. There was no intent on my part to reflect in the least on Mrs. Cope's honesty. I think that in itself is ample. There has been talk of lawsuits. They are only to worry and annoy, and I have lost no sleep over that matter."

Mrs. Cope's lawyers presented a retraction to Bishop Moore for his signature this afternoon, and he has the document under consideration.

The letter has stirred the Methodist Church, and every organization in the country is watching the outcome of the trouble with much interest and no little worry.

LILLIAN RUSSELL IN COURT.

Actress Shows Annoyance When Questioned About $1,717 Modiste's Bill.

Lillian Russell was a witness in the City Court yesterday before Judge Greene and a jury in a suit brought by the Mrs. Osborn Company to recover $1,717 from Sam S. and Lee Shubert, Inc., for her costumes as Lady Teazle at the Casino Theatre in 1904.

Miss Russell said Sam Shubert had "ordered" her to get her costumes from the company at his expense. The Shuberts' defense is that the bill should be charged to Miss Russell. Despite several warnings Miss Russell repeatedly asserted that Shubert had ordered her to get the costumes. Finally, when specifically instructed to relate his language, she declared:

"Well, he said 'Go!' and I went."

Miss Russell showed distinct signs of annoyance when she was questioned about individual items on the bill. She pronounced all of them reasonable, including a charge of $40 for six rhinestone buttons.

WM. CLARK RUSSELL, SEA NOVELIST, DEAD

WAS MIDSHIPMAN AT 13

His Early Sea Experiences the Foundation for Stories That Made Him Famous—Born in New York.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—William Clark Russell, the novelist, died as he slept this morning. He had been bedridden since April last. Mr. Russell was 67 years old.

William Clark Russell was best known as Clark Russell, teller of brave sea stories, and more than one generation of boys have devoured the "Wreck of the Grosvenor." That he should write at all, and that he should write of the sea, was the natural outcome of his heredity and of his youthful experiences, but it was not until after he had ventured in many directions that he found the style and subject to which the reading public considered him best fitted.

Clark Russell, though an Englishman, and the son of English parents, was born in New York in 1844. He was the son of Henry Russell, the composer of "Life on the Ocean Wave" and "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," and his mother was Isabel Lloyd, who was related to the Wordsworths and whose early association brought her into contact with Southey and Coleridge and the Lambs.

The boy had a restless, roving nature, and it is told of him that in his school days he plotted to run away in quest of fortune with one of Charles Dickens's sons, a plot that was frustrated, but Russell himself did go to sea, entering the British Merchant Service as a midshipman when he was only thirteen. The eight years of this life, which he finally deserted, took him to all quarters of the globe, and built up for him the memories and the flavor of the stories that were later to make him famous.

Once off the sea, young Russell tried his hand in a stock broker's office, but he wanted to write, and this desire finally found expression in a five-act tragedy in blank verse—"Fra Angelo," the last play produced by Walter Montgomery at the Haymarket Theatre before his suicide. The play was a failure.

Russell's next literary effort, a three-volume novel, faring no better, was not even published, but he continued to contribute to various London reviews, eventually undertaking the editorship of a weekly paper that failed, so that he relinquished editorial work as a career. Then came his sea stories. Russell had gone to Ramsgate to live, where he produced "John Holdsworth, Chief Mate" and, the following year, 1875, the "Wreck of the Grosvenor." Their success was immediate, and they were the first of a long series of sea stories, with the taste of sea life in them and the knowledge of sea life back of them. Some of these were "The Lady Maud," "A Sailor's Sweetheart," "The Frozen Pirate," "An Ocean Tragedy," "The Emigrant Ship," "What Cheer," "The Tale of the Ten," "The Two Captains," and "The Ship's Adventure." "The Yarn of Old Harbor Town" was published in 1905.

In quest of further suggestions from the sea, Russell was wont to go on strange, unexpected voyages in strange craft, and his reports from some of these are collected in "My Watch Below." For many years, the writer suffered acutely from rheumatism, and much of his later work he was obliged to do by dictation.

YALE'S PRACTICE SHORT AND SNAPPY

Preparation for Brown Game Brings Out Sixteen Coaches—End Men Shift.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—The policy of the Yale football coaches has been changed, and they are running the Brown game campaign on a platform of short and snappy practice instead of long and gruelling work. To-day the 'Varsity and scrubs battled for less than half an hour, and most of the regulars remained in the play less than fifteen minutes. Jim Scully's return to the game was an occasion of note, for he has few peers in tackle play, and the coaches feel that he will be keenly needed against Brown on Saturday. Scully and Capt. Howe worked about ten minutes to-day, and an entire change in the backfield was made in the latter half of the practice. A new playing combination of backs was tried to-day, Spalding resting and Ed Freeman, who has been out of the game since Saturday, returning and being placed at right half back. Dunn's removal to full back gives him his fourth playing position in as many days. The coaches talk seriously of using him in the game against Brown, and indications now are that full back will be his station.

Another shift of the ends was ordered, Bomeisler and Avery changing places. The change brings Bomeisler to left end, where Kilpatrick flourished last Fall. Bomeisler is Kilpatrick's counterpart in physique and forward pass carrying, and his shift to left end seems logical. He played only part of to-day's practice, Francis succeeding him. Francis will not start the Brown game, Avery having distanced him in the competition. Francis is being reserved as Bomeisler's substitute.

Loree continues to hold left guard, and the coaches have practically decided to use him there on Saturday instead of Childs, who is playing regularly with the scrubs. He has trained down twenty pounds in three weeks, and is much livelier than ever before. His defensive work has always been satisfactory.

New formations suggested by the visiting coaches, especially by Tom Shevlin, are being taught, and the scoring power of the 'Varsity is temporarily lessened. To-day the regulars were able to push only one touchdown over the line. This was made by Ed Freeman, who twisted around right tackle and was shot free for a forty-yard run.

Three of the injured players came back to the squad to-day. Dick Merritt, quarter back; Sid Anderson, full back, and Jim Reilly, half back. All practiced with the scrubs. It is unlikely that any of them will be sent into the Brown game.

Sixteen coaches swarmed upon the field, and every 'Varsity player had one individual coach. Some had two. A telegram received to-night stated that Ted Coy, Captain two years ago, and head coach last season, will arrive from Tennessee, where he is in business, and assist in the coaching until the close of the season. Harry Holt, coach of the back field last season, will also arrive here to-morrow.

To-day's coaching staff included visitors George Adee, "Bo" Olcott, Howard Jones, Carl Flanders, Ned Glass, "Pa" Corbin, De Witt Cochrane, Foster Sanford, Tom Shevlin, Ted Lilley, and Jim McCrea. Resident squad—Jack Field, Springer Brooks, Dr. Arthur Brides, Earle Kistler, and Buck Morris.

Manager Kaynor of the eleven went to Cambridge to-day for a conference relative to the game in the stadium Nov. 25. Both Yale and Harvard universities have been swamped with applications for tickets, and must agree on some radical measures to award more than one ticket to each alumni. It is likely that some few thousand of the graduates may have their allotments of tickets cut down from two to one.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 8.—The Carlisle Indians engaged in their last hard practice in preparation for the Harvard game on Saturday by scrimmaging for an hour on Indian Field this afternoon against the Dickinson College eleven. The Indians changed their line-up at frequent intervals in order to give the players who may possibly be used at Cambridge an opportunity to become familiar with the new plays. Capt. Burd and Half Back Thorpe were not in play, though they watched the scrimmage interestedly. The Indians, like the collegians, tried out a number of trick plays with success and forward passes were admirably worked by both sides. Carlisle's new signals worked smoothly and the defence of both teams showed up better than it did two weeks ago. Half Back Wheelock worked at end and Arcase played at right half for Carlisle.

Only minor injuries occurred, those affected being Newashe, Lonestar, Jacobs, Dunn, and Stafford. Carlisle is looking forward to the Harvard game rather apprehensively, as she knows that the Crimson has laid her plans to win a victory, notwithstanding the defeat by Princeton of the Cambridge men.

More striking colors and patterns in Fall suits than ever.

Such Autumn landscape effects as rich deep browns, with a tinge of red; dark brown diagonal patterns sprinkled with golden threads; Scotch mixture effects of green, red and brown.

And lots of blues, some with a suggestion of red or gold.

Of course we've hosts of quieter patterns—unusually attractive gray mixtures, for example.

Fall and Winter suits—$18 to $48.

Overcoats, too, bloom brightly.

Besides being most comfortable—warm but not heavy.

HARVARD ALL STARS WIN.

Old-Timers Beat 'Varsity Eleven of Regulars and Scrubs.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 8.—This afternoon behind the secret practice fence the Harvard team, which, however, comprised only three regulars and eight substitutes, was beaten 5 to 2 by a team of old college players designated as the All Stars. Besides including seven former Harvard football men, there was represented on the team graduates of Williams, Brown, Yale and Sewanee, one player coming from each of these institutions.

The wholesale use of "subs" on the Harvard team four days after the Princeton game has created a rumor that Harvard will use an eleven chiefly comprising "subs" against the Carlisle Indians when they come to play in the Stadium Saturday. To-morrow may find the nine regulars, including Garner, quarter-back; Wendell, Reynolds, Huntington, and Blackall, backs, and Smith, O'Brien, Hitchcock, and Storer, linemen, working out for the Carlisle match; but it is a fact that between now and the Yale game the Harvard coach will make every effort to save his players. Harvard can sustain no more injuries and go into the Yale game other than with a very much crippled team.

The All Stars and the 'Varsity scrimmage to-day was not very long, but in it the veterans scored a touchdown and the 'Varsity a safety, the regulars also being held for four downs on the All Stars five-yard line. The Veterans' touchdown was obtained on a pretty forward pass made on a goal from placement formation by Page to Williams, while Harvard's safety came when Minot's kick was so neatly blocked that the ball drove into Page, who fell on it behind the All Stars' goal line. The 'Varsity reached the Veterans' five-yard line on a thirty-yard run made by Howard after taking a forward pass from Freedley, but the next three plays resulted in a loss of one yard.

Leslie at left guard, Keays at right guard, and Fisher at right tackle, were the only regulars in the 'Varsity line-up. The Carlisle game will determine whether Keays will remain at guard or whether Fisher will go back to his place and Jenckes be relied on to play right tackle in the Dartmouth and Yale games. Capt. Fisher is very confident that Keays will make good. He is a big man and should be a sterling football player. He lacks drive, however, and this is what the coaches are determined to instill into his makeup in the next ten days' work, which are all Harvard will have before the Yale game on Nov. 25.

To-night the 'Varsity squad had secret signal drill in the Hemenway gymnasium, a new proceeding at Cambridge. In this drill the regulars who did not scrimmage this afternoon were in the line-up. Storer's passing was criticised severely at Princeton, but measures will be taken to correct his erratic work and particularly to improve his passing back for kicks.

The All Stars and the Harvard team lined up this afternoon as follows:

Williams, (Sewanee)	Left end	Howard
Sisson, (Brown)	Right guard	Keays
Withington, (Har.)	Right tackle	Fisher
McVeagh, (Har.)	Right end	Lingard, Hollister, Tobey.
Cate, (Har.)	Quarter back	Freedley, Bradley.

West Point Shows Aggressiveness.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 8.—In the practice to-day the army team showed more aggressiveness than it has before this week, and the first team defeated the second by three touchdowns against a field goal by the scrubs. The second team got the ball on the 'Varsity's 20-yard mark, and, after several attempts at the line had been smeared, Merrill drop-kicked a goal from the 25-yard mark. Hyatt was on the side lines, and Keyes ran the team and handled the punts in good shape, contributing some long runs. Keyes got one of the scrubs' punts on his 25-yard mark and tore off a 40-yard run. Hodgson followed with line plunges and Macdonald with some end plays, and crossed for a touchdown. Weyand broke through and picked up Cramer's fumble for another touchdown, and an onside kick, which bounded over Winfield's head, gave Hobbs an opportunity to score the last touchdown for the first team. The line-up of the 'Varsity was without Dean, Devore, Arbold, or Hoge. All of these men are somewhat bruised, but will be in shape for the Bucknell game Saturday.

The Highland Falls High School team played the third cadet team, and were defeated by a score of 17 to 5. The schoolboys were much lighter than the cadets, but what they lacked in weight they surely made up in gameness.

Navy Backfield Unsettled.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 8.—Keen competition for at least two of the back field positions continues at the Naval Academy, and this afternoon behind closed gates the regular coaches, with the assistance of Weymouth, the old Yale back, drove the team hard in the effort to improve the general work of the attack. Nichols continued at full back and Leonard at quarter back, and they will probably start in the game against the University of West Virginia on Saturday, leaving the following week and the showing against Pennsylvania State in the final game on the local field to decide whether they or Rodes and Sowell, who played the positions up to this week, shall stay in for the final struggle against the Army. The veterans were still on the side lines this afternoon, but they are by no means out of the fight. In the line the positions seem well settled with the exception of centre, where Weems and Ingram are still contesting, and right tackle, where Redman, Ralston, and Davis are possibilities.

Chicago's Star Punter Laid Up.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Horace Scruby, the star punter of the University of Chicago football team will be out of the game for at least a week on account of an injury to his hand received in the game with Minnesota last Saturday at Minneapolis. The injury is not considered serious, but the team's physician has advised keeping him out of the game with Northwestern next Saturday.

Purdue Team Draws Color Line.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Nov. 8.—The Purdue football team has drawn the color line by protesting against the playing of Alexander, the negro tackle of the Iowa team, in the coming game between the two teams. Iowa authorities have taken no action.

Michigan in Secret Practice.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 8.—The Michigan football eleven again indulged in secret practice to-day. Coach Yost's announcement of the probable line-up against Cornell Saturday is still to be made. The two most acceptable substitutes for McMillan at quarter back are both in poor shape.

Poultry Show at the Palace.

The fifth annual show of the Empire Poultry Association will be held in the New Grand Central Palace Dec. 5 to 9. With 1,400 classes on the premium list, the event will attract all the breeders of fine poultry in the Eastern States. Society from Long Island will be particularly interested in the show, and among the exhibitors will be Howard Gould, Samuel Willetts, Paul Rainey, G. Howland Leavitt, and Harold Gould. In connection with the show there will be the annual exhibition of felines by the Cat Fanciers' Association. The entries will close Nov. 20 with L. D. Howell, Secretary, Mineola, L. I.

TIGER SCRUB LINE FIRM.

'Varsity Unable to Break Through for Touchdown on Lively Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, Nov. 8.—Princeton's 'Varsity was pushed hard to-day during a long offensive scrimmage drill, but they were unable to cross the scrub goal line during the two twenty-minute periods played. De Witt, however, saved the first team from a scoreless tie by kicking two beautiful goals, besides offering a good second defense during the short period in which the scrub had the ball. The big fellow hit his pace in the field goal line this afternoon, and his work may entitle him to consideration in the Dartmouth and Yale games.

Shenk, full back on the scrub, made a clever getaway late in the scrimmage, when he intercepted a forward pass from De Witt and ran eighty yards toward the 'Varsity goal before he was overhauled by the fleet Baker. The 'Varsity continued yesterday's work with the forward pass, but it only met with success when Sam White was at the receiving end, and more often resulted in a loss than a gain. The 'Varsity offense was strong to-day, but there was nothing sensational offered. The backs were protected far better than in the Harvard game, but the scrub line did not attack with the same aggressiveness which they had shown earlier in the season.

Pendleton is suffering from a bruised hip, and was excused from the heavy work to-day. He played quarter back on the scrub team, and made several tackles in good shape in the open field. The Tigers' star half back will be given little heavy work until the Dartmouth game, and if his injury does not show great improvement will not play throughout that contest. He was obliged to retire at the start of the second half of the Harvard game in favor of Baker, though offering a plucky fight up to that time. Goldie Wight was in togs to-day for the first time in ten days, but he is still in poor shape, and moved around with difficulty. Tom Wilson was out of the scrimmage, "Dutch" Brown substituting for him at left guard. Cy McCormick supplanted Joe Duff at right guard during the second half of the heavy work, getting the call over McLean for this position.

A flash of new material for end burst forth to-day in the person of Johnny Mott, a sophomore, who has been working hard up to this time, though not showing 'Varsity calibre. He was on the scrub this afternoon, and smashed up the heavier 'Varsity interference in great shape on several attempted end runs, often tackling the man with the ball. He was quick to analyze the 'Varsity attack, and followed each play closely. His work was so conspicuous that before the end of the afternoon the coaches gave him a chance at right end, where he displaced Dunlap. It was his first 'Varsity experience, but he is showing some promising stuff, and though not a likely man this year, should be a strong probability for a substitute end berth, and emergencies may yet bring him into the limelight this season.

Chrystie at quarter back, and Baker, De Witt, and Vaughan made up the 'Varsity back field this afternoon. They didn't show the snap expected of them, and line plunging against the heavy scrub met with little success. Winants showed up well at guard on the second team. This year is the big fellow's last chance for a 'Varsity position, and he is playing his best game. MacGregor gave him orders to warm up during the Harvard game, but that was as near as he came to earning his 'Varsity letter.

N. Y. U. Regulars Get Rest.

Coach Reilley was in charge of the New York University football squad yesterday afternoon, and he gave the regulars a rest which they needed. All the first string men, with the exception of Comfort and Ellife, were excused from practice and told to forget all about football for a day.

The coaches were extremely disappointed with the miserable punting in the Trinity game, and set about at once to remedy this. Comfort and Ellife spent over an hour in punting practice, and the former showed up especially well. He can average forty-five yards in practice, but in a game he falls down miserably and can reach only about twenty-five yards. If the local team had had a good punter in Tuesday's game there probably would have been a different story to tell. Comfort takes altogether too much time in getting off his kicks, and with a fast pair of ends on the opposing team, his punts are invariably blocked or sent high in the air with no distance gained. Ellife gets his punts off well, but can make no distance on them. Capt. Brennan, who also punts, is laid up with a sprained ankle, and it is doubtful if he can get into the Rutgers game on Saturday.

The hospital list of the Violet eleven is very large, and the prospects for the Rutgers game are not encouraging. Vesely and Wiener are both badly injured and will be able to get no practice for the Rutgers game. Crawford and Capt. Brennan are also badly battered and will need a long rest before being in any condition to play.

The second and third teams scrimmaged yesterday for over forty minutes, with the coaches on the sharp lookout for fast ends. The wings of the New York team are weak and need sharp bolstering. Practice to-day will be devoted to the fundamentals, tackling the dummy, and running down punts.

Several Deer Killed at Weymouth.

Special to The New York Times.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Nov. 8.—The second Wednesday of the open season for killing deer in New Jersey attracted a large crowd of hunters to the deer woods near here to-day. It is reported that fully 200 sportsmen were out. The day was ideal for hunting and several fine bucks were killed at Weymouth. Andrew Stewart, Jr., of Glassboro brought to earth a four-pronged buck weighing nearly 200 pounds. Dave Car shot and knocked a big buck down in a byroad near Emilville, but the animal got up and escaped in the woods. A party consisting of Frank Duberson, William Ripley, Henry Stowe, William McClure, and George Wild of this place killed a three-pronged buck near English Cheek. No accidents were reported to-day.

CARS AND DRIVERS REACH SAVANNAH

Special to The New York Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 8.—The first flock of racing drivers and cars to compete in Savannah's great racing carnival from Nov. 27 to 30, during which the Vanderbilt Cup Race and the International Grand Prize Race will be run, arrived to-day, when David Bruce-Brown, Caleb Bragg, and E. H. Parker of the Fiat team came in with six racing cars, several practice cars, and fourteen mechanics.

Bruce-Brown, the winner of last year's Grand Prize, and Bragg have just returned from Turin, Italy, where they saw the giant Fiat racers completed, and tried them out over the mountain roads. Immediately after being installed in their quarters on the course the drivers went over it in practice cars. The course is new to Parker, who has never been here before. Bruce-Brown and Bragg are enthusiastic over the improvements which have been made in widening and repaving the roads, lengthening and banking the turns, and straightening out some of the crooked portions.

The Vanderbilt team of Fiat drivers is composed of David Bruce-Brown, Teddy Tetzlaff, and E. H. Parker. The Grand Prize drivers are Bruce-Brown, Caleb Bragg, and Louis Wagner. In Wagner and Bruce-Brown the Italian Company has the winners of the first and the second Grand Prize races, respectively. Wagner is on a steamer en route from Italy to New York. Tetzlaff is in the Arizona deserts racing a Fiat car from Phoenix to Los Angeles. Both will be in Savannah in a few days.

Meanwhile the entries for the four races, which close Nov. 15, continue to come in. A Buick-Marquette car, the first American car in last year's Grand Prize, was entered yesterday with Charlie Basle as the driver. Another Buick-Marquette is promised. The Mercer entry of three cars has been increased to four, two for the Vanderbilt and two for the Savannah Challenge Trophy.

All of the net profits of the Grand Prize, Vanderbilt Cup, and light-car races will go to the military of Savannah. The Savannah military has always cooperated actively with the officials of the Savannah Automobile Club in promoting past events. To their efficiency in guarding the course in the previous Grand Prize races is attributable the securing of that race and the acquisition of the Vanderbilt Cup race this year. In none of the three big races held in Savannah has there ever been an injury to a spectator, except to one man, who received the point of a bayonet in his side when he insisted in an attempt to cross the course during the progress of the first Grand Prize race.

The roads over which the races are run are closed by the order of the Commissioners of Chatham County, and the Governor of Georgia issues an order, following this action of the Commissioners, under authority of which the military guards the course.

The entries now exceed the forty mark, with the indications that this number will be doubled before the closing day. In three days the course will be thrown open for practice.

Atherton Wins 18.2 Billiards.

In last night's game of the amateur handicap 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Billiard Academy, Charles Atherton, aided by a handicap of thirty-five points, defeated Sam Garfunkle, by the score of 115 to 125 points. The winner was playing at 115 points, while Garfunkle was playing at the scratch mark, and had to make 150 points in order to win the contest. Atherton ran out his necessary number of tallies in twenty-six innings. The winner's high run was 20 and Garfunkle's efforts netted him a high run of 26 points.

The first game of the National Intercity Three-Cushion Carrom Billiard League to be played in this city will be decided this evening at Doyle's Academy, when the Boston players will oppose those of Manhattan. Either Amidon, Warren, or Hudson will represent Boston, while the Manhattan representative will be either Miller, Magnus, or John Dankelman.

New York Wins at Billiards.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—New York again defeated Philadelphia here to-night in a National Amateur Three-Cushion Billiard League game, Magnus and Dankleman winning from Campbell and Jones, 50 to 32. Campbell, who started for Philadelphia, was in poor form and gave way to Jones in the fifty-fifth inning. Magnus seemed baffled by Jones's safety play and was succeeded by Dankleman. High runs—New York, 4; Philadelphia, 3.

Friedman Gives $500 to Knowles.

Plans for the benefit to be given for Fred Knowles, former Secretary of the New York Baseball Club, who is seriously ill in this city, are rapidly being consummated. The benefit will be held in Wallack's Theatre next Sunday evening. Yesterday Andrew Freedman, a former stockholder in the club, sent a check of $500 for two seats for the performance, and other well-known persons who have contributed are Richard Croker, Frank Farrell, and Barney Dreyfuss. Charles Burnham, manager of Wallack's Theatre, is assisting "Big Bill" Edwards, Chairman of the Benefit Committee, in the management of the entertainment to be given.

China's Baseball Season Ends.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—China's baseball season has come to an end, according to reports received here from Shanghai. There was no "world's series" with big bonuses for the players, but the teams finished the season well satisfied. It was a four-club league and three games a week were played. The teams were recruited in Shanghai. Next year an eight-club league is promised. Baseball has taken hold in China, according to local reports, and the Chinese are said to be enthusiastic fans.

CORNELL BACK FIELD STRONG

Butler, O'Connor, Whyte, and Underhill Form Best Combination of Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Cornell football team trimmed the scrubs in a hard scrimmage this afternoon, scoring two touchdowns, and then were put on the defensive. The coaches gave the scrubs the ball, and for forty minutes or so they hammered at the 'Varsity line, and tried the ends with a number of intricate plays, which failed to make much headway. The 'Varsity line tightened up and played closer than usual, while Eyrich and Fritz, on the ends, were particularly alert.

Butler showed that he was coming back into good shape rapidly, and his handling of the team, coupled with his industrious playing, was all that could be desired. The 'Varsity back field was again made up of Butler, O'Connor, Whyte, and Underhill, and it was obvious that this is the strongest back field combination Cornell can muster. It combines speed and individual brilliance with brains, and the strong defensive work of Underhill. The Michigan game will be the first opportunity of testing its real worth. While these four men have all appeared in the 'Varsity line-up at various times this year the combination has not played together before.

Eyrich and Fritz, the 'Varsity ends, showed up well, and they were succeeded by Kelley and Franklin. The former has been working hard on the scrubs all year, the latter being a candidate for guard for two years. He is a little too light for that position, but the coaches evidently think that his light weight may count in his favor as an end. They realize that the Michigan team will be heavier than Cornell, and consequently are trying hard to make the Cornell team as strong as possible.

Champaign went back at right tackle. While this was not entirely unexpected, it appears to be in the nature of a trial.

Champaign was on the 'Varsity last year, and for the first part of this season, but Dan Reed did not think he was aggressive enough. So when Champaign was laid out by injuries, Williamson was groomed for the position, and for two weeks has been the regular right tackle. Champaign appreciated his opportunity this afternoon, for he broke up plays in good shape and showed plenty of speed and ginger.

Another change in the 'Varsity line-up that elicited comment was Miller playing centre instead of Whyte. The latter has held the position for two years, while Miller has been a substitute for two years, having played the position on the 'Varsity team two years ago. He is heavier and just as fast as Whyte, but lacks the experience. Should the coaches decide that a heavier centre is needed against Michigan, however, they will doubtless use Miller.

Butler scored the first touchdown for the 'Varsity in the scrimmage this afternoon by blocking one of Smith's punts and running twenty yards for a touchdown. The second score was made by O'Connor on an end run after he and Whyte had brought the pigskin down on a series of good plays. The coaches on the field to-day were Reed, O'Rourke, Vanorman, Hutchinson, Newhall, Larkin, and Thompson.

G. V. ELECTRICS
ELECTRIC TRUCKS VS. HORSES.

The best city draught horse lasts on an average but four years, which means that his annual depreciation is 25%. Pretty steep, isn't it?

1,708 horses died from the heat in Greater New York in the first 15 days of last July. As high as 25 ice-maimed horses have been shot in a single day by the police and the S. P. C. A.

Are your horses fully insured?

The electric truck has 100% greater working capacity than the best draught horse grown and requires 75% less housing space. A G. V. Electric never gets sunstroke; it does not have to work alternate days only; it gets no broken legs, never gets sick or runs away; is cleaner, surer and cheaper than the best combination of horses ever devised.

You can drive a G. V. Electric into a freight elevator and load or unload it on the desired floor without fire risk, odor or dirt. You can equip a G. V. truck with an electric winch operated by the truck battery and elevate heavy cases or warp machinery on and off it. You can buy a G. V. Electric in any one of six standardized sizes, ranging from 700 lbs. to 10,000 lbs. capacity, and operate the one best adapted to your needs, singly or in fleets, at from 25% to 60% less than a corresponding quota of horses.

PLAN TO COLLECT ON OLD STATE BONDS

THIS SUCCEEDED BEFORE

Principal Action Against North Carolina, Which Owed $11,000,000, More Than Doubled Now.

Plans have been laid by representatives of holders of the repudiated bonds of several Southern States, particularly of North Carolina, to effect an enforcement of their claims through a suit by a foreign Government in the event of the failure of the plan recently suggested to President Taft for voluntary arbitration of the claims. This suggestion was made in a letter addressed to the President by H. B. Hollins & Co., who have undertaken to act as bankers for the bondholders. The communication to the President seeking his good offices was referred to Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh. The representatives of the bondholders, including the American representative of the foreign Bondholders' Committee, expect to have a conference with the Secretary some time in the near future with a view to formulating plans which they hope will be successful in bringing about arbitration of their claims.

Instead, however, of resting on the hope of a friendly adjustment the European and American holders of these bonds, who are co-operating, have sent a representative to one of the South American republics to close an arrangement under which this South American Government has already agreed to accept a gift of some of these Southern bonds with a view to bringing suit for their collection. This was made known yesterday by a representative of the bondholders. A similar method of collecting on the defaulted State bonds has already been resorted to with success in the past, and it is assumed that no difficulty would be encountered, in view of the previous decisions of the Supreme Court, in an effort of a foreign Government to collect. This would not directly, of course, affect any other holders of the bonds, but once the validity of any particular issue of these State bonds was confirmed in a suit by a foreign Government the bondholders would be in a position to force a settlement with the State under the alternative of their giving away enough of the bonds to make possible collections from the State much in excess of the amount which the bondholders themselves would be willing to accept in settlement.

The present effort to collect on these bonds follows a long series of attempts to negotiate a settlement. The bonds whose holders are represented by those engaged in the present movement amount to about $28,000,000, exclusive of interest. Of these about $11,000,000 were issued by North Carolina, $5,000,000 by South Carolina, $5,000,000 by Georgia, and about $7,000,000 by Mississippi. The accumulations of interest amount, perhaps, all told to about twice the par value of the bonds. In New York State alone, according to information gathered by Edward L. Andrews, New York counsel to the London Committee of North Carolina bondholders, there are about 20,000 holders of repudiated bonds of Southern States. Abroad, aside from the large number of English holders, there are many German as well as other Continental holders. It was said yesterday, in fact, that the German Government through its Consular representative, is manifesting an interest in the present effort to make a settlement.

Under a law passed in this State some years ago the State authorities were authorized to accept gifts of such bonds, and bring suit for their settlement, but no such step has been taken by this State. It is understood that an action of this kind was suggested to Gov. Dix by representatives of the bondholders, but that he did not approve the suggestion.

WIN $7,400,000 BOND SUIT.

Province of Alberta Authorized to Receive Proceeds of Railway Issue.

EDMONTON, Alberta, Can., Nov. 8.—Justice Stuart has handed down his decision in the suit brought by the Province of Alberta against the Alberta & Great Waterways Railway Company to recover $7,400,000, the proceeds of the sale of the company's bonds, guaranteed by the province. The judgment declares the province has the right to collect the money.

Others interested in the case were the Canada West Construction Company, a subsidiary concern, organized to build the railway; the Royal Bank of Canada, in which was deposited $6,000,000; the Union Bank of Canada, which held $1,000,000, and the Merchants' Bank, which held the remainder. The two latter banks paid the money held by them into court when the legal action commenced. The Royal Bank refused to pay over the money, contending that they were protecting their clients.

The bonds of the Alberta & Great Waterways Railway Company were placed in London with a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. about two years ago. The bonds are listed on the London Stock Exchange. The act of the Alberta Legislature which led to the suit in which this decision was rendered was passed in December, 1910.

The Canadian banks mentioned in the decision were brought into the case by reason of their being depositaries for the proceeds of the bond issue. The representatives of one of the banks said yesterday that the case would be appealed until a final decision had been rendered by the Privy Council.

BOOTH & CO. PAID $1,067,150.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—William J. Chalmers, appointed receiver of A. Booth Co. in September, 1908, made his final report to the United States Circuit Court to-day showing his receipts and disbursements. Mr. Chalmers acted as receiver until May 24, 1909. His report shows that he paid a dividend of 21 per cent. to the creditors.

The total indebtedness of the concern amounted to $5,000,000. The assets were disposed of for $1,067,150, of which amount $1,051,150 went to the creditors and $16,000 to Mr. Chalmers and his counsel. Other expenses not shown in the report were paid from the $200,000 earned by the concern while he was receiver.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—News developments over the holiday were not encouraging on the whole to interests favoring higher prices, yet there was a marked depression following the opening with prices recovering to slight net gains. Seemingly the technical position of the market has been improved, with less apprehension relative to probable action of the Government in the reported investigation, while the reiteration of a bid for 5,000,000 bushels of cash wheat to Chicago bull interests was a stimulating factor, despite the rejection of the bid because of its basis.

Foreign news continues bearish, and declines in the domestic market are readily followed. Cables were disappointing, and largely accountable for the substantial fractional declines at the opening, while naturally the weakness in the American Northwestern markets, which were about ⅜c lower on Election Day, were an influence. A summary of crop conditions abroad was in the main favorable, although later private advices from Argentina told of an excess of moisture in some points and an underestimate of the frost damage in extreme sections earlier in the season. Withal a forecast as to the probable exportable surplus of that country was 128,000,000 bushels, which Broomhall claimed was likely to be a minimum amount based on present prospects.

Statistics were against values. The European visible increased nearly 4,500,000, and the world's visible for the week showed a gain of 12,000,000 against 6,000,000 bushels last week and 2,500,000 a year ago, totaling to 190,000,000 bushels, against 194,000,000 bushels last year and 136,000,000 bushels two years ago. There are 27,000,000 bushels more wheat in America this year than last, but 30,000,000 less in Europe, according to Bradstreet's figures. Movement of Spring wheat continues in large volume, and suspicion in many minds that the crop was possibly underestimated this season was fostered to some extent by advices to The Northwestern Miller from supposedly well informed quarters claiming that the North Dakota crop may approximate 80,000,000 bushels, against the Government indication of 64,000,000 bushels. Flour advices were somewhat less favorable, although an improvement in the export demand for Manitoba wheats was noted, with sales of 224,000 bushels since Monday night. There were some claims of lighter country offerings in the Southwest, due to lower prices, but support for the most part seemed to emanate among shorts, partly influenced by the strength of corn. The Government placed the average weight per bushel at 57.8, or about normal. Cash No. 2 red quoted at 96¾c, free on board; No. 2 hard, $1.03; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.13; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.10¼.

CORN.—Initial prices were practically unchanged, but a good demand immediately developed and continued during the session. Predictions of wet weather throughout practically the entire corn belt prompted a good deal of the short covering. A bullish analysis of the situation from Washington, talking "dollar corn," also had effect. Country advices were mixed, but on the whole indicated that offerings were freer, with some pressure in cash circles, although the demand for this new corn was fairly good, reflecting light stocks of the old crop. There were 5 loads of corn sold to foreigners over the holiday. The Government report issued at the close was construed as slightly bearish, due principally to a larger amount of corn in farmers' hands than expected, this being placed at 132,000,000 bushels. The visible is 1,750,000. Last year there were 123,000,000 bushels available on the first of November. The crop indications are practically unchanged at 2,776,000,000 bushels, against 3,121,000,000 last year; quality 80.6, against 87.2 in 1910.

Cash No. 2 quoted at 80c for old and 69½c for new, January-March shipment, free on board.

OATS.—Prices sympathized with the firmness in corn. Speculation was only in very limited volume. Bradstreet's decreased 266,000 bushels for the week, against an increase of 859,000 bushels last week and a decrease of 982,000 last year. The Government report made the average weight of oats 31.1 pounds to the bushel, the same as the ten-year average. Cash standards and No. 3 white quoted at 53c; No. 2 white, 52½c.

PROVISIONS.—A heavy undertone was in evidence during the entire session. Strength in coarse grain had no effect. Hog receipts are liberal, and recent support was not in evidence. Cash trade is only fair.

COTTONSEED OIL.

With a small decline in prices, sentiment was more bearish. A good demand from commission houses was readily filled and there appeared to be less concern whether this inquiry represented Western buying or that for refining account. A decline in lard values, together with a bearish ginning report, discouraged buying, although the latter feature had been anticipated. Foreign oils have recently been inclined to sag, with some intimation that further reselling may be witnessed in the local market in the event of a continued lowering of the basis abroad. Tenders for 1,000 barrels circulated apparently satisfying the immediate demand for oil. Crude showed little change and was quoted at 4.40 to 4.47. Future quotations follow:

COTTON.

A more irregular trend of cotton values was in evidence during yesterday's session. Opening levels showed advances of 5 to 7 points, due to better cables than anticipated over the holiday, while it was believed that shorts had placed buying orders in the market irrespective of the showing of the Census Bureau. Offerings were in larger volume, however, at the advance, with selling by spot concerns, part of which was credited to the South, while prominent bear operators were also disposed to be more aggressive. New low levels were threatened for a time, but pressure subsided materially at prices about 10 points under Monday's finals and a partial recovery ensued.

Ginning figures of 9,968,000 bales could not be construed as other than bearish, but the showing had been discounted, although in some instances proved a trifle under the total looked for. Statisticians bearishly inclined pointed out that the report showed ginning of 20,000 bales per diem in excess of that during this period in 1908, which was a large crop year, and that if such a ratio was continued during the balance of this seanson an outturn of over 15,000,000 bales was indicated. The report compared with 7,741,000 bales ginned to Oct. 17, 7,346,000 last year, and 8,192,000 bales in 1908, which represented 62.6 per cent. of the crop. The Texas traveler of Weld & Co. estimated the Texas crop at 4,000,000 to 4,250,000 bales, Oklahoma at 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 bales, and the total crop at 15,000,000 bales or over, all figures including linters.

Liverpool was reported favorably influenced by the British Board of Trade returns showing exports of yarns since the season of 27,000,000 pounds more than the previous year and cloth exports of 597,000,000 yards greater than 1910, although it was claimed that comparisons with last year represented figures just before the Lancashire boom and were therefore liable to some misconstruction. The Continent is reported a good buyer at Liverpool, and is also showing a fair inquiry intermittently in this country. On the whole, the tenor of Southern spot advices is not greatly changed, but it is evident that the holding tendency is not inspiring important new long buying.

Sentiment is bearish, as a rule, but in the meantime inquiry from spinners and shorts on the slight recessions prevents a material setback. A dispatch claiming that on the Texas ranch of C. P. Taft, President Taft's brother, there were 4,500 bales produced this season on 4,800 acres attracted attention due to the large yield per acre, while it was also stated that it was the intention to plant 6,000 acres next season.

COFFEE.

Coffee business was small, total sales being 21,000 bags. Prices were easier early, owing to weakness abroad, where Havre was 1¼ to 1¾ francs below the final of Monday and Hamburg showed a loss of ½ to ¾ pfennig. Rio was unchanged, while Santos declined 150 reis.

New Casualty Co. Still In Embryo.

Plans of the National Surety Company management for the formation of a casualty company, it was said by an official of the company yesterday, are still in the nebulous stage. The idea has been under discussion for more than a year, and the company has been sounding its agents to determine how fully they may be counted on to co-operate in the new field, and to what extent they might be expected to become stockholders.

Asked to Pay Another Man's Debt.

Charles E. Dickenson of 46 East Forty-first Street protested to Supreme Court Justice Seabury yesterday against the collection from him of a judgment, rendered seven years ago at Port Washington, L. I., against a Charles E. Dickenson, in favor of William Kirby, a furnace dealer. Dickenson said he had never been in business and had never bought any furnaces of Kirby. After satisfying himself that the case was one of mistaken identity Justice Seabury dismissed the motion for the attachment.

Active Stocks Recede Under Profit Taking, but Many Other Issues Show Gains.

BETTER STEEL TRADE NEWS

Railroads Are Ordering More Freely—Favorable Copper and Cotton Figures.

Had the Stock Exchange not had before it the mixed results of Tuesday's balloting the day's record of the market might yet have been much as it was yesterday. The movement of prices and the general course of trading bore out the impression created at the close of last week, and on Monday that a good deal of profit taking had been resorted to by those who had obtained an advantageous position at the outset of the upward movement, which began the week before last. The leading active issues upon which had been concentrated the bulk of the trading during the forward movement were the stocks which suffered most in the decline which took place yesterday, and elsewhere in the list there were a good many advances which showed that the forces working for improvement had not yet spent themselves despite the profit-taking pressure and the renewal of bearish operations which had been directed against the issues which are customarily the centre of trading activity.

United States Steel, Reading, and Union Pacific, particularly the first of these three, were heavily sold, and the losses in each of them amounted to 1½ points or more. Recollection of the sharpness with which these stocks advanced in the last ten days deprives of any special significance the reaction which occurred in them yesterday. It was hardly any special information which the day supplied regarding these securities or the financial and business situation as a whole which prompted these price recessions, for as a matter of fact there was little or nothing of an unfavorable tenor presented during the day. No direct influence in shaping Stock Exchange values yesterday can be traced to the outcome of Tuesday's election, whatever its ultimate effect may prove to be upon the fortunes of the political parties which will contest for success in next year's Presidential election. In other directions most of the day's advices contained some element of encouragement. Thus, the report showing a reduction in the stocks of copper, a cotton ginning report confirming the earlier estimates of a record yield this year, and the day's news regarding the iron trade were all favorable. So, too, as far as it went was the November Government crop report showing among other changes a slight increase in the indicated yield of corn.

The pivotal position of the steel trade enhances the interest of any signs of improvement there, and it is gratifying to note that trade opinion generally is shaping itself in conformity with the views lately expressed by some of the best informed trade authorities that conditions in the industry are in a fair way toward improvement. It is known that the October bookings of the United States Steel Corporation considerably exceeded the orders received in September, and such information as is so far available indicates that the bookings for the current month will be, at least, as satisfactory as those of October. The railroads, as usual at this season, are figuring on their rail and other requirements for the coming year, and there are some indications that the retrenchment policy which has been effective for the last two years on most of the country's railways is now bearing fruit for the steel trade in the shape of somewhat larger orders than would be placed at this time were it not that cumulative requirements have at last to be filled at least in part. Something of this hopeful situation in the steel industry is reflected in the usual weekly reviews of steel trade conditions issued by The Iron Age and The Iron Trade Review. The pig-iron output in October reached 67,811 tons a day compared with a daily average of 65,903 tons in September. The Iron Age notes, however, that the rate of production on Nov. 1 was 1,000 tons a day less than for the whole month of October.

Deductions drawn from yesterday's cotton ginning figures are necessarily inconclusive except to the extent that they afford further confirmation of the promise that this year's yield will exceed all previous cotton harvests. The crop has probably been ginned this year more rapidly than usual, but even taking the highest percentage of the crop ginned up to the first of November in any recent year the indicated production of the staple this season is in excess of 14,000,000 bales. The crop would amount to 16,000,000 bales if only the average proportion had been ginned so far, but all the known facts in the situation preclude any expectation that the crop will reach such proportions as that.

Southern Steel Merger Assured.

Joseph H. Hoadley, President of the Alabama Consolidation Coal and Iron Company, said yesterday that the objections of the minority preferred stockholders under the leadership of the Middendorf-Williams interests in Baltimore would not affect the merger with the Southern Iron and Steel Company. He said that 80 per cent. of the securities of his company had agreed to the consolidation and 70 per cent. of all the securities of the Southern Iron and Steel Company. The Consolidation Committee is expected to declare the merger operative at a meeting scheduled for Friday.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Consols Lower in London—Prices Firm in Paris and Berlin.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The general carry-over occupied the attention of dealers on the Stock Exchange to-day and trading was light. Consols declined again, the pending big capital issues inducing profit-taking. Home rails were generally better, diamond shares were in demand, and mining stocks were firm.

American securities were quiet, with prices a fraction over parity during the forenoon. The New York opening was unfavorable and values sagged during the late trading. The market closed easy.

Money, 1½@1¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 3½ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 3 7-16 per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 8.75; at Lisbon, 9.50.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Prices were firm on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 95f. 75c. for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f. 17c. for checks.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—Trading was quiet and prices were steady on the Boerse to-day.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 48 pfennigs for checks.

Money, 4 per cent.

Private discount rate, 4⅝ per cent.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Prices were gradually receding on the Consolidated Stock Exchange throughout the session. Floor sentiment was bearish, and there was large short selling for professional account. There was also heavy profit-taking by traders who had acquired lines of stock prior to Election Day. Much interest was expressed regarding the probable decision of the United States Circuit Court upon the Tobacco Trust reorganization plan, with considerable divergence of opinion as to the likelihood of the plan being approved by the court.

MELON CUTTING CONFIRMED.

Lackawanna Admits Intention of Paying 35 Per Cent. Extra.

W. H. Truesdale, President of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, confirmed yesterday the report in Tuesday's TIMES of an impending "melon cutting" for stockholders. The extra dividend of 35 per cent. in Lackawanna Company of New Jersey 4 per cent. guaranteed stock will be paid about Jan. 1 to stock of record Dec. 1. This was decided upon by the Directors at their regular meeting a few weeks ago, but an effort was made to keep the matter secret until the details of the distribution had been arranged.

It is expected that freight trains will be run over the new 38-mile cut-off, which is to shorten the distance to Buffalo by nearly twelve miles, before the holidays, and that the track will be ready for passenger trains by early Spring. The new line will be leased to the parent company for a guarantee of 4 per cent. dividends on its $11,000,000 of stock, practically all of which will be required for the 35 per cent. payment.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Mr. Ripley's Forebodings.

President Ripley of the Atchison still takes a discouraged view of the business man's situation in this country. In Chicago yesterday he said that "the shadow of the Sherman law hangs over everything. Nobody knows what it means, or can know until after his particular case is passed upon by the court, yet everybody knows the spirit if not the letter the law is violated daily all over the country and that it always will be, no matter what law is made." Mr. Ripley was also quoted as saying that he saw nothing in the Supreme Court decision on the safety appliance act that has any bearing on inter-State rates and as believing that so long as different States can take independent action they will continue to neutralize the acts of any National body. Mr. Ripley's view of the uncertainty of the Sherman law is not shared by a number of very eminent corporation lawyers, who have thought that the Supreme Court had given at least a working definition of it.

Cotton Oil's Dividend.

Somehow, Wall Street is always told in advance what the Directors of the American Cotton Oil Company are going to do about the dividend, which makes the traders skeptical as to the value of the information. A statement published yesterday as coming from a trustworthy source said that sentiment among the Directors is almost unanimously in favor of passing the semi-annual dividend on the common stock. The next payment of 2½ per cent. would be due Dec. 1 if declared, but it is said that the board will decide to-day to omit the payment on account of poor earnings.

Central to Buy Subsidiary Stocks.

In pursuance of the policy which it has followed lately the New York Central has obtained authority from the Public Service Commission to purchase the outstanding stock of the Carthage, Watertown & Sackett's Harbor Railroad at no more than $125 a share. This is one of the roads leased to the New York Central or to one of its subsidiaries, and whose stock was largely in the hands of individuals. The shares of several roads similarly related to the New York Central already have been acquired by the company, and this further acquisition will again reduce the outstanding stocks of the lines leased to the New York Central. This particular road was leased to the Utica & Black River Railroad in 1872. The lease was assigned to the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railway, and later was assumed by the New York Central itself.

Discussion of High Prices.

The legislative discussion in some of the Continental countries forced by the popular protests against the high cost of living has brought forth some curious explanations of the existing unquestionably high prices and some curious arguments for and against suggested ways of improving the present situation by lightening the burden which high costs impose upon the people. Thus one finds in the summaries of the discussion before the Reichstag a statement by one of the German Ministers that no good in the direction of lowering the cost of food would be attained by facilitating the importation of animals because an increase in the number of animals to be fed would simply lead to a further scarcity of feed products and thus further advance meat prices. To the further suggestion that this particular difficulty might be overcome by also facilitating the importation of feed products the retort was made that that course would be futile, for the reason that the ultimate consumer would not benefit by it. This would seem to lead again straight to the door of the middleman about whose part in increasing the cost of the necessaries of life so much is now being heard.

Restraint of Trade Abroad.

That Governmental activity is not as energetically directed against restraint of trade in the countries of Europe as is the case here is just now being illustrated in the establishment of an agreement among north of England and Scottish steel makers, who, according to advices received from the other side, have combined to shut out from the local markets served by these manufacturers the product of the Welsh and foreign mills, which sometimes compete with the north of England and Scottish steel makers, particularly in the sale of ship material. These manufacturers in pursuance of this effort have agreed, it appears, to grant a rebate of 5 shillings a ton on all steel bought in any one year from the associated manufacturers on the condition that no steel shall be taken from any outsider. The London Economist remarks that this arrangement seems to be in restraint of trade and is designed purely to obtain a monopoly which will be expressed in prices above the competitive level.

Value of Postal Savings Bonds.

The dispatches from Washington saying that Treasury officials were surprised at the relatively low price at which the first sale of postal savings bonds was made on this market and that they had expected that these bonds would hold close to par, left New York bond dealers at a loss to understand why the bonds had been expected to sell close to their face value. These postal savings bonds have not the artificial value attaching to the other Government issues, with the exception of the new Panama 3's, of being available for National Bank circulation, and they have to be treated, therefore, on an investment basis. A good deal of itnerest was taken in the suggestion from Washington that the trustees of the postal savings are likely to recommend to Congress action which will maintain the parity of these bonds in the market. The fact is that the bonds are selling nearly on a parity with the outstanding 3 per cent. Panama Canal bonds so far as the yield on the bonds is concerned. At 92⅛ the postal savings 2½ per cent. bonds yield just about 3 per cent. The recent Panama issue yield not much less than that rate.

Exchange Listing Fewer.

In the past few months listings on the Stock Exchange have grown steadily less and yesterday after the meeting of the Governing Committee only one listing was announced, that an addition to the Illinois Central refunding 4s. In aggregate of par value of stocks added to the list the year of the Steel organization 1901 still holds the record. In that year the par value of stocks listed was $1,646,567,240. The next best year was 1909, when the total stocks listed were $1,154,790,370. The record year in bonds was in 1905 with its aggregate of $1,054,837,100. In 1909 the total was $1,009,518,600.

Stock Exchange Listings.

At the meeting of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange yesterday $10,000,000 refunding mortgage 4 per cent. Illinois Central bonds, due 1955, were added to the list, making the total listed to date $32,740,000.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

BOSTON COPPERS REACT

Spirited Trading in the Philadelphia Traction Shares — Baltimore Dealings Quiet.

Fair degree of activity was shown in the Chicago market yesterday, but in most of the other out-of-town markets trading was relatively light. Price movements were irregular.

Chicago railway securities were the active feature in Chicago. All of the issues rose substantially. The series 2 certificates took the lead in activity, opening unchanged at 32¼, and rising above 34. The series 1 opened on an advance of 2 points at 97, and added a point during the day. Series 4 added a fraction. Among the bonds the Chicago railways issues also were a prominent feature. An advance of more than a point was made by American Can preferred, which reflected the strength of the stock in New York, and fractional gains were recorded in Diamond Match, Can common, and some others. Commonwealth Edison and Chicago Title and Trust sold slightly lower. The market as a whole was fairly active.

In Boston the copper stocks were under pressure. Lake and North Butte, which led in a rally a few days ago, had the largest losses yesterday. Telephone was strong. United States Steel was the most active stock in the Boston market.

The strength of the Philadelphia traction stocks supplied about the only interesting feature in that market. In the initial trading there were spirited advances in Philadelphia Rapid Transit trust certificates to 23¾, a gain of 75 cents, while Union Traction rose 50 cents to 51⅝.

The Baltimore market was quiet. The demand for stocks was moderate, but prices were firm. Seaboard Company first preferred was in active demand at the high price established last week.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

BUYING OF RAILS BEGINS.

Trade Journals Predict Good Railroad Contracts from Now On.

Buying of rails began in earnest in the past week, and steel trade journals predict active contracting by the railroads from now on. The Iron Age makes this summary of the rail situation:

> The Louisville & Nashville has placed 50,000 tons with the Ensley mill and the Burlington has ordered 20,000 tons of open hearth rails from Gary. The Norfolk & Western order, amounting to 25,000 tons, has been distributed among Pennsylvania and seaboard mills. It is reported that the Great Northern will buy 40,000 tons, and as heretofore the order is expected to go to the Buffalo mill. The New York Central is figuring on its requirements, while the Pennsylvania is negotiating with the mills for a tonnage in excess of its contracts for this year. In the South a number of roads are about to buy, including the Georgia Central and the San Antonio & Aransas Pass.

Although the active capacity for pig iron of the furnaces in blast at the end of October was 66,818 tons a day, against 66,468 tons a day at the end of September, The Iron Age reports that there was "a slowing down in the latter part of October in the rate of increase in pig iron production—an increase that has been underway since July." The October output was 2,102,147 tons, or 67,811 tons a day, against 65,903 tons a day in September.

The Iron Trade Review says:

> Finished material quotations, notably steel bars, structural shapes, and plates no longer are yielding readily to pressure of competition among the mills for tonnage. This is one of the most encouraging developments since the advent of the present declining market, and indicates that manufacturers are at least making a determined stand against lower prices which will force them over the cost line. The general volume of business is not displaying any market increase, but the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation for October will show some increase over September. The railroads have clearly launched into a rail buying movement, covering their requirements for 1912 delivery, and in the case of some of the Southern railroads for shipment during the Winter.

BREAKS GINNING RECORD.

More Cotton Ready on Nov. 1 Than In Any Other Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—With a total of 9,968,172 bales of cotton of the growth of 1911 ginned prior to Nov. 1, as announced to-day by the Census Bureau, the promised record-breaking cotton crop of this season is fast being made ready for the manufacturer. At no time in the history of the American cotton industry has so great a crop been ginned to this time of the year.

The amount ginned to Nov. 1 exceeds by 1,777,000 bales that ginned in 1908, the previous record. It also is greater than the ginning to Nov. 14 of any year, being about 200,000 bales more than ginned to that date in 1904, the record year. This would indicate that the crop was at least two weeks earlier in maturing and reaching the gins than in previous years.

Calculations of the year's total crop, based on the ginning reports, would probably be more accurate if figured on the Nov. 14 reports of other years. In previous record years about 70 per cent. of the total crop has been ginned to that date, and a rough estimate of this year's crop might be placed at a minimum of 14,000,000 bales. Commercial experts' estimates, however, range up to more than 15,000,000 bales.

BUSINESS NOT BAD—HILL.

Great Northern Chairman Says There Is a Little Hesitation Yet.

James J. Hill, Chairman of the Great Northern Railway, is in the city for ten days to attend several meetings and incidentally to visit the land show at Madison Square Garden. This is his first trip East since the Steel Corporation announced its intention to cancel its lease of the great Northern Iron Ore properties in 1913.

Mr. Hill said he was not discouraged over the business outlook, and that the state of trade was not bad in view of the changes through which the country is passing. "We are still in the period of uncertainty where men hesitate to undertake new enterprises," he said. "But business is not bad."

The great Northern Chairman, who negotiated the famous Missable lease with Judge Gary, was not inclined to prophesy the outcome of the Steel Corporation's desire to be freed of the contract. "There are more than three years to come before the lease can be terminated," he said. "Even if nothing happens in the meantime the ore will be there to sell to some one else. You know the United States Steel Company only furnishes 42 per cent. of the country's steel output. Producers of the other 58 per cent. use ore, too."

LESS COPPER METAL.

Reduction of 5,897,215 Pounds in October Surprises Trade.

Copper stocks as reported by the Producers' Association yesterday showed a reduction of 5,897,215 pounds in October, although the trade had generally expected an increase. This decrease was made in the face of a gain in production amounting to 2,666,492 pounds. The gain was chiefly due to the large increase in exports, which, though amounting to 9,000,000 pounds more than in September, were the lowest of any other month since April.

Domestic deliveries also showed a gratifying increase, rising from 57,311,584 pounds to 64,068,307 pounds, the largest deliveries for domestic consumption since June. The actual stocks were on Nov. 1, 134,997,642 pounds, and production in October was 118,255,442 pounds. Exports were 60,084,349 pounds.

MEXICAN LINE GETS A LOAN.

The National Railways of Mexico have obtained a one-year loan of $13,000,000 from Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., Speyer & Co., and Hallgarten & Co. It will date from Nov. 15, and no short term notes will be issued in connection with the advance.

D. P. Bennett, Vice President of the National Railways, says that $5,000,000 of the proceeds will be used to pay off a one-year loan in London, maturing Dec. 1, and the balance devoted to additions and betterments.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Lyric Hotel Property, Broadway and Forty-third Street, Purchased by Michael Dowling—Big Apartment to Replace East Eighty-third Street Dwellings—Suburban Sales.

Michael Dowling has just made one of the most important purchases of property in Times Square that has occurred in a long time. He has bought the four-story building known as the Lyric Hotel on the southwest corner of Broadway and Forty-third Street at a price said to be between $375,000 and $400,000. The property has been owned by Langdon Greenwood and other family heirs for a long time.

Mr. Dowling has conducted the Lyric Hotel for a number of years, and he has held the property under a lease which has over a dozen years to run from the Greenwood estate. The plot is a small one, the immediate corner having a frontage of 20.5 feet on Broadway and 60 feet deep, while the adjoining parcel at 202 West Forty-third Street fronts 20 feet on the street and is 60.5 feet deep. Mr. Dowling's cafe and hotel covers the entire plot, the street frontage being 80 feet, while the 60-foot extension, which abuts the two adjoining Broadway parcels in the rear, virtually makes this small corner of peculiar strategic value in the assembling of a large plot for any elaborate improvement in the future.

Mr. Dowling's entire plot consists of 2,440 square feet, and figuring on $375,000, as the purchase price, the rate per square foot is $154, an indication of the advancing values of Times Square property.

The corner parcel is konwn as 1,491 Broadway. The two small parcels on Broadway adjoining are under a long lease to a restaurant, each plot being held by different owners. Two other 20-foot parcels but 80 feet deep adjoin these, and the lower half of the block is occupied by Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre. The Times Building covers the opposite block. The property sold, although on the line of Seventh Avenue, has Broadway numbers.

The assessed valuation of the Dowling corner is $285,000. Mr. Greenwood acquired the small street parcel in 1902 for about $70,000. The plot at 204 West Forty-third Street is owned by Tax Commissioner Daniel S. McElroy, and next to that is the Times Square Hotel, opposite which the new Times Annex is going up.

Mr. Dowling has no immediate plans for altering the character of the building now on the corner. He has bought the property because he considers it an excellent investment at the price. Mr. Greenwood was represented in the negotiations by Alexander & Green as attorneys.

Big Apartment to Replace Dwellings.

The Frontenac Realty Company has purchased from Ellen S. Steese and Frances S. Clarke the four three-story dwellings, 122-128 East Eighty-second Street, on plot 75 by 102.2, between Park and Lexington Avenues.

The buyers will break ground immediately for a nine-story elevator apartment from plans by Schwartz & Gross. William A. White & Sons in conjunction with David H. Hyman negotiated the sale.

The property is opposite the famous Richardson "spite house," which stands at the northwest corner of Lexington Avenue and Eighty-second Street. Both blocks on Park Avenue, between Eighty-second and Eighty-third Streets, were sold this year to investors who are preparing to erect twelve-story tenement houses.

Chapin Residence for Business.

Mrs. P. A. Chapin has leased for a long term of years, through Pease & Elliman, her residence at 10 East Forty-ninth Street. The lessee is H. Burlingham of Newport, R. I., who will alter the building for the sale of antiques.

Reported Deal on Bleecker Street.

The two four-story buildings, 115 and 117 Bleecker Street, are reported to have been sold to an investor by Maxwell E. Butler and others. The structures, which cover a plot 50 by 100 feet, adjoin the northeast corner of Wooster Street.

Quick Resale of Apartments.

A quick resale of upper west side apartments was reported yesterday by Robert Gordon, who purchased last week from Betty M. Hilborn, 212 and 214 West 108th Street, two five-story apartment houses on a plot 50 by 100.11.

J. J. Lordi has sold through Pepe & Brother, 199 and 201 Prince Street, a six-story new law tenement on a plot 50 by 100.

Uptown Apartment in Trade.

The Smithtown Improvement Company has purchased from John F. H. Demarest, 3,750 Third Avenue, a five-story new law house, on plot 40 by 100, giving in part payment 233 Water Street, a five-story loft building, on lot 16.8 by 72.11, between Beekman Street and Peck Slip, J. A. Clark and B. W. Webel negotiating the trade.

Brooklyn.

E. Sharum has sold to a client 1,269 Seventy-eighth Street, Brooklyn, a two-family frame house on a plot 40 by 100. Lots at Eastport, L. I., were taken as part payment.

Henry Pierson & Co. have sold 190 St. John's Place, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, a three-story and basement private brownstone house for Gustav A. Girard to Jane Braniff, for occupancy. Also sold 747 President Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, a three-story red stone dwelling, to Mrs. Clare Dillon.

Suburban.

Edward P. Hamilton & Co. have sold to Mrs. Robert F. Ballantine a ten-acre building site, being part of the Henry F. Shoemaker property at Convent Station, near Morristown, N. J.

G. X. Mathews has sold to Katherine Schreier of Cornelia Street, Brooklyn, a parcel having a frontage of 54 feet on the southeast side of Cornelia Street, Ridgewood, L. I., subject to a mortgage of $18,000.

The Westbury Manor Company has sold at Westbury, L. I., a plot 66 by 131 feet, to Edmund Conners, Highway Commissioner, who is erecting a dwelling thereon for occupancy. Also sold sixteen lots on Henry Street and Manor Avenue, to Rudolph Roehwick for investment.

$1,000,000 Guaranty Trust Building.

Plans for the new home of the Guaranty Trust Company on the southeast corner of Broadway and Liberty Street have been filed by the architects, York & Sawyer. The structure will cost, according to the estimates, $1,000,000. It will be an attractive eight-story building, with a granite façade occupying a plot of about 90 feet on Broadway and 134.8 feet on Liberty Street. The corner was formerly the site of the old Mutual Life Insurance Building, which has just been torn down. About $2,000,000 was paid for the property.

Harlem Theatre Plans Filed.

Plans for the new Harlem theatre to be built on the north side of 115th Street, 153.9 feet east of St. Nicholas Avenue, for J. L. Goldie and A. Cohen, have been filed. The theatre and building will consist of four stories, 113 by 88.11, with an extension 32 by 100.11. It will seat 1,546 persons. The architect, W. H. McElfatrick, places the cost at $125,000.

Artificial Silk Beltings Under Cotton Schedule—Other Decisions.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers that artificial silk beltings are not dutiable at 50 per cent. under the silk schedule. The goods which were imported by A. Steinhardt & Brother were in part of silk and cotton. The Collector returned the merchandise as dutiable under the silk paragraph. Judge Howell in his decision for the board holds that the goods are dutiable by similitude to "cotton beltings" at the rate of 45 per cent. on the value.

Graf Brothers failed in their protest to make the proper claim regarding the classification of hair rolls used by women. The Collector of Customs classified the rolls as dutiable as manufactures of silk with a tax at the rate of 60 per cent. The board holds that the merchandise is dutiable properly at the rate of 50 per cent. as "cotton wearing apparel." The importers, however, failed to make the correct claim, the protest being overruled although the Collector's classification is held to be erroneous.

In sustaining claims filed by A. Strauss & Co., H. Buss & Co., and others, the board decided that toy necklaces and brooches are not "jewelry" within the meaning of the Tariff act. Duty at the rate of 60 per cent. is reversed, and the articles accorded entry at 35 per cent. as "toys."

BIGGEST ELEPHANT, 150 YEARS OLD, DEAD

MOURNED BY HER COMRADES

Their Trumpetings Make the Hippodrome Resound with Woe—Removal of Body Will Be a Problem.

The largest elephant in captivity is dead. Carrie, who beside being noted as being taller than the late lamented Jumbo was the oldest actress in the world, died yesterday morning in her quarters at the Hippodrome.

Carrie was over 150 years old. The keepers reported to Dr. Martin J. Potter, the Hippodrome veterinary, that Carrie was "off her feed" several days ago. An examination showed that the big animal was suffering from pneumonia, and she was at once put under treatment. She failed to respond, and though she continued to take an interest in life and wanted to start off with her companions when the call to the stage came, she grew worse, and at 1 o'clock yesterday morning she lay down and died.

The trio of elephants felt that something had happened and their trumpeting awoke the other animals. All through the night their trumpeting continued. Jennie, who was near the carcass, would put out her trunk as though groping for the other. Then she would throw her trunk in the air and voice her sorrow. Lena and Roxie would follow suit, and they were joined by the braying of the burros across the aisle. Beyond them the camels began to move uneasily about in their inclosure.

When Lena, who was Carrie's understudy, led the procession across the stage in the Durbar scene at the matinée yesterday afternoon she half turned in making her entry, but at a touch from her master started forward to the sound of the music. The hundreds of children who were in the house saw nothing strange in the action of the animal, but the men who have to do with the big animal knew she was not "following her lines." She was waiting for Carrie.

In the language of the stage manager, Carrie was a "good showman." She had been in the show business even before the days of "The Black Crook"—and that's a long time ago. She is said to have been the first elephant ever brought to this country. Her first public appearance here, so far as is known, was with the old John Robinson circus, half a century ago. The herd to which she belonged is owned by W. W. Powers, the animal trainer.

J. B. Fitzpatrick, the Hippodrome manager, was one of Carrie's friends. He said the belief of the men who have to do with the many animals used in "Around the World" that Carrie not only took an interest in her part on the stage but brought to bear on her work more than animal intelligence was justified by her actions. As a ground work she possessed a careful spirit and a good disposition combined with a tendency to rush into her part when once she had rehearsed.

Carrie weighed six tons. She was 10 feet 5 inches in height. She consumed 400 pounds of hay and grain mash each day. Her skeleton is to be placed in the Museum of Natural History. Dr. Potter yesterday afternoon embalmed the elephant's body. A rope harness was put about Jennie and one end of the rope about the dead elephant, which was then drawn out of the stall. This done, the other elephants were herded down at the other end of the long stable. They became uneasy and every once in a while one would trumpet.

The question which the Hippodrome authorities will have to answer to-day is how they are going to get the immense body of the elephane out of the building. It is easy to march a live elephant out of a far corner of the building to the street, but it is quite another matter to take out six tons of dead elephant.

FORGERY ARRESTS ROUSE MANY BANKS

Police Receive Inquiries from Twenty States About Carlesi, Schutzberger and Weiss.

OFFICE BOY CASHED CHECKS

Precautions of Alleged Forgers Were Minute—List of Their Aliases Is Announced.

Inquiries poured into Police Headquarters yesterday from defrauded banks in some twenty States concerning the threee alleged check forgers who, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty says, have defrauded banks throughout the country in the last six years of more than $500,000. Meanwhile Charles Carlesi, the alleged chief of the gang, and William J. Schutzberger and Isidore Weiss, who, the police say, were the mediums through whom the bogus checks were cashed, were remanded yesterday without bail to the Police Headquarters pen till Friday by Magistrate Herrman in the Tombs Court.

Already, according to the police, preparations have been made by the police of Boston and New Haven to hold the prisoners for check forgeries there, in case the present case against them here should fail. Last evening, too, there was received at Headquarters a warrant from Yonkers for the arrest of Weiss. It is charged he committed felony there under the name of Max Friedman on Dec. 22, 1906.

The police have not yet located the Italian artist who with his skilled brush painted the wonderful fac simile checks that passed muster and were readily certified by scores of bank cashiers. Such checks, with an aggregate forged face value of $217,000 were produced by the police from a small strong box when the three prisoners were brought into court yesterday. The specific charge of forgery on which the men were held was that they obtained $9,200 from the Hanover National Bank on May 24, 1909, on a check signed in the name of Eugene Meyer & Co. and made payable to one A. Zeller, the pretended proprietor of a necktie factory at 506 Broome Street.

Zeller, the police say, is Schutzberger. He was picked out of a line of twelve men, according to the police, at Headquarters yesterday morning by an eighteen-year-old office boy, Louis Levine, who worked in Zeller's place in May, 1909. The same boy identified Carlesi as the man who had given Zeller the check. Zeller introduced Carlesi to the boy, according to Levine, as "the boss."

Weiss and Schutzberger posed as tradesmen and manufacturers in order to cash the checks supplied them by Carlesi. In the hope that additional victims may be led to appear against them, Commissioner Dougherty last evening made public the list of aliases, so far as yet ascertained by the police, as having been used by the pair in their multifarious transactions. Both, he added, have confessed to the use of many of the names, and their handwriting proves their statements. These names are J. Gordon, H. Miller, A. Zeller, S. Berman, S. Ullman, Sam Stern, S. Frank, S. Cohen, L. Phillips, Charles Herbert, M. Weinstein, Jacob Gold, M. Rowland, G. Weinberg, M. Stein, and Max Kleinman.

The police also told of what seems to have been the first attempt of the pair at cashing illegitimate checks. In 1905, they said, Schutzberger, then known as an actor under the name of "Billy McGee," lived with his father, who had a saloon at 116 Columbia Street. In that year his mother died, and the father returned to Russia. On his return to this country, the police say, he announced to his friends and relatives that his son was dead. Instead of dying respectably, however, the police say, Schutzberger had meanwhile set up a cigar store with Weiss at 112 Springfield Avenue, Newark.

The two started a little account with the Union National of Newark. By accident the bookkeeper credited their account with $975 too much. The pair promptly cashed it, according to the police, and disappeared. Thereafter, the detectives have heard from the dead man and his partner only under the long list of aliases in connection with the many check forgeries.

In May, 1907, for example, they each opened new bank accounts—Schutzberger under the name of "M. Weinberg" in the Yorkville Bank, and Weiss under the name of "S. Berman" in the Bronx Branch of the Twenty-third Ward Bank. On July 9 they deposited in the respective banks two checks alleged to have been forged in the name of Fiss, Doerr & Carroll, one for $3,200 and the other for $3,800. Both checks were presented to the Mercantile National Bank and certified there on that day, before being deposited.

On the following day, according to the police, "Berman" drew most of his account in cash from the Twenty-third Ward Bank, and gave a check for the balance to "Weinberg," who deposited it in the Yorkville Bank. That very same day, the police say, the pair departed to Albany, and opened an account in the Albany Trust Company with a check on the Yorkville Bank for the entire balance of "Weinberg," with the exception of a few hundred dollars. Then they drew out their account in cash from the Albany bank, and several hundreds of miles away from the scene of the original forgeries. No loss, however, fell on the Twenty-third Ward, the Yorkville, or the Albany Banks, as the Mercantile was obliged to make good the checks it had accepted.

On Nov. 27, 1908, according to the police, Weiss started a pretended leather goods store at 3 East Third Street, Mount Vernon, and opened an account with the Mount Vernon National Bank under the name of "M. Stein" was about $1,000 in cash. A few days later "Stein" deposited there and cashed a check on the Essex County Bank of Newark for $3,100.29, which, the police say, bore the forged signature of F. T. Faery, Treasurer for the Continuous Rail Joint Company of America.

Under the name of J. Gordon, the police say, Schutzberger in December, 1908, opened a gentlemen's furnishing store at 434 Main Street, Paterson, N. J. On Dec. 16, 1908, he presented a check forged in the name of Frederick Ludwig & Co. for $2,600.98 at the Bank of the Metropolis, and had it certified. Then he deposited it in the Second National Bank of Paterson. A few days later he drew out the amount in cash and disappeared.

The alleged forgers themselves, according to the police, seldom appeared in person at the banks that cashed their forged checks, and this will make it somewhat harder to have them identified. Instead it was their custom to hire a $6-a-week office boy and introduce him at the bank, as the lad would carry their deposits or checks to the bank. Then, when the boy went to the bank to have a forged check certified, there was always one of the trio—Carlesi, Schutzberger, or Weiss—unobtrusively on hand to watch him. If the cashier asked questions or seemed suspicious, this watcher, the police believe, would slip out and telephone to the other two to clear out, but this was seldom necessary, as the skillfully forged checks eluded the vigilance of every cashier. So careful, however, were the men not to be at any time too near the checks that finally drew their cash from the banks that, according to the police, they would often have left for a distant city before they were even filled out, leaving a blank check with the office boy for him to make out, payable to bearer, they used to telephone him from their place of safety the amount to be drawn. But when the boy reached the bank the third watcher was invariably on hand to shadow him.

Weiss, the police say, has confessed to the part he had played in the cashing of the checks. He is said to have admitted that he got $2,000 for his share in the Hanover Bank swindle, the bulk of which, according to the police, went to Carlesi.

Carlesi himself, according to Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, has served a prison sentence at Rochester on a charge of counterfeiting. His saloon was formerly a hang-out for Black Hand criminals like Constabile the Fox, Rizzio, and Micelli, who have recently been put away for many Winters in Sing Sing.

In searching Weiss's home at 220 East Seventy-eighth Street the police found nearly a dozen check books, bank books, and blank checks, together with a hand-painted postal card, which, they say, is the work of the missing check painter.

Fowler's Biplane Still Stuck in Sand.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 8.—Robert Fowler failed again to-day in his efforts to resume his transcontinental aeroplane flight. Reports from Mastodon, New Mexico, stated that his biplane was still imbedded in the sand where he landed Sunday. Fowler will renew his effort to dislodge his machine to-morrow.

LYNAM TELLS OF STOCK POOL

Michael J. Lynam, William J. Cummins's handy man, was again the chief witness yesterday at the latter's trial for the larceny of $140,000. Lynam was questioned at length about the stock pool, which, he says, was formed with the knowledge of Bradley Martin, Jr., the principal witness for the prosecution, through the use of the $140,000 by Cummins.

He testified that this stock pool contained at one time 2,590 shares of Carnegie Trust stock, 190 shares of Twelfth Ward Bank stock, and 244 shares of Nineteenth Ward Bank stock. He admitted that most of the stock was afterward withdrawn and used as collateral for new loans. One of these was on his own note, and 800 shares of Carnegie stock were put up as collateral. On Dec. 18, 1910, three weeks before the Carnegie Trust Company was closed, all that was in the pool was 105 shares of Carnegie Trust stock, all the rest having been used as collateral for new loans.

George H. Bartholomew, who was trust officer of the Van Norden Trust Company, and William M. Robinson, who was cashier of the Nineteenth Ward Bank, were called to controvert the testimony of Bradley Martin, Jr., who was Vice President of the Van Norden Company and President of the Nineteenth Ward Bank.

Mr. Martin said that the money advanced by the two banks on notes of members of the Cummins group was to be held in trust until used to take up loans of the Van Nordens. Mr. Bartholomew said he had never heard of the alleged trust agreement, and Mr. Robinson testified that the statements of his bank disclosed the existence of no trust fund to secure the notes held by his bank.

WOMEN HAVE 'BUDGET,' TOO.

Expert Tells Them How to Manage Their Household Expenditures.

Dr. Benjamin R. Andrews talked about "The Budget" to a class of women in the meeting house of the Society for Ethical Culture yesterday afternoon. It was the private and particular budget with which every woman runs her household that was under discussion, and he urged the women to look well to the ways of it. He quoted as the most satisfactory, Mrs. Ellen H. Richards's distribution of the household income: One-fourth for food, a fifth for rent, 15 per cent. each for food and operating expenses of the household and clothing, and one-fourth for the higher needs, amusement, culture, education, and travel.

He admitted that in New York it was usually necessary to allow more than one-fifth of the income for rent.

GANS PLANS OCEAN AIR TRIP.

German Here to Ask the President for Warships' Assistance.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie from Bremen was Dr. Paul F. Gans, President of the Transatlantic Flight Exposition, who has come to ask President Taft for warships to aid in forming an ocean line from Teneriffe to Barbados, over which the company's dirigible balloon Suchard will fly next March.

"I shall command the Suchard myself," Dr. Gans yesterday told a TIMES reporter, "and we shall endeavor to take the same route as that followed by Columbus. I am confident that our dirigible will make the flight as successfully and safely as I came over here in the Kronprinzessin Cecilie.

"The Kaiser and his brother, Prince Henry, whose wife christened the Suchard, have taken an enthusiastic interest in the enterprise and, if possible, German warships will accompany the airship in its flights. King Alfonso of Spain has also taken a deep interest in the project. He granted us the right to assemble our ship at Teneriffe and make our start there, and has ordered a cruiser to patrol the course of our start and possibly to accompany us all the way across the ocean."

The Suchard is 250 feet long and 51 feet beam. The bag will contain 423,460 cubic feet of hydrogen.

GALE DELAYED THE CECILIE.

Only Two Out of 450 Cabin Passengers Were Present at One Meal.

The North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie arrived yesterday from Bremen sixteen hours late because of the heavy weather she encountered after leaving Cherbourg.

HOTEL ASTOR SUICIDE NOT SHOLTO DOUGLAS

SEEN IN SEATTLE MONDAY

Was in the British Consulate There—One Man Identifies "Maurice Stuart" as the Duke of Sutherland's Brother.

Coroner Israel Feinberg spent most of yesterday investigating a report that the world-wandering Englishman who registered at the Hotel Astor as Maurice Stuart and killed himself there on Monday was Lord Sholto Douglas, brother of the present Marquis of Queensberry.

Mrs. May Noble, an actress, of 249 West Thirty-eighth Street, after looking at the body in the Eighth Avenue undertaking shop where it is held for identification, said she was sure it was that of Lord Sholto Douglas. Mrs. Noble said she had known Lord Douglas as far back as fifteen years ago and had seen him as recently as five years ago.

Coroner Feinberg was strongly inclined to credit Mrs. Noble's identification. But Dr. Wolfred Nelson, the house physician of the Astor House, who has known Lord Sholto Douglas for several years past, went to the undertaking establishment late last night and declared positively that the dead man was not Lord Sholto.

The Marquis of Queensberry, who is in Chicago, said that his brother was out West and THE TIMES heard by telegraph from Seattle that Lord Sholto Douglas was in the British Consulate there on Monday, the day "Maurice Stuart" killed himself.

Ever since the tall, thin, sharp-featured Englishman shot himself through the heart on Monday afternoon his body has been lying in the basement vault of A. Eichelberg's undertaking establishment, at 934 Eighth Avenue, awaiting identification. After Mrs. Noble had seen the body she said:

"I first met Lord Sholto Douglas in 1896. I was playing with my husband, Leonard J. Grover, in vaudeville at the Alcazar Theatre, San Francisco. Lord Douglas had married an actress whose maiden name I don't recall, a year previous, and the two were appearing at the Alcazar Theatre. He met her somewhere in Oklahoma, and she was billed in vaudeville as Lady Sholto Douglas. Then a manager made an offer to Lord Douglas to appear on the stage with his wife, and they did so. His wife did pretty well all the work of their act, but his name was the attraction. He just escorted his wife on the stage whenever she appeared.

"I did not come into contact with his wife again, but when my husband and I were appearing in Victoria, B. C., a year or so afterwards, Lord Douglas sent up his card to my husband in our dressing room. I knew my husband went downstairs to see him at that time, but I am not sure whether I saw him on that occasion or not.

"When I went to the undertaking establishment I told the proprietor that I had come to view the body, and he asked me what the man I knew looked like. I told him he was a tall, slender man, with a light complexion and a somewhat prominent nose and ears. He thought that it might be the man, and I looked at the body. I have no doubt that it is Lord Sholto Douglas. His hair is streaked with gray a little now. I saw him once in Los Angeles, Cal., about five years ago, he having at that time left his wife and child in England and having returned to this country alone."

Clifford Mills, a chorus man playing at the Herald Square Theatre, looked at the body last night and said that while he could not be absolutely sure he was practically certain that the dead man was Lord Sholto Douglas, whom he had met three years ago when he, Mills, had a shack on the Crow's Nest Pass at Creston, B. C. At that time Lord Douglas was introduced to him at dusk, but subsequently he saw Lord Sholto Douglas three or four times.

"It all comes back to me," he exclaimed as he looked at the body. "It certainly looks like him."

An excellent identification mark in the form of a Chinese dragon some five inches long tattooed on the dead man's left forearm was found last night.

Charles Ulrich of 575 West 159th Street also called at the undertaking establishment yesterday, and identified the body as that of a Maurice Stuart, who had played the part of a Scotland Yard detective in the Dewey Theatre in Oakland, Cal., five years ago.

James Dynan, a chauffeur, on the other hand, told Assistant Manager Palmer of the Hotel Astor yesterday that he believed that the dead man was a brother of the present Duke of Sutherland.

"I was brought up on the Earl's estate in England," said Dynan. "I remember the Earl's brother and the newspaper descriptions of the suicide resemble him. My mother received a letter from him after she came to this country."

Dynan, to prove his statement, produced a letter signed by a Roland Stuart, and dated from England. According to Manager Palmer, the handwriting of the letter and the handwriting of the suicide on the hotel register are almost exactly alike.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—The Marquis of Queensberry emphatically denied to-day that the man who committed suicide at the Hotel Astor, New York, after registering as Maurice Stuart, is his brother, Lord Sholto Douglas. He says Lord Sholto is in the Far West, and that he received a letter from him two days ago in which the writer declared he was well.

A telegram addressed to the Marquis of Queensbery and signed "Sholto Douglas" was received here on Oct. 23. It was sent from Seattle.

The Marquis refused to give the address of Lord Douglas, saying he was now engaged in some mine location work in the Far Northwest and was doing well. His refusal was based, he said, upon his disinclination to bring his brother into public attention again.

SEATTLE, Nov. 8.—British Vice Consul Bernard Pelly said to-night that Lord Sholto-Douglas was in his office on business last Monday, the day the man registering under the name of Maurice Stuart committed suicide at the Hotel Astor, New York.

E. J. FRASER-CAMPBELL DIES.

Struck by an Automobile, He Never Regained Consciousness.

Evan J. Fraser-Campbell of Dunmore, Argyllshire, Scotland, the American agent of the South African Banking Corporation, died yesterday at the Presbyterian Hospital as a result of injuries received when he was knocked down by an automobile in Central Park on Election Day. Mr. Fraser-Campbell was crossing the Eighty-sixth Street roadway, near the Park entrance, and was walking northward. When he reached the north curb of the roadway he apparently had an impulse to turn back and retrace his footsteps. He stepped in front of an automobile which was passing through the entrance, and was thrown to the pavement. His skull was fractured and he died without recovering consciousness.

Mr. Fraser-Campbell was born in Scotland. He was the son of William Fraser and Helen Campbell. He studied at Rugby and then spent several years in the office of a Liverpool commercial house, and was later connected with a business firm in Japan. He came to this country in 1879 and assumed the American agency of the South African Banking Corporation and also the agency of the William Forbes Woolen Company of Tien-Tsin, China. He married Miss Edna Arnold, the daughter of B. G. Arnold of this city. He was formerly a member of the Union and Downtown Clubs. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Seamen's Aid Society and attended the University Place Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Fraser-Campbell is survived by Mrs. Fraser-Campbell and three sons, Evan, Arnold and William B. Fraser-Campbell. He was 64 years old.
